

GIRL SKIER IS GUY

VIENNA (UPI) — Austria's former world women's downhill skiing champion, Erika Schinegger, has announced she will resume her racing career next winter — this time as a man.

Schinegger, 19, told a press conference she has been transformed successfully into a male after four difficult operations and now is recognized officially as a man.

Schinegger's new passport and personal documents identify the sports celebrity as Erik Schinegger.

The skier, winner of the 1966 world women's downhill title at Portillo, Chile, had to withdraw from last winter's Olympics because of difficulty in proving total femininity.

ERIKA SCHINEGGER
Now She's Erik

ERIK WILL resume not only a skiing career but will also try a hand at bicycle racing, the champion said.

"I am extremely happy it's all over," Erik told the press. "The operations were extremely difficult. For almost seven months I had to stay in the hospital and I suffered quite a lot, physically and mentally. But now I feel like a normal human being at last."

Erik expressed hope that the World Ski Federation Congress currently meeting in Innsbruck, Austria, will not take away the world title and gold medal that Erik won two winters ago as Erika.

Erik spoke of plans to gain still another world title or even an Olympic medal.

A spokesman for the Austrian Ski Federation said Erik had not yet re-applied for membership, "but when such an application arrives, we certainly will admit Erik."

Half-Million Jam L.B. to View Ships

More than half a million sightseers jammed Long Beach Harbor Saturday to peer at a maritime double-header — the massive Queen Mary and the imposing battleship New Jersey.

The turnout backed up traffic for miles in all directions as the visitors inched their way to Pier E for a peek at the two ocean monsters.

"It was the worst traffic jam I've ever seen in my life," said Capt. Albert LaRue.

a veteran Long Beach traffic officer in charge of the command post on Pier E.

There were actually four sources of traffic complication in Long Beach Saturday. Earlier in the day, the graduating class at California State College, Long Beach, had received diplomas at the Long Beach Arena. Thousands of cars funneled into the Arena area, creating a massive jam of autos.

The Gerald Desmond Bridge, experiencing its first weekend of traffic, was also a lure for some sightseers. Many combined the drive over the bridge with a glance at the two marine masterpieces and at one point officers said the traffic on the structure was moving "an inch at a time."

But it was down at ground level that the going was roughest. The Terminal Island Freeway, the Vincent Thomas Bridge approach, the Ocean Avenue-Seaside Avenue approach and the access route from the Long Beach Freeway were all hopelessly snarled. Officers methodically worked the maze clear only to have it pile up again. Two trucks worked throughout the day, removing stalled cars.

At Pier E, the snarl was worse. Department of Defense parking lots were hurriedly opened and other available park

RFK'S SEAT Lindsay Rocky's Pick for Senate

New York Times Service

TULSA — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York will formally offer the Senate seat left vacant by the assassination of Robert F. Kennedy to New York's Mayor Lindsay within a few days, Rockefeller sources reported here today.

Lindsay, reportedly, has not made up his mind whether to accept. Some of his advisers favor his taking the appointment and believe he will. Others are not so sure.

In Flint, Mich., where he addressed a Republican County Convention, Lindsay said of the reports: "I have no comment. I have no offer."

The Senate appointment was discussed privately by the governor and members of his political strategy board during the two-day meeting of the Republican Governors Association that closed here today.

Rockefeller aides are convinced that the designation of Mayor Lindsay for the Senate would help the New York governor in his campaign for the Republican nomination for president.

Their argument is that Questions to be answered are selected for their general interest and helpfulness.

Elected Generals?

Q. If a person did not vote in the primary election, is he allowed to vote in the general election? Is it necessary to re-register? S.H., Long Beach.

A. If you were registered to vote in the California primary election, but did not vote, you still are eligible to vote in the general election, according to a spokesman for the Long Beach City Clerk's office. If you were not registered to vote in the primary election, you may register for the general election from June 5 through Sept. 12, the spokesman said.

Envelope Switch

Q. In January, 1965 I mistakenly put two checks in the wrong envelopes. I sent a $35 payment for office supplies to the Internal Revenue Service and sent the $6 Internal Revenue Service check to the supply company. I applied immediately to Internal Revenue for a refund, and for three years now have been filling out forms and waiting. Can ACTION LINE help? A. W., Long Beach.

A. Thanks to an assist from Jerome Hollander, public information officer for Internal Revenue Service in Los Angeles, your refund — plus 6 per cent interest — is now being processed. You should have it within 90 days, Hollander says.

Treasure Island?

Q. I heard once that there was a pit being dug on Oak Island off the southern coast of Nova Scotia in search of buried treasure. Can ACTION LINE tell me more about this? S. F. U., Lakewood.

A. Since 1795 people have been trying to find out what lies at the bottom of a mysterious shaft dubbed, hopefully, the "Money Pit." Using picks and shovels, divining rods and drilling rigs, treasure hunters have poured about $1.5 million into the Money Pit. To date, they have taken out only three links of gold chain and a scrap of ancient parchment. Each time a digging crew has seemed close to reaching the bottom, torrents of water have flooded the shaft. It is now believed that the Money Pit is protected by an ingenious system of man-made flood tunnels using the sea as a watchdog, but no one knows who dug the pit, or why. It has been said to contain the treasures of Captain Kidd, Blackbeard, Henry Morgan, Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette, and even Shakespeare's missing manuscripts. The first searcher was a 16-year-old Nova Scotian who, in 1795, stumbled on the shaft while exploring the uninhabited island. His extensive digging brought up layers of tropical coconut fibre, charcoal and ship's putty, plus a stone cut with curious symbols that one cryptologist took to mean, "ten feet below, two million pounds are buried." But further digging only caused the shaft to flood. Since then, hundreds of companies and individuals have tried to reach the treasure. The island currently is owned by M. R. Chappell, an 80-year-old contractor of Sydney, Nova Scotia, and has been leased to Robert Dunfield, a Los Angeles geologist, and two partners. Dunfield and his

FAMILY EXPRESSES GRATITUDE

Mrs. Rose Kennedy and Sen. Edward Kennedy (left), mother and brother of slain Sen. Robert Kennedy expressed their thanks Saturday at Hyannis Port for the strength and hope the family drew from the nation's response to his death. Kennedys' EYEWITNESS TESTIFIES Thank You 'Kennedy Fell to a Nation Out of My Hand'

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy said Saturday that Americans will decide this summer how best to fulfill the goals of his late brother, Sen. Robert Kennedy.

"And each of us will have to decide in a private way, in our own hearts, and in our own consciences, what we shall do in the course of this summer, and in future summers," the Massachusetts Democrat said.

He spoke along with his mother at a television taping session in which he thanked the nation for the "strength and hope" received by the family from the nation's reaction to Robert's death.

His remarks and comments from Mrs. Rose Kennedy were taped Saturday and telecast later in the day over all three networks.

FORMER U. S. Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy, 79, sat in a wheelchair beside his wife. He was rendered speechless by a stroke 6 1/2 years ago. Edward and his mother spoke from wicker lawn chairs on the lawn of the Kennedy family compound overlooking Nantucket Sound.

Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy, widow of the President, stood on the lawn nearby but did not take part in the taping. Several relatives of the Kennedy family also were present.

Sen. Kennedy's statement: "I hope that the countless thousands who have sent their expressions of sympathy and condolence

The following are major excerpts from Grand Jury testimony in the Sirhan Bishara Sirhan hearing. It should be noted that the defendant does not at this point have the opportunity to cross-examine witnesses. A Grand Jury cannot convict, but can accuse. A defendant's cross-examination prerogative can be exercised in judicial proceedings following the return of a Grand Jury indictment. This is the first of a series of articles presenting portions of the transcript.

Karl Uecker, called before the Grand Jury on Friday, June 7, was duly sworn in as a witness.

QUESTION (by Deputy District Attorney Morio L. Fukuto): Mr. Uecker, what is your business or occupation?

ANSWER: I am the assistant maître d' in the banquet department in the Ambassador Hotel.

Q: And were you working there on election night and the following morning?

A: Yes, I was.

Q: And were you present during the time some shooting occurred, at that location?

A: Yes. (Uecker testifies how he led Sen. Robert F. Kennedy from the stage area to the kitchen area.)

Q: Then what happened after that?

A: After he finished shaking hands with one of the kitchen people there, with one of the dishwashers, I took his hand again and we went a few steps farther until we got on this corner, here, where we have the heaters, the steam — the steam heaters.

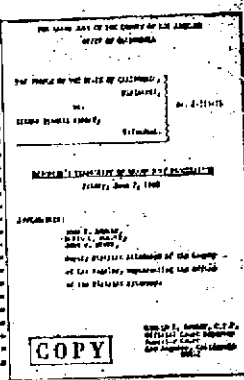

Q: Those are tables that keep the food warm?

A: Right.

Q: What happened then?

A: He got loose of my hand again and shook hands again with one of the dishwashers.

And then I took his hand again, and while I was pulling him, I was trying to get — because too many people came behind us at that time.

Mr. Uno was in front of us — Mr. Timanson — and he was calling, waving over, and I was trying to get as fast through the kitchen area there, through the pantry, as I could.

And while I was holding his hand, I was turning to my right toward — to the Colonial Room where the press room was.

At the time something rushed on my right side. I — at that time I didn't recognize what it was, and I saw some paper flying. I don't even remember what it was, paper or white pieces of things.

Then I heard the first shot and the second shot right after that, and Mr. Kennedy fell out of my hand. I lost his hand.

I looked for him, and I saw him falling down.

And I turned around.

Rockefeller Grabs Pennsylvania Votes

By HARRY FARRELL
From Our Sacramento Bureau

TULSA, Okla. — Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York gained the bulk of Pennsylvania's 64 Republican national convention delegates Saturday, as Pennsylvania Gov. Raymond P. Shafer abandoned his own "favorite son" status.

Shafer endorsed Rockefeller as "someone who can build bridges between our divisions without giving up the fight for social justice."

Of all the candidates now seeking the presidency, he best meets the criteria for the new national leadership the people are searching for and need."

The Pennsylvania governor predicted the "vast majority" of Pennsylvania's delegates — heretofore committed to him as a favorite son — will swing over to Rockefeller.

In Pennsylvania, a wire service tabulation tentatively listed 45 of the 64 released delegates favoring Rockefeller, 17 endorsing Richard Nixon, and two backing California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Before Shafer's declaration, Rockefeller had estimated his delegate strength at "more than 250." Presumably, he now has about 300. For the nomination, 667 delegate votes are required.

Shafer committed himself to Rockefeller while taping a televised "Meet the Press" show which will be broadcast nationally today. Taping took place at NBC's Tulsa studios as the national Republican Governors Conference ended three days of session here.

Rockefeller, in a candid news conference earlier Saturday, said he would

State Demo Delegation Hold Solid

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The California delegation to the Democratic National Convention voted Saturday to remain uncommitted in memory of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy but a key member said the majority favors Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy as the presidential nominee.

The delegates met for the first time since Kennedy won a 140,000 vote plurality in the June 4 primary and voted unanimously for a resolution pledging that "the members of this delegation will not endorse other candidates at the present time."

State Sen. George Moscone of San Francisco, a vice chairman of the delegation, said prior to the vote that his conversations indicated the sentiment for McCarthy over Vice President Hubert Humphrey runs as high as seven to one among the 174-man delegation.

SIRHAN, 2 FRIENDS BOUGHT AMMO JUNE 1

SAN GABRIEL (AP) — A gun store owner said Saturday he sold four boxes of ammunition on June 1 to a group of three men, including Sirhan Bishara Sirhan, accused of gunning down Sen. Robert F. Kennedy on June 5.

Ben Herrick, 42, owner of the Lock, Stock & Barrel, said in an interview that Sirhan and two small, swarthy men, who may have been Jordanians, like Sirhan, purchased two boxes each of two brands of .22 caliber, long rifle hollow point shells the afternoon of Saturday, June 1.

Sirhan, 24, captured as

Kennedy lay fatally wounded on the floor of the Ambassador Hotel after his victory in the California Democratic primary election, was holding a .22-caliber revolver later identified as the murder weapon.

Herrick said police told him the ammunition was traced through an invoice for the sale found in Sirhan's car near the hotel after the assassination.

Herrick described the sale, for under $4, as routine.

"The men simply came in, bought the ammunition and left," he said.

LONG BEACH ARENA PACKED WITH FRIENDS AND FAMILIES OF 3,700 GRADUATES OF CSLB'S CLASS OF '68

Justice Mosk Speaks

3,700 AT CSLB EARN DIPLOMAS

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Education Editor

"By the authority vested in me . . ."

Over 3,700 black-gowned young men and women stood quietly on Long Beach Arena's main floor Saturday morning, listening intently to California State College at Long Beach President Carl W. McIntosh's tradition-laden words.

Seated above them in levels rising to the high ceiling were parents, wives, husbands and young children whose occasional cries punctuated the solemnity. In combined numbers the Arena was filled to capacity for the 19th annual CSLB commencement.

Dr. McIntosh continued in firm, unhurried tones.

"I confer upon you the degree of . . ."

He repeated these ritualistic words twice, creating over 3,000 new bachelors of arts or sciences, 700 possessors of the master's degree.

FEATURED speaker Stanley Mosk, associate justice of the California Supreme Court, was preceded at the speaker's podium by a late, sad addition to the program.

Dr. Joseph White, associate professor of psychology, director of the Educational Opportunities Program and one of the campus' stronger Robert F.

STANLEY MOSK
"Must Encourage Ideals"

Kennedy partisans, spoke briefly in commemoration of the slain political leader.

He urged the graduates to "seriously seek the new world which the late senator so determinedly and persistently sought to actualize."

Dr. White said "he encouraged men to see wrong and try to right it. He sought a nation which could respect a decent human being . . . in which every potentially productive adult could have a meaningful existence."

"My young friends," White adjured, "it is not too late to renew your inner resolve and effort to create this new world . . . to your generation I ask again that you heed the ancient command of Isaiah: 'Relieve the heavy burdens of the oppressed and help them go free.'"

JUSTICE Mosk, a former California attorney general, in his address took his hearers forward in time through the "Sixteen Years to 1984."

"What will life be like in '1984'?" He referred rhetorically to English novelist George Orwell's classic look into a grim future.

"Noteworthy characteristic will not be its cruelty and insecurity," Mosk answered his own question, "but simply its bareness, its listlessness. It will be a world that is huge, terrible, glittering."

Humanity, in that era may well be "thinking the same thoughts and shouting the same slogans, perpetually working, fighting, triumphing, persecuting — three hundred million people all with the same face."

He charged that contemporary society is moving in that direction impelled by "the evils of conforming bureaucracy . . . a rigid and formal attitude which pervades the managerial levels of both government and business."

Mosk suggested a two-part solution which "really is not difficult or elusive":

—To allow, in any human activity, the objective sought to "shape the endeavors of those who participate: 'We must encourage ideals, imagination and inspired goals'";

—"We must remember that organization is made to serve man; men were not made to serve organization. Only if you retain your individuality do you, and all of us, have a possibility in these next 16 years of avoiding 1984."

Shooting Spree Ends in Suicide

A 33-year-old man went on a shooting spree in an East Torrance trailer park Saturday, chased his estranged wife to a neighbor's trailer, wounded the neighbor woman and then used the last bullet in his nine-shot revolver to kill himself.

Harbor Division police said Kenneth Nunely came to his wife's trailer at 1400 W. 190th St. and tried to gain entrance about 2 a.m.

He fired two shots through a window, broke open the front door and chased his wife, Ozelle, 27, out the back, police said.

He fired one shot at another woman, Lucille Hacker, who came running out of her trailer to investigate the noise. But she was uninjured, police said.

Mrs. Nunely dived under another trailer owned by Mrs. Karen Smith but her husband thought she went inside, police said.

He dashed inside and fired several more shots, striking Mrs. Smith once in the left hand.

Then, police said, he placed the gun to his right ear and pulled the trigger.

He was dead on arrival at Harbor General Hospital.

Miss Smith was treated at the hospital and released.

Bob Hope Treated for Ailing Eye

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Comedian Bob Hope underwent photocoagulation treatment Saturday to correct a recurring ailment in his left eye, a spokesman said.

The treatment, administered at St. Vincent's Hospital in Los Angeles, consists of directing a laser beam—a powerful, hot light—into the eye to cauterize a ruptured blood vessel and halt hemorrhaging.

It is the same procedure given Hope in San Francisco when he suffered a flare-up in 1963.

Hope was taken home after the hospital treatment. He will be confined there for at least 10 days.

Five Oil Firms Face Price-Fix Charges

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI)—The State of Oklahoma's $21 million price-fixing lawsuit, against five oil companies goes to trial in federal court here Monday after almost three years of legal wrangling.

Courthouse sources said the trial would probably last from four to six weeks. The suit alleges the firms conspired to submit identical bids and sell oil and to the state at "rigged, fixed and excessive prices" from 1961 to 1965.

Direct damages of about $7 million, the amount of the alleged overcharge, are being sought in the suit. Under anti-trust laws, any jury award would automatically be tripled.

Selection of a jury begins Monday in the court of U.S. District Judge Luther E. Banks.

Defendants are Phillips Petroleum Co., Kerr-McGee Oil Industries, Inc., DX Sunray Oil Co., Rife Petroleum Co., and Inland Asphalt, Inc.

The companies allegedly sold asphalt at "rigged" prices which were three to five cents a gallon higher than they were setting it in open competition to others.

Spokesmen for the companies have denied the state's allegations.

MOSCOW-TO-NEW YORK AIRLINE SERVICE NEAR AT LAST

MOSCOW (UPI)—Aged and yellow newspaper clippings, as brittle as the hopes they reported, tell of a 10-year dream that at last may be coming true.

Russia will extend air service to New York, the newspapers reported in 1958. "New York-Moscow flights are envisaged," they said in 1961.

And later in 1961: "U.S. and Soviet in accord on direct airline service. Then in 1963—"New York-Moscow flights to begin soon."

Good reporting, but bad timing. Now in 1966 it does seem that with luck and cooperation, the first regularly-scheduled commercial flights to link the world's two most powerful nations may get off the ground next month.

THE SOVIET UNION first expressed interest in an air link 10 years ago. In 1961, a formal Soviet-American agreement was initiated, seemingly clearing the runways for the new route.

But political turbulence intervened, and it was five years before the agreement was formally signed. Three months later, in January 1967, the two airlines involved, Pan-American World Airways and the Soviets, seemingly clearing the runways for the new route.

Thirteen months have elapsed since May 1967, but a few days ago a Pan-Am spokesman here said, "we hope to start in early July—maybe."

Barring more hitches, plans for the flights seem settled. Pan-Am will fly Boeing 707s and Aeroflot will use its giant four-jet, 188-passenger Ilyushins. They will fly direct between New York and Moscow, with stopovers in either Montreal, London, Copenhagen or Stockholm.

First-class fares will be $583.90 one-way or $1,109.50 round trip, while economy-class passengers will pay $429.80 one-way and $859.60 round trip at peak seasons. In the off-season, the economy-class fares go down to $384.20 one-way and $758.40 round trip.

The agreement calls for each airline to make one round-trip flight per week. Pan-Am has told the Soviets that it would like to host this to two flights in the summer. The Soviet Civil Aviation Ministry, which runs Aeroflot, says an answer to this may be coming soon.

again, and I saw the man — right standing next to me.

The arm, was holding the gun in, push the arm down on towards the steam heater, and my right arm I took around his neck as tight as I could, and pressing him against the steam heater.

In the meantime, somebody else came behind me and pushed me against the steam heater. The guy in front of me couldn't get loose.

While I was holding the hand where he had the gun in, I was trying to get the point of the gun as far as I could away from the part where Mr. Kennedy was lying.

From the left side, I was trying to push the gun away to the right side where I didn't see too many people, while he was still shooting.

Q: Up to that point, do you remember how many shots you heard?

A: I couldn't hear too clearly, but I thought it was five or six, but I was hitting his hand on the steam heater as hard as I could, with my left hand, I had him right here on the wrist, and hitting my left hand on the heater to get rid of the gun.

Q: He has his gun in his right hand?

A: In his right hand, yes.

Q: And you grabbed him with your left hand?

A: The left hand, yes, and had the right arm around his neck.

KARL UECKER
Assassination Eye-witness

I was standing there and he was shooting, and I could feel when he was turning his hand towards the crowd, that's why I pushed all over the steam table as far as I could, to almost the end of the steam table.

Q: Let me back up and go back. You could feel his hand with the gun in it turning, trying to turn the gun toward the crowd?

A: Towards the crowd or toward me, I don't know.

Q: Were you able at that time, after that, to grab him and keep him?

A: I kept him all the time.

Q: Did some other people —

A: Until the gun was — must have been empty, and I was still holtering, "Get his gun! Get his gun!"

And finally, after I didn't hear no more shots, many people I — were around by that time. I don't know how many people because I was facing the wall.

The people behind me were pushing me against the steam table and I had — still was holding on to him.

And then I saw some heads coming over, reaching for the gun. I don't know who it was.

In the meantime, in between, I looked over my left shoulder and saw my partner, Eddie Minasian, and holtered to him, "Get the police!" (Uecker continues to detail the shooting and identifies a photograph of Sirhan as the suspect.)

Q: How far was Kennedy from Sen. Kennedy and yourself at the time that the first shot took place?

A: How far? As far as my left hand can reach because I remember I was trying to pull him, and the man who shot, I could feel him coming around, me and falling over the steam table and start shooting. (There is more testimony relative to the suspect's position.)

Q: Your body was in between this person's body and —

A: — and Sen. Kennedy.

Q: And his arm reached over your body when he fired —

A: Around me, around me, not over me?

Q: Was there a previous arrangement for you to escort Sen. Kennedy to the Colonial Room?

A: No. As much as I know, he was supposed to — the first plan was that he was supposed to go downstairs, the next floor, the next ballroom where we had the — the other people which couldn't come into the Embassy Ballroom.

And we had about 1,800 people in there, and he was supposed to make a speech over there.

And their minds were changed at the last — the last minute.

When I came out, I just remember that somebody told me, "Turn to your right. Bring toward the Colonial Room."

(Next: Testimony about the last-minute decision that led Sen. Kennedy down the path to death.)

Viet Cong Bridegroom Killed, 4 Hurt Retreat at Khe Sanh as Chairlift Jumps Cable

SAIGON, Sunday (UPI) — U.S. Marines repelled a massive North Vietnamese attack against Khe Sanh, killing 181 Communist troops in the fiercest fighting around the Marine outpost in two months, U.S. spokesmen said today.

In Saigon, Viet Cong guerrillas slammed four rockets into the capital this morning around a major sweep around the city's outskirts, Saturday by South Vietnamese paratroopers, looking for Viet Cong rocket crews.

The South Vietnamese reported killing 80 Communist in a seven-hour battle Saturday in a swamp outside Saigon used as a rocket launching site.

The fighting at Khe Sanh was the heaviest since allied troops two months ago lifted the North Vietnamese siege of the area, just south of the demilitarized zone. The Leathernecks suffered 16 killed and 61 wounded in the fighting. Seven North Vietnamese were captured.

The Communists fired mortar and rocket grenades into a Marine hillside fortification, attempting to overrun it. But the Marines held the strategic advantage and pinned the North Vietnamese down while helicopter gunships, fighter bombers, and artillery battered Communist positions.

The battle broke off nearly four hours later with the Leathernecks following in pursuit of the Communists who withdrew and finally disappeared into the jungle, U.S. spokesmen said.

An early report on the fighting said the Marines had killed 54 North Vietnamese.

RATON, N.M. (UPI) — A chairlift climbing the top of scenic 7,800-foot-high Raton Pass, snapped a drive chain and jumped its track Saturday, hurling a honeymooning couple and four other sightseers to the rocky hillside below.

The bridegroom, Robert C. Guillaume, 41, of Edmond, Okla., was killed. His wife of one day, June, 33, was seriously injured.

The woman told doctors she had lost her first husband only three years earlier.

"We got up the lift a good ways when all of a sudden the car started going backwards fast. We saw someone tumble out of the chair by the pulley," said Joseph Shelton, 32, of Houston, Tex., who was among the five injured.

About 30 persons were stranded for five hours on the lift, some as high as 80-100 feet off the ground.

Rescuers brought them to safety by tossing long ropes to the stranded tourists to slide to the ground.

Operators of the chairlift through the mountain pass on the New Mexico-Colorado border said a drive chain snapped, sending the chairs sliding backwards some 200-300 feet at a high speed and jumping the cable.

bring most of them into his corner.

As they adjourned, the GOP governors adopted a six-page document titled "Integrity Is the Issue," a denunciation of lawlessness, anarchy and the "credibility gap." It deplored "a serious attack on the integrity of our political, social and economic system, and on the integrity of the individual."

Some of the remedies urged by the documents include:

—More professional law enforcement agencies, citizen anticrime crusades to build respect for authority, closer cooperation between federal and lower law enforcement agencies, and adoption of tougher, but unspecified, gun control laws.

—Full enforcement of civil rights legislation.

—Consumer protection measures promulgated by state agencies.

—A "truth in spending" program for the government, establishing priorities for national expenditures and a five-year advance projection revenue and spending requirements.

—Sharing of federal revenues with the states.

—Strong efforts to stop inflationary costs of health care.

—Tax reform for equity at all levels.

—Encouragement of self-help programs among poor Americans through governmental policies that give incentives to help them establish new businesses, construct and improve housing, and create new jobs.

—Tax incentives to help private industry solve housing and unemployment problems and provide neighborhood assistance.

—Correction of inequities in the draft system.

The conference also urged to President to sign the "Crime Control and Safe Streets Act," called for a total review of the welfare program to promote independence of its recipients, and endorsed the so-called "Republican Eleventh Commandment" banning derogatory attacks on GOP colleagues.

to Ethel Kennedy and my mother and father and members of the Kennedy family can realize the strength and the hope that they have given to the members of the family during these last several days.

"This has not been the first tragedy that has afflicted my parents and the members of my family, and we pray that it is the last. But in each instance in spite of a world of cruelty, we have been much more impressed with the compassion and the love and the warmth of the human heart than we have over any other emotion.

"We are deeply indebted to President Johnson and Mrs. Johnson for their words as well as their actions, to the Vice President of the United States for his assistance, and we have been consoled by his Holiness Pope Paul, the secretary general of the United Nations, and other heads of state and many political leaders.

"BUT MOST of all, it has been the people themselves, with outstretched hands of sympathy and strength, that have most touched the hearts of the members of my family. It is the ones who could give the least who have given the most. To those who have expressed their grief and who have raised their voices to the members of our family, we shall always be deeply grateful.

"To the thousands who filed through St. Patrick's and stood on the streets of New York and stood on that railroad embankment, the other thousands in the rain in Washington, D.C., to those in California, the Longshoremen who paused for a few minutes in their work, to the graduates and commencement speakers in the Midwest, to those who offered prayers on the battleship Massachusetts in my own State of Massachusetts in Fall River, we shall never be able to express adequately in words our thanks but we shall in our deeds, in our public and private lives.

"And to those who began the campaign and carried on the campaign for the ideals for which Robert Kennedy believed, that dream still remains, and those hopes still remain.

"And each of us will have to decide in a private way, in our own hearts, and in our consciences, what we shall do in the course of this summer, and I know we shall choose wisely.

"ETHEL and the members of the family are doing well. They have returned to school. Their oldest daughter Kathleen is teaching in an Indian reservation this summer. They have the strength that their father has given them, and we pray to God that the Lord will give them the health to carry on."

The text of Mrs. Rose Kennedy's statement:

"May I extend my sincere thanks to all your dear friends who offered your prayers, affection, and condolences at the time of our recent bereavement.

"We know that these tributes came straight from your hearts and our hearts responded with gratitude and deep appreciation. We cannot always understand the ways of Almighty God... the sacrifices which He demands of us... but we believe in His divine goodness... in His wisdom.

"We accept with faith and resignation His holy will with no looking back to what might have been, and we are at peace. We have courage for the future; and we shall carry out the principles for which Bobby stood.

"His devotion, his dedication, to those high ideals are well known, and we shall honor him not with useless mourning, and vain regrets for the past, but with firm and indomitable resolutions for the future... acting now to relieve the starvation of people... working now to aid the disadvantaged and those helpless, inarticulate masses for whom he felt so deeply and for whom he worked long hours... night as well as day.

"And in our thoughts of him, and in our prayers, we shall remember Ethel as well as his little children with whom he laughed and prayed... that they too, may remember their father not as only a parent who gaily shared their sports, but also as one who pledged his heart, soul, and strength, to the betterment of humanity and the spiritual enrichment and honor of our great country, the United States of America."

partners have spent the last three years and more than $160,000 trying to divert the flood waters and reach the treasure. "We feel we have sufficient information now to make it worthwhile to continue the work," Dunfield told ACTION LINE.

Too Much Overhead

Q. Since packing and moving take 10 years off my life, I figure I have only about one move left in me. I would like very much to avoid getting in another airplane flight pattern. Can ACTION LINE tell me how to get information on the location of these flight patterns? S. P. M., Seal Beach.

Action Line

A. A spokesman for the Long Beach Airport Traffic Control Tower has agreed to contact you and advise you as to residential areas outside the prescribed flight patterns, as there are no charts indicating them all. The spokesman also suggested you write to the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, P.O. Box 45018, Los Angeles 90045, for a detailed list of areas away from flight patterns.

Music, Maestro, Please

Q. In April, 1967 I signed a contract with George Liberae Songsmiths, Inc. in Hollywood who, for $228, were to put two of my poems to music and have the songs recorded and distributed. I paid them the $228, then heard nothing from them. Seven months later they wrote to me saying they had undergone "personnel changes," but would be processing my poems immediately. Since then I have heard nothing more — can't get any information. Is there anything I can do to get my money back? D. E. M., Paramount.

Action Line

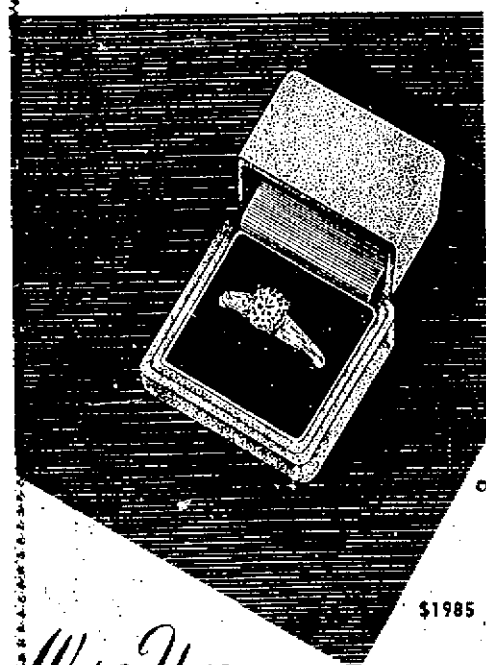

A. The consumer fraud division of the State Attorney General's office, 217 W. First St., Los Angeles, is sending you complaint forms to fill out and return to them. They will then investigate the case and advise you what recourse you may have. According to Ronald Bonaparte, Los Angeles attorney for George Liberae Songsmiths, Inc., George Liberae refused to renew his contract with the company and they have quietly run out of assets and folded. However, Bonaparte said, if you will send copies of your correspondence with the company to him at 3600 Wilshire Blvd., Suite 1902, Los Angeles 90005, he will see what he can do about getting your money refunded. An attorney for George Liberae told ACTION LINE that the musician was never paid the amount agreed upon for use of his name by George Liberae Songsmiths, Inc. and has now signed a contract with a new firm, George Liberae Music Co., which has no connection whatever with Songsmiths, Inc.

SOUND OFF!

I would like to compliment Millikan High School and the Board of Education for their handling of the recent student sit-in. Suspending only the students who did not return to their classrooms after a meeting with the principal and requiring the parent and child to meet with an official at the Board of Education before the child was allowed to return to school was a reasonable and effective method of handling this violation. I think our higher schools of learning could use some of these methods. Certainly every human being should have a right to protest if he can do so without violating the laws of our society. If one has to break one law to complain about another, he is defeating his purpose and losing the sympathy of the very people he wants to convince. These young people who talk about their freedom and rights, they who are in such a minority, seem to forget the large majority's rights to get an education undisturbed. H. C., Long Beach.

ing areas were pressed in to use. Some parked their cars two miles away and hiked to the pier. In many cases they beat the vehicles that stayed on the road. Once arriving, they were rewarded by taking up positions in a queue that stretched nearly 500 yards down the road.

By 3:15, E.N.S. Scott Cheyne said, about 12,000 persons had come aboard the only American battleship on active duty. When the lines were closed off at 5:15 p.m. — and some sent home — the visitor figure had soared to 19,411. Today, with the ship open an hour longer (noon to 4 p.m.), the estimate is that double that amount may be taken aboard.

The sightseers came from miles away to view the dreadnought.

"It's the size of her that makes the ship most impressive," said Dr. Roger Franceschi of Covina, who described the long trip as "well worth it."

Torrance schoolteacher John Cuthbert said that despite the atom bomb and other modern weapons, the New Jersey is "still an impressive array of firepower."

"I had no idea," said Mrs. David Curtin of Lomita, "that the guns were so big."

A mild dissent from the praise came from Seaman Bernard Figas of the USS Bryce Canyon. He said he thought the New Jersey would be bigger, her firepower greater.

Bob Vogt, drove down from Upland because he wanted to "show her off" to his family.

"I was on her in 1944," he said. "She looks older but she's still a big ship."

"She's sure big," said Elie Ivory, of Los Angeles, shaking his head.

"Wait'll I tell the kids next door about it," added his son, Kenneth, 7.

Today's visitors are advised, Captain LaRue said, that they can park on Pier E as long as the space lasts. The Queen Mary parking lot — patrolled by three pickets from the striking Sealers and Painters Union, Local No. 56 — will remain closed but visitors will have full vantage of the future marine museum and hotel facility as they walk to the New Jersey.

The big battlewagon pulls out of Long Beach Monday, headed for San Diego where it will remain for a week. On June 24, she is scheduled to go to sea for participation in several training exercises. On July 3, the New Jersey will return to Long Beach and moor at Pier E until the morning of July 8.

Pravda Refuted by Czechs

PRAGUE (UPI) — The uncensored Czech press bristled Saturday over a Soviet newspaper article which attacked one of Czechoslovakia's new reform leaders as "a revisionist trying to deny the validity" of Russia's Leninism.

The newspapers here sharply refuted charges leveled by a foremost Soviet academician, Prof. F. Konstantinov, against a secretary in the Czech Communist Party Central Committee, Cestmir Cisar, in the authoritative Soviet party newspaper Pravda.

The reaction to Konstantinov's attack marked the third major Soviet-Czech press row since the beginning of the current democratization wave in Czechoslovakia.

Merging Welfare Programs Urged

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson announced Saturday a plan for shaking up the Public Health Service and making Secretary of Welfare Wilbur J. Cohen a sort of assistant czar over the $15.6-billion federal health programs.

The plan was embodied in a report Cohen laid before the President Friday at the LBJ ranch. Johnson approved it immediately.

Effective July 1, there will be a new Consumer Protection and Environmental Health Service in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

It will consolidate in one branch of the Public Health Service all departmental activities relating to the safety of food and drugs, pollution control, radiological health problems, urban and industrial health and elements of communicable disease control.

"It will be my purpose," Cohen told a news conference, "not only to make a very important thrust forward in environmental health, but also in the whole field of consumer protection."

Also on July 1, the PHS division of regional medical programs, dealing with the three major killer diseases — heart trouble, cancer and stroke — will be shifted from the National Institutes of Health to the Health Services and Medical Health Administration.

Redwood Park Bill Due for House Attention

WASHINGTON — A House subcommittee this week is due to begin fashioning a Redwoods National Park Bill amid optimism that creation of a park will be realized this year.

An interior subcommittee on parks and recreation will begin work Thursday on creating a bill from among three basic proposals for establishing a park encompassing scenic redwood areas of northwestern California.

Subcommittee sources indicate that the bill likely to emerge from closed-door consideration would authorize a park close to the size of one approved by the Senate, but encompassing a different area.

These sources believe that such a measure would be acceptable to the full House and probably, with minor adjustments to the Senate so authorization for the park could come by the end of next month.

Before the committee are these proposals:

—A Senate measure authored by Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel, R-Calif., which would create a 62,000 acre park in two main sections in the Mill Creek area of Del Norte County, and in the Redwood Creek area of Humboldt County.

—A proposal favored by the administration which is similar to the Kuchel bill but envisions a park smaller by 11,000 acres.

—A 90,000-acre park being pushed by conservation groups which would take in extensive areas in the Redwood Creek vicinity.

—The "redwoods-to-the-sea" proposal of Rep. Don Clausen, who represents the area involved. His 53,000-acre park would consist mostly of land already in public ownership, mainly in coastal sections.

Saigon's Boy Ranger Is a 55-Pound Tiger

By DANIEL SOUTHERLAND

SAIGON (UPI) — When I first saw Ta Thai Manh he was puffing on a cigarette, waiting to be treated for a wound in his left thigh. It was only slight wound. A tag attached to Manh's collar said fragments from a Viet Cong rocket-propelled grenade grazed his left thigh. The tag also showed Manh's age: 13.

That was in Cholon a month ago. Manh was treated and returned almost immediately to action.

Three days later he was more seriously hurt. A bullet struck him in the left foot and it will be a few months before the wound will heal.

"All he wants to do is go back and fight," said Lt. Col. Dao Ba Phuoc, commander of the Fifth Vietnamese Ranger group to which the boy-soldier is attached.

"I HAVE ordered him to give up smoking," the colonel said. "It's not right for a boy of his age."

Manh knows how to use hand grenades, an M16 rifle and an automatic pistol.

Now twice wounded and killer of at least two Viet Cong by his own count, Manh is barely 3 feet, 10 inches tall. He weighs 55 pounds with his boots on.

In a country where many young men pay bribes to stay out of the army, Manh can't get enough of the military life. He has a mother, a father, a sister and three brothers, including one who wants to be a priest.

But the Army is Manh's home.

He joined the elite Vietnamese rangers five months ago, during the Communist Tet offensive. He has been with them ever since, carrying ammunition and grenades, scouting and, many times, fighting.

"I hate the Viet Cong," said Manh. "At Tet, they came to burn our house. They killed some of my friends."

MANH'S PARENTS are Roman Catholic refugees from Communist North Vietnam. They left the north shortly after the partitioning of Vietnam by the Geneva agreement of 1954. They eventually settled in a Catholic community at Xom Moi, in suburban Saigon, about four miles north of the center of the South Vietnamese capital.

It was a community which gave help to the Saigon government troops but never to the Viet Cong.

The Viet Cong captured

Manh during the Tet fighting. Manh's curiosity was to blame. He left home to see what the shooting was all about. As he passed a cemetery wall, two Viet Cong slipped behind him and grabbed him.

The Viet Cong told Manh he should join them in their struggle to "liberate" Saigon. They forced him to stay with them at the cemetery and, thinking he had been converted to their cause, gave him an AK4 submachine gun one night and told him to stand guard.

When an airplane attacked the cemetery, Manh thought it was his chance to escape. He turned the submachinegun on his captors and killed one of them. He stole a hand grenade from the dead man and remembering what some local Vietnamese soldiers had taught him, hurled the grenade at the Viet Cong who pursued him.

MANH MADE his way to an encircled Ranger platoon. For five days, he stayed with the Rangers, carrying water for them and helping bind their wounds. Four of the 30-man platoon were killed and the rest wounded before government paratroopers finally reached them.

Manh returned home, but he couldn't stop thinking about the brave men with whom he faced death. He wanted to go back to them, and could no longer concentrate on his school work.

Manh's parents told him he was a fool to want to join the Rangers. When persuasion didn't work, they tried locking him in the house. Manh broke the lock with a chisel and went to Phu Tho racetrack in Cholon, headquarters of the Fifth Ranger Group.

The Rangers gave their young "old comrade" a uniform, a red beret and a ranger helmet with a black panther painted on the front. But he got neither rank nor pay.

Manh will have to wait until he is 17 to get the mind. He doesn't want to go back to school, only to stay in the Army.

Mansell Predicts Tax Cut Despite Budget Increases

The proposed 1968-69 budget for the city of Long Beach is up $3.8 million over last year, but City Manager John R. Mansell has predicted it can be financed with a slight cut in the tax rate.

Mansell's budget recommendations, which will be presented Tuesday to the City Council, call for expenditure of $51,941,735 in funds derived from the property tax.

Because of what he termed the "unprecedented" economic growth in Long Beach, Mansell estimates the city tax rate will be $1.4385 for each $100 of assessed valuation, as compared to the present $1.4446.

ON THE BASIS of the estimated tax rate, the owned of a Long Beach home with a market value of $25,000 would pay a city property tax of $107.88 a year.

Although the tax-supported portion of the budget is up this year, overall spending by the city is down $10 million from 1967-68.

Total expenditures by the city, including tideland fund projects and the Harbor, Gas and Water departments, is $138,705,094, as compared to $148.7 million during the current fiscal year.

The reduction stems primarily from the fact that tideland fund expenditures this year will be reduced about $9 million because of funds committed to projects already under way, such as the $11.7 million Magnolia Avenue bridge.

THE PROPOSED budget includes funds for the conversion of the Queen Mary and its permanent berthing on Pier J, remodeling of Long Beach Auditorium and construction of a new exhibit hall, street improvements totaling $4.7 million and financed from the gasoline tax, and a $2.4 million street-lighting program.

It calls for a sharp increase in law enforcement, including the addition of 34 officers in patrol, narcotics, traffic, vice and juvenile divisions, and expansion of the recently inaugurated helicopter patrol to a total of three aircraft.

A planning and research division has been established in the police department to implement modern law-enforcement techniques, Mansell reported.

"LONG BEACH is now moving into an exciting new era of its evolution as a truly International City," the city manager said in his budget message.

He said the city is "transforming its shoreline into one of the finest water-oriented recreational areas in the world."

4-MILLION-MILE MISS Come on Out Now, Icarus Gone

BARSTOW (UPI) The planetoid Icarus was picked up by radar at the Goldstone Tracking Station during its 4-million-mile pass by Earth and is now safely heading away for another 19 years, it was reported Saturday.

Dr. Richard Goldstein of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory station picked up Icarus, which is estimated to have a size estimated at a quarter-mile to a mile in diameter, on Thursday and followed its course through Friday and Saturday.

The radar echoes were the first ever received from Icarus which, except for the Moon, is the largest sizeable planetoid to come near Earth. The echoes were very faint, the laboratory said, but it was continued for a period of more than 15 hours.

The radar information from Goldstone, used in tracking spacecraft to the Moon and planets, will assist scientists in modifying such astronomical estimates as the speed of 66,215 miles per hour.

Information also will be analyzed to try to determine whether Icarus is made of rock, metal or some other substance, whether it rotates and a more exact estimate of just how close it does come to Earth.

Explosives Possession Jails Coed

NEW YORK (UPI) — A woman graduate student at Columbia University was held in $500 bail today on charges of possession of explosives.

Police said a patrolman arrested Ann Aberle after he saw her pick up a package behind some bushes in Morningside Park near the university. Police said the package contained six small tubes full of white powder and two 7-inch long cylinders containing the same powder.

Miss Aberle, a graduate of Stanford University and a candidate for a master's degree in Russian History, refused to say why she had picked up the explosives.

Mansell said also that the city's public improvement program represents "an investment in the future which has already stimulated the private sector of the economy to undertake major developments."

He cited the Fidelity First Federal Plaza, the Bank of California, the Airlines Center and the General Telephone Co. building, all under construction, and the proposed 400-room hotel adjacent to the auditorium and a 300-room hotel proposed for the West Beach project.

In the field of recreation, El Dorado Park between Spring Street and Wardlow Road will be opened to the public this fall, and the expanded Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Park and recreation center will be opened in September.

THE EXPANDED California Avenue Recreation Center will open early in 1969, and the Olympic pool in Belmont Plaza Beach Center is to open in August in time for the U.S. Olympic swimming and diving trials.

Mansell said the city's development in the next 12 months will proceed "at the fastest rate in its history."

The reduced tax rate is possible, he said, because of the expansion of the city's economic base. The city anticipates an additional $314,300 next fiscal year from the sales tax, an added $90,000 from the state cigarette tax, $262,000 additional in engineering reimbursements, an increase of $631,371 in reimbursements from other funds, $110,000 in added interest and $285,896 increased revenue from other agencies.

The estimated total assessed valuation for the city in fiscal 1968-69 is $1,170,065,000, an increase of $85 million, or 8 per cent. New construction and gains in the utility roll account for a major portion of the increase, Mansell said.

THE PROPOSED budget will increase the number of city employees by 58, including the 34 new police officers. Eight new positions will be added in the Fire Department, three in the city engineer's office to meet requirements of the Douglas DC-10 program, and 16 in the Recreation Department, primarily to staff the Belmont Plaza pool.

There will be a net reduction of three positions in all other city departments.

The budget includes funds for salary adjustments and fringe benefits totaling about $2,250,000, as well as $767,586 to implement the new retirement benefits, which become effective next Jan. 1.

Councilmen are expected to take the budget under submission, pending hearings in July.

NO CLUES

Fear Missing Boy Victim of Deviate

A Lynwood police captain said Saturday he believes that 5-year-old Martin Darold Jensen—missing for almost four weeks—met foul play at the hands of a "sexual deviate."

"I don't know what else to conclude about his disappearance," said Capt. Mervil B. Miller of the police juvenile division.

Investigators remain without a clue as to what happened to the child when he disappeared from in front of his home May 23 about 5 p.m.

Police aided by volunteers conducted a house-to-house search throughout the city, dragged the Los Angeles Flood Control Channel and examined vacant lots and buildings. They found no trace of the child.

Hope of finding the blond haired boy brightened for a moment when a Bakersfield woman reported seeing a child matching his description in a car with Nevada license plates.

But the clue turned out to be false, police said.

Although the search for the boy—who lived at 3526 Norton Ave.—has been called off, Detectives Clarence Henderson and Ray Hattabaugh continue to devote all their working hours to the case.

When the 4-foot-tall, 45-pound boy disappeared, he was wearing a blue plaid shirt, gray trousers and black shoes.

Hearing in Sniping Case Set

The Orange County Juvenile Court will decide Monday whether to hear charges of assault with intent to commit murder against a 10-year-old boy accused of shooting a 13-year-old girl.

The boy, Archie Lee Clausen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Clausen of 12682 Trask Ave., Garden Grove, was booked Friday on suspicion of the sniper shooting of Deborah Salafia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Salafia, 12542 Gloria.

The girl was wounded in the arm by a bullet from a .22-caliber pistol belonging to the boy's father as she walked to school.

Heavy Rain, Hail Batter Frankfurt

FRANKFURT, Germany (UPI) — A thunderstorm with torrential rains and hail battered Frankfurt Saturday and firemen were unable to cope with hundreds of calls from flooded homes. The storm lashed the city for half an hour, leaving roads and sidewalks awash with water. Giant hailstones clogged street car tracks and caused one trolley car to derail.

Saigon Glamor Gives Way to Filth, Squalor

By TERRY WOLKERSTORFER

This is the first of a series of reports from Vietnam by Terry Wolkerstorfer of our Washington Bureau. The correspondent is a veteran observer of the Far East scene and speaks the Vietnamese language.

Saigon's a strange city On the River Mekong's shore.

A city that can overnight Make a rich man poor. It's starve and feast in Saigon,

The Paris of the East.

Barry Sadler, "Saigon," Ballads of the Green Berets SAIGON — Saigon is on the Mekong River's shore only by poetic license. But it is the Paris of the East, a city where the rich get richer and the poor get poorer, one of the strangest cities ever.

Two years ago — even a year ago — Saigon was, in its own way, a truly exotic place. But in the last 12 months, the glamor has been replaced by squalor.

It was the irony of juxtaposition which made Saigon a fascinating place. It was possible to sip a gin and tonic on the veranda of the Continental Palace hotel while gunfire echoed only blocks away; to be plucked from a rice paddy, muddy and unshaven, and be only a 30-minute chopper ride from a howl of soupe graine and a San Miguel beer at the air-conditioned Mayfair restaurant; or to talk politics over cognac at the Caravelle while watching the flash of artillery fire in the distance.

True, there were the refugees and the poor — but never so many that they could not be successfully ignored. And, on the other hand, there were French colonial buildings, well-manicured parks and gardens, Renault taxicabs, and some really delightful Vietnamese girls.

THE WAR was always close enough to be interesting, but never too close for comfort.

Now, it has grown too close, too painful to be ignored.

Fighting rages almost daily in the suburbs of Chin-Lam, Phu Lam, Gia Dinh. Rocket and mortar rounds impact in the city almost nightly. The heyday of the Sporing Bar, when Special Forces people flocked to Tu Do Street from remote outposts strung the length of the country, is over: a rigidly enforced curfew keeps Americans and Vietnamese alike off the streets from 7:00 p.m. until 7:00 a.m.

Thousands are homeless, the lucky ones living in makeshift cardboard shanties thrown up on the streets. The piles of garbage, always a problem, grow ever higher. The streets are even dirtier (some had once thought this impossible), even more crowded, and — in the downtown section near Nguyen Hue and Le Loi streets — choked with beggars.

IT IS DIFFICULT for Americans — even those confined to the ghetto — to imagine the abject poverty which exists in parts of Asia. A man who lost both legs and an arm while serving in the Vietnamese army drags himself through the gutter, wearing his only material possession — a grimy tattered set of underwear — begging for a few piasters a day.

Crippled and deformed women and children, many of them victims of the war, lie on the sidewalks. Mothers with dirty, hungry, diseased infants in their arms, beg among the filth of the streets. That's the kind of poverty Americans, even when confronted with it, just don't like to think about.

The rich, meanwhile, get richer. The black market — allegedly closed several times — and the gray market are gorged with American goods. Shopkeepers sell to Americans at grossly inflated prices.

SAIGON, despite a valiant effort by President Thieu and his government to provide for the flood of homeless and refugees, has at last felt the impact of the war.

This disruption of their daily lives may finally bring home a lot of fat, complacent Saigon citizens the fact that there is a war going on, and that the life of their capital and their country hang in the balance. That may make the present suffering less than a total waste.

But for now, the Saigon which used to be interesting and even entertaining has become a very, very oppressive place.

Hunt for Thief, $250,000 Gem

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Police searched for the $250,000 McFarlin diamond and its owner-by-theft Saturday and admitted the hunt led nowhere so far.

A stocky man of about 30 grabbed the diamond and its necklace Friday after battering his way through the half-inch plate glass of a display case.

He fled to a waiting automobile which, witnesses said, was driven by a man.

DRUNK, RECKLESS FLYING Pilot Has Hard Time Getting Down to Earth

Pilot Clifton Eugene Wilborn had a hard time getting back to earth Saturday.

And, police said, he had a hard time keeping his feet on the ground once he landed.

Wilborn, 40, of Whittier, was booked on suspicion of reckless flying and flying under the influence of alcohol after he landed his small private plane at Long Beach Municipal Airport at 1:20 a.m.

Officers said Wilborn — who started to land on the wrong runway, then taxied off the runway into the grass — failed a field sobriety test administered after he stepped from his green and white plane.

Larry Brennis, on duty at the airport control tower, told officers Wilborn first made radio contact with the tower while flying over Downey.

Brennis said he cleared Wilborn to land on Runway 25 but the pilot made an approach on Runway 12. The tower told the pilot to pull up and try again and blinked lights on Runway 12 to guide him in, officers said.

Lakewood Sheriff's deputies patrolling in their Sky Knight helicopter said they were summoned to the airport in time to see Wilborn taxi off the runway into the grass at high speed.

They said the tower advised Wilborn he was headed toward a ditch and the pilot found his way back onto the runway, made a large loop and taxied to a stop in a parking area at Southland Helicopters.

Long Beach police arrived and administered a field sobriety test, which Wilborn failed, they said.

Police said they found an unopened bottle of whiskey in the plane.

Japanese in Protest Against U.S.

TOKYO (AP) — An estimated 23,000 militant Zen-gakuren students, workers and pacifists, including some Americans, held wild anti-American demonstrations at 47 places in Japan Saturday.

National police said about 250 policemen and students were injured in fighting. They said 54 persons were arrested on charges of obstructing traffic and police duties.

Leftists called the demonstrations to observe the eighth anniversary of the death of a Tokyo University coed, Michiko Kamba, in a battle with police during demonstrations against the U.S.-Japan security treaty in 1960.

Demonstrators protested the U.S. involvement in the Vietnam war. They demanded discontinuance of the U.S.-Japan security treaty, which comes up for review in 1970, and return of the U.S.-administered Ryukyu Islands to Japan.

Job Corps Youths Raid Store

PLEASANTON (AP) — Officials disclosed Saturday that 100 Job Corpsmen raided the Camp Sparks store last Tuesday and made off with $1,500 to $2,000 worth of merchandise.

Robin Hatfield, acting director of the Parks Jobs Corps Center, said the action apparently was planned as a protest to what corpsmen claim is overpricing at the store.

He said a small group planned the raid and was joined by others. The store sells clothing, cigarettes and sundries.

Most of the lot was recovered, some of it hidden under buildings and in trees.

FBI agents are investigating.

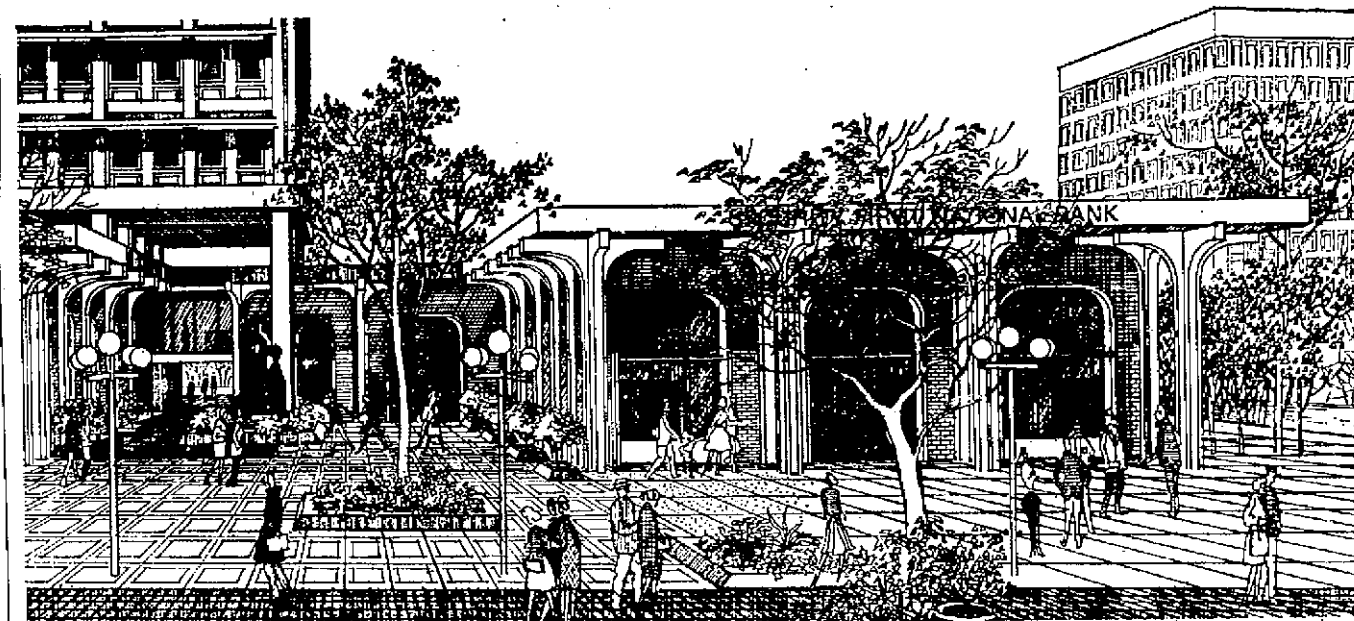

Ax-Wielder Kills Man, Beats Wife

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — An ax-wielding intruder, striking in the pre-dawn hours Saturday, killed a Nashville man and left the victim's pregnant wife and 18-month-old daughter badly beaten.

A hospital official said the mother underwent surgery for multiple stab wounds, but added: "The life of the unborn child is not threatened at the moment."

The body of John Robert Bolte, 27, apparently killed instantly by a single blow from a double-edge ax, was found in a bedroom at the couple's brick home in a quiet South Nashville neighborhood.

Bolte's wife, Barbara, 23, was stabbed three or four times in the upper chest and listed in critical condition.

De Gaulle Frees 11 Jailed Foes

Gaullists Woo
Military Help
During Crisis

PARIS (UPI) — President Charles de Gaulle, fighting for survival of his regime, pardoned and freed from jail Saturday ex-Gen. Raoul Salan and 10 other leaders of military revolts and plots aimed at his overthrow and assassination.

The presidential pardon appeared designed to strengthen relations between De Gaulle and rightist elements of the army, one of the main props of his embattled regime, as the Gaullist government girded for critical nationwide elections late this month.

Most prominent among those released was Salan, 69, the former army general who led the 1961 generals' "putsch" against De Gaulle's decision to grant Algeria independence.

Salan, French army's most-decorated soldier, stepped out of the hilltop maximum security prison at Tulle, in central France, after six years and 30 days in jail. He had been the prison's only inmate.

WITH TEARS glittering in his eyes, the former head of the anti-Gaullist secret army organization walked to the arms of his daughter, Monique. His first free act was to go to a market place and buy a bouquet of field flowers for his wife who had suffered a mild heart seizure in her Tulle hotel on learning of the release of her husband.

Simultaneously in Paris, the huge gate of Sante Prison swung open to release former Col. Antoine Argoud, who took over leadership of the anti-De Gaulle movement after Salan's capture.

Like Salan, Argoud was serving a life sentence pronounced by a French court after unidentified men had kidnaped him in Munich, Germany, and brought him, bound and gagged, back to Paris. The abduction was widely considered the work of French secret police.

Nine other men, most of them convicted in connection with abortive attempts to assassinate De Gaulle, were released from the Saint Martin fortress prison on the isle of Re, a speck of land off France's Atlantic coast.

De Gaulle signed a decree granting pardon to his former mortal enemies Friday, shortly before he left for his Colombey-les-Deux-Eglises country home for his first quiet weekend since the student and worker revolt plunged France into its worst crisis since World War II.

Wallace: I'll Make 'Em Shake

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — George Wallace claimed Saturday night that his third party presidential campaign "is already greater than any other third party movement has ever been."

Wallace, on the fifth stop of an eight-state tour, told a rally audience of about 8,000 in the Charlotte Coliseum that his American Independent Party already had gained ballot position in all the states in which the deadline has passed, and predicted that by November it would appear on the ballot of all 50 states.

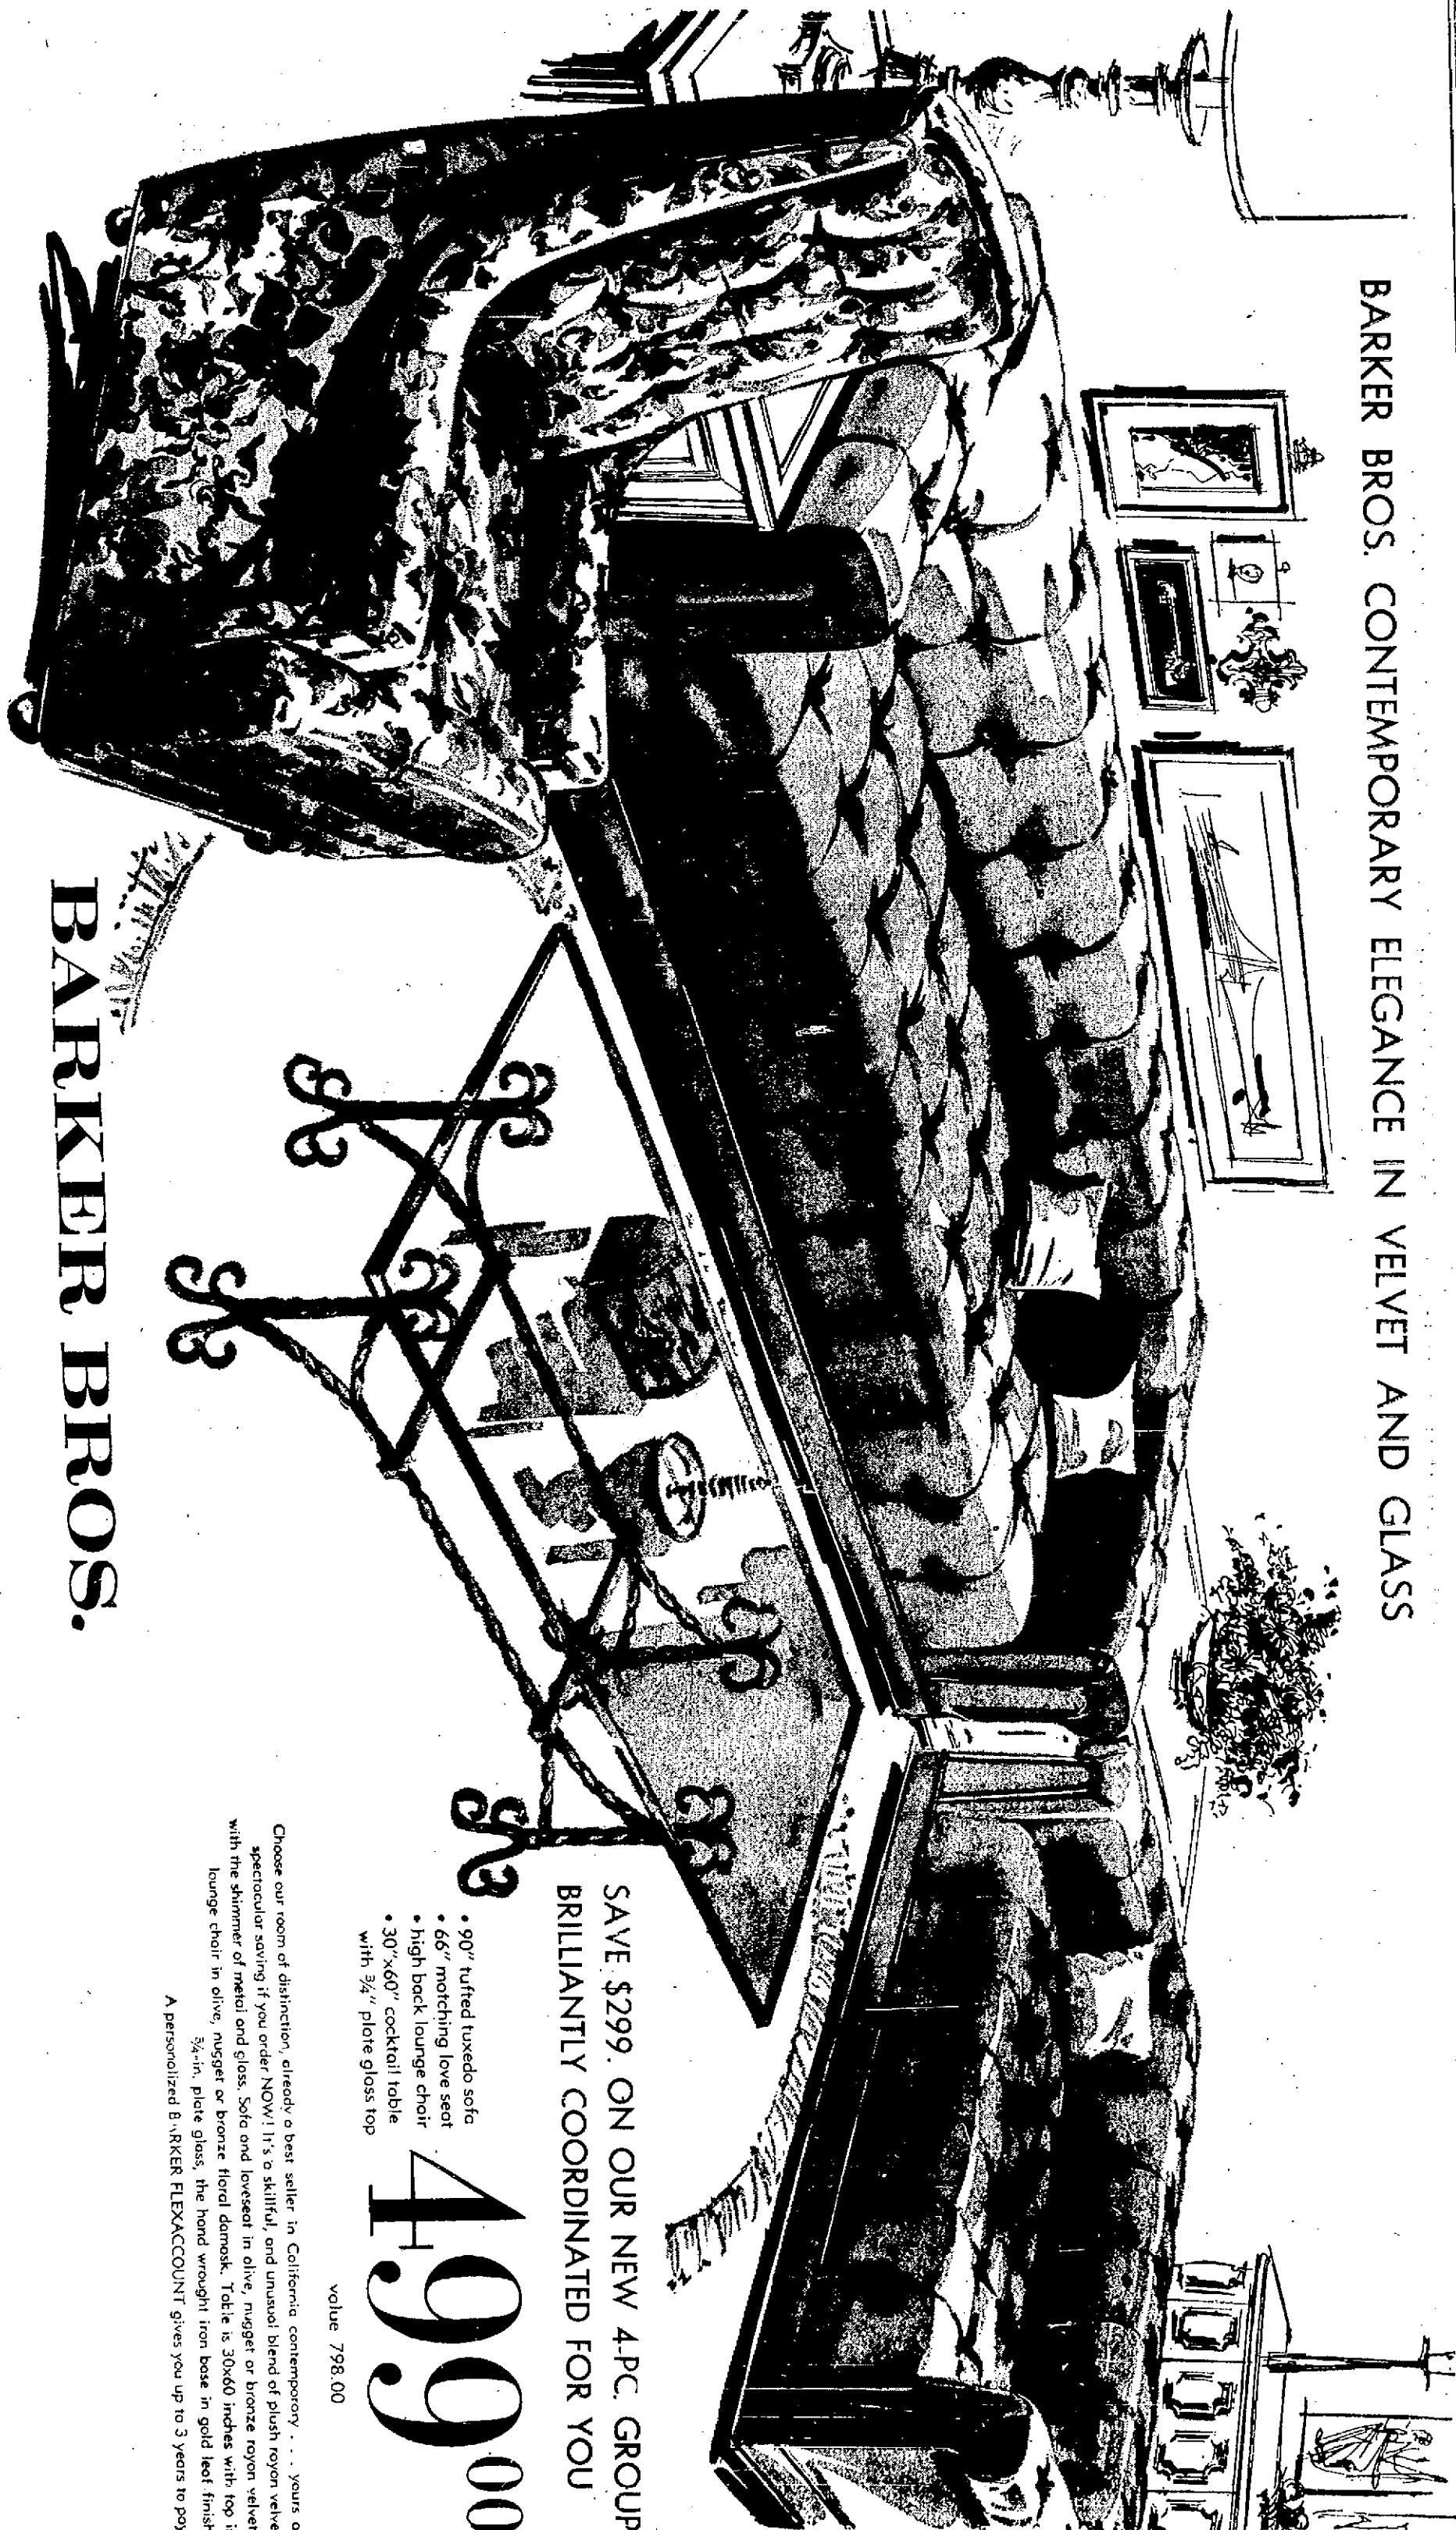

"This third party movement is already greater than any other third party movement has ever been," Wallace said. "You and me together will shake the eye teeth of the liberals in this country in November."

Vietnam Longest War in American History

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press

The war in Vietnam becomes the longest war in American history next Sunday. Six years, six months, one day.

Three days before Christmas in 1961, James Thomas Davis, an amiable Tennesseean who used to stuff hoot owls as a hobby, pitched headlong onto a road near Saigon. He was the first American soldier killed by Viet Cong bullets.

Men will argue, as they do in every war where surprise attack or declaration are lacking, about when the war actually began. After all, America has been involved in Vietnam for a quarter century, most intimately since that country was divided in 1954.

But Tom Davis — no one called him by his first name — died in combat Dec. 22, 1961. The tragedy of another American war began.

Six years, six months, one day.

Longer than the six years, six months of the American war of Independence, the four years of the Civil War, the three years and nine months of World War II, the three years and one month of Korea.

OFFICIALLY, Americans were military advisers to South Vietnam before Spec. 4 Davis and nine South Vietnamese were killed in an ambush and, officially, Americans remained advisers for nearly three more years. But young Tom Davis was, in President Johnson's words, "the first American to fall in defense of our freedom in Vietnam."

Thomas Lansden, a cousin of Tom Davis, was killed May 8 this year.

"He was 15 when my son was killed," says James Clarence Davis. "That shows you how long the war's been going on."

"When Tom called and said he was being sent to Vietnam, I looked at a map to find it," the father says. "I had never heard of it before. Tom and three choices, Alaska, Okinawa or Vietnam. He picked Vietnam and felt he had made the right choice — that what we were doing there was good."

A lot of Americans didn't know where Vietnam was, until young Americans began going there in increasing numbers — by the hundreds at first in the 1950's, by the hundreds of thousands in the 1960's.

The people of this S-shaped land, hugging the coast line of the South China Sea, south of the Chinese mainland, have known war from the centuries before Christ, when Vietnamese tribesmen settled in the Red River Delta area.

In the 17th century came the first Roman Catholic missionaries from France and by the late 1800's, French forces had gained control not only of Vietnam, but also Laos and Cambodia — the divisions that made up French Indochina.

THEN CAME World War II and Japanese occupation. Before the French could reassert their authority after that war, Ho Chi Minh and his Communists had formed a separate government in North Vietnam. France fought Ho's troops bitterly from 1946 until 1954, when the Communists defeated them in the bloody siege of Dien Bien Phu.

On Dec. 23, 1950, the United States agreed to give France indirect U.S. military aid in Southeast Asia. It followed that in September 1951 with an agreement with Vietnam for direct economic assistance.

Then came 1954 and 16,000 French casualties at Dien Bien Phu. Pierre Mendes-France became premier of France on a promise to negotiate peace. The resulting Geneva Conference partitioned Vietnam into two countries, with a demilitarized zone along the 17th Parallel separating them.

It also imposed regulations on foreign military bases and personnel and on increased armaments, called for countrywide elections leading to reunification to be held by July 20, 1956, and set up an international control commission to see that the accords were carried out.

NEITHER THE United States nor South Vietnam signed the agreements, but the United States promised to "view any renewal of the aggression . . . with grave concern and as seriously threatening international peace and security."

Just as the Geneva conference was ending, Ngo Dinh Diem was appointed South Vietnam's premier. One million refugees began flowing to South Vietnam from the North, including a strong contingent of dedicated, trained Communists.

In the fall of 1954 Diem asked for United States assistance and on Oct. 22, President Dwight D. Eisenhower ordered a crash program to strengthen the Diem regime. One week later, the United States declared its intention to give direct aid.

At Diem's request, the first United States Military Assistance Advisory Group took over training of the South Vietnamese army when the French began moving out in February 1955. The same month, the Southeast Asia defense treaty — SEATO — providing for the collective defense of South East Asia, came into being. Signatory nations were the U.S., Britain, France, Australia, New Zealand, the Philippines, Pakistan and Thailand.

Late that year, a gruff-talking Texan, Lt. Gen. Samuel Tankersley Williams, veteran of the initial Normandy landings and five major World War II campaigns in Europe, division commander in four major Korean War campaigns, took over as commander of the 481 military advisers there to build up the South Vietnamese army.

RELAXING in his San Antonio home recently, the now-retired general talked about those days.

When the French pulled out, North Vietnam had an army of 300,000 battle-trained men, Williams said. But in the South, a weak army with almost no trained officers had its hands full with an armed revolt against the Diem regime by the Binh Xuyen political-bandit group.

The unrest spread throughout the southern provinces with the participation of two religious sects, the Cao Dai and the Hoa Hao.

"If North Vietnam had invaded at that time, they could have walked into Saigon standing up," Williams said. "They couldn't have been stopped."

"I was under the impression at that time that if Ho Chi Minh had moved his army into South Vietnam he would have had to move Chinese divisions into North Vietnam to hold his people under control . . . and I believe Ho Chi Minh would hesitate to do that for fear he would never get the Chinese out again, if he invited them in. And I still view that to be true even today."

AMERICAN officials "assumed that if Diem refused to hold the elections North Vietnam would attack," Williams says. But when the attack didn't take place "I came to the conclusion — and we always stated in our briefings although I'm not sure we ever convinced Washington — that there would never be any invasion from North Vietnam until after South Vietnam was in the throes of a tremendous guerrilla war. And that prophecy happened to turn out correctly."

The invasion came after the Viet Cong — Communist guerrillas in South Vietnam — began their terrorist attacks in mid-1957.

On Oct. 2, 1961, Diem declared: "It is no longer a guerrilla war we have to face, but a real war waged by an enemy who attacks us with regular units." He followed that 16 days later by proclaiming a state of emergency.

President Kennedy sent

SIX YEARS, SIX MONTHS

They are called many names by those who wear them, but the overseas bars, each representing six months of duty of overseas service, are an indication of the length of time the United States has been actively engaged in Vietnam—six years and six months, and a little more.

his personal military adviser, Gen. Maxwell B. Taylor, to Vietnam to investigate. On Dec. 8, 1961 the State Department said South Vietnam was threatened by "clear and present danger" of Communist conquest. Fourteen days later Tom Davis was killed.

On Feb. 8, 1962, the United States reorganized its South Vietnam military assistance group, which by then totaled 1,500 advisers, into a command under four-star Gen. Paul Donald Harkins, who now lives in retirement in Dallas.

THE COUNTRY was roiled with riots by Buddhists who claimed they were being persecuted by the regime of Diem, a Roman Catholic. By mid-1963 monks began publicly setting themselves afire and the world was damning the Diem government.

Still, Americans were advisers — teachers of defense as well as helpmates in building South Vietnam so it would have the internal strength to resist Communist takeover.

Then came August 1964 and the events in the Gulf of Tonkin that changed America to a warrior. The destroyers Maddox and C. Turner Joy were attacked by North Vietnamese PT boats, the United States retaliated with a massive air strike against their bases, and President Johnson got congressional authority "to take all necessary measures to repel any armed attack against the force of the United States and to prevent further aggression."

Americans had become aware of Vietnam, of such places as the Ia Drang Valley, of Khe Sanh, Pleiku, Dak To, Con Thien, Hue . . . They became familiar with the Iron Triangle, Operation Cedar Falls, Operation Junction City . . .

Troop strengths went from Gen. Williams' 481 advisers, to Harkins' 1,500. They were up to 22,000 when he left in 1964, to 208,800 in 1965, to 460,300 in 1966, to more than 500,000 today. The weekly casualty reports became larger. One hundred. Two hundred. Four hundred. The weekly average this spring is pushing 500, and the total figure since Tom Davis died is near 25,000.

U.S. Protests Berlin Travel Restrictions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk has protested to Soviet representatives East Germany's tight new restrictions on travel in and out of Berlin.

Rusk lodged the U.S. protest with Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vasily V. Kuznetsov and the Soviet ambassador to Washington, Anatoly F. Dobrynin, in New York Friday, State Department spokesman Richard I. Phillips said Saturday.

Similar protests were made to the Russians in London and in Paris by the British and French governments.

The three Western allies hold the Soviets, as the fourth of the World War II occupying powers of Germany, responsible for the freedom of movement to Berlin across East Germany.

East Germany was the Soviet zone of occupation and a general treaty ending the post-war occupation status has not yet been concluded.

In Berlin, the restrictions stacked up cars trying to leave isolated West Berlin into five-mile, five-hour waiting lines Saturday, as the Communists ridiculed West Germany's apparent inability to do anything about the tightened controls.

N.Y. Work Stoppage Threatened

Puerto Ricans March in Support of Poor People

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Leaders of nearly 4,000 Puerto Ricans participating in a march supporting the Poor People Saturday, threatened a one-day work stoppage in New York to dramatize Puerto Rican importance in the city's economy.

The Puerto Ricans arrived here by buses from the New York, Philadelphia and Boston areas.

They held a rally at the open-air Sylvan Theater on the Washington Monument grounds and then marched to Arlington National Cemetery to place wreaths on the graves of President John F. Kennedy and his brother, Robert.

A FEW Negroes, Mexican-Americans and Indians in the Poor Peoples' March joined the Puerto Ricans to swell the long line of marchers to more than 4,000.

Gilberto Gerena Valentin, Commissioner of Puerto Rican Affairs on the New York City Human Relations Council, told the rally that Puerto Ricans in New York "will stop the city one day to see what happens."

He said the large number of Puerto Rican workers in the garment industry, longshoremen and other workers could seriously hamper economic activity with a one-day work stoppage. But he did not say when such a stoppage would take place.

The Puerto Ricans made the trip here in support of the mass demonstration by the Poor People next Wednesday. The march was orderly. The Puerto Ricans were neatly dressed compared to the unkempt residents of resurrection City.

THE REV. Ralph David Abernathy, Negro leader of the Poor Peoples' March, made an impassioned address to the Puerto Ricans at the Sylvan Theater.

He said the poor would "rise up 40 million strong and change the government" unless the government changed the plight of the poor people.

"They ran the bonus marchers out in the 30s, but they will not run the Poor People out in 1968," he said.

Air Crash Kills L.B. Area Pair

Two Long Beach area men were killed and a 12-year-old boy injured Saturday when their single-engine plane crashed into a hillside a quarter mile from the Oak Glen Job Corps Camp near San Bernardino.

Victor E. Anderson, 36, of 26403 Zephyr Ave., Harbor City, and Clarence B. Hansen, 36, of 3732 W. 171st St., Torrance, died in the crash.

Hansen was the owner and pilot of the four-seat Navion. His son, Dwight, was injured but is in satisfactory condition at Redlands Community Hospital.

Witnesses said the plane was apparently caught in a severe downdraft, sending it smashing into the hill. The craft burst aflame on impact, setting the brushy hillside ablaze.

Hansen and his party had taken off from Torrance Airport about 10:30 a.m. and flown to the Banning Airport to pick up spare parts for the plane.

Peace Corps Director

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seymour Greben, a former volunteer in Malaysia and the Philippines, was named Saturday as the Peace Corps' new director of recruiting. Greben, from Carmichael, Calif., joined the Peace Corps in 1963.

TOM BUCY — WEARY, BEATEN, FOR NOW

CHANNEL VICTIM WILL TRY IT AGAIN

By TONY CILLO

Professional swimming is a solitary kind of sport.

Tom Bucy, 29-year-old marathon swimmer and law student, said that Friday night.

On a bright Saturday morning in the Catalina Channel, all the loneliness of the sport clung to him.

He was "seasick" and his stomach was cramped. Alone, he had to decide to throw away more than three hours of disciplined swimming already done in his try to break the record for crossing the channel.

His stomach in a turmoil, his body tired, his face tight in disappointment, Bucy came back aboard his accompaniment boat, the "Golden Iris," at 9:17 a.m. — ending three hours and 20 minutes of good, steady stroking that started at Arrow Point on Catalina and was moving him toward Point Fermin on the mainland.

He had covered 7 1/2 of the 22 miles.

"God, what a waste!"

THE WORDS broke out as the 6-foot-2 swimmer went for a deck chair. "It's an individual effort" he had said the night before. Now, it had become another kind of individual effort.

Bucy looked back at the water where a light chop gently rocked his pace dory. He talked about the effect the up-and-down movement of the water had had upon him. Then he went below ... and slept in fatigue.

He'll try again. No date has been set yet.

Bucy, a group supervisor at the county's juvenile facility in Sylmar, wanted to break a 13-year-old channel crossing record set by Tom Park, a Canadian. That was nine hours and 10 minutes.

Bucy, ranked third in the World Professional Swimming Federation and winner of several international swimming events, as well as his sponsor, Jay Fiorella, owner of Chez Jay Restaurant in Santa Monica, were hoping for a crossing time of 8 1/2 hours.

The goal: "I feel that the sport is kind of natural for down here," said Bucy, "and before I can promote this type of thing—professional marathon swimming — I have to have some kind of name."

THE CHALLENGE for the 230-pound Bucy started at 5:57 a.m. as he stood on a slim piece of land at the Point and took to the water. Watching from the accompaniment boat were Fiorella, the sponsor; Robert S. Rose, skipper of the boat and president of Bosco Petroleum Corp.; the skipper's son, Kevin, 8; Peter Malatesta, the skipper's assistant, and Louise Bucy, the swimmer's wife.

Already in the water in the dory were Paul Matthews, lifeguard and champion rower, of Hermosa Beach, and Pano Caporoni, 20, a Swiss student at USC.

Bucy's plunge into the water was the climax of a Friday night of little sleep, much excitement, and some last minute preparations.

In the fading light of evening, Bucy chatted. What's it take to make a swim like that? "A pure heart," he smiled. "It's man against himself," he added and talked about the tendency of people to identify with others in a struggle.

(The following morning, when Young Kevin asked innocently, "Why do you want to swim across?" Bucy quipped, "I'm an Arabian madman!")

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — An income tax consultant, who allegedly kept gambling winnings stashed in a desk in his home, said Saturday he was robbed of $36,000 in $100 bills.

Elmer O. Armstrong told police he discovered the theft when he returned home after being out of his house all night.

Four Southlanders Killed in Traffic

Four Southland residents — including an Azusa woman struck by an auto as she dashed across the Newport Freeway — were dead Saturday in auto accidents.

Killed were:
—ALICE RODRIGUEZ, 28, of Azusa.

—MAE O. CLAYTON, 47, of 26239 President St., Harbor City.

—LESTER ALBERT CHARLE, 57, of 144 E. Bay St., Costa Mesa.

—ELLA ELEANOR WALTZ, 52, of 140 E. 20th St., Costa Mesa.

The Highway Patrol said the Rodriguez woman was dead on arrival at Orange County Medical Center at 12:17 a.m. after she was hit while crossing the north-bound lanes of the Newport Freeway north of Warner Avenue.

She was seeking help after parking her car on the freeway shoulder when it overheated, officers said.

The woman was hit by a car driven by Donald Lee Jones, 30, of 714 14th St., Huntington Beach, who was not cited.

Mag Clayton was killed when the car she was riding in was struck broadside by

Ex-Farm Chief

Allen Kline Dies

WESTERN SPRINGS, Ill. (AP) — Allan B. Kline, 73, former president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, died Friday while visiting relatives in Vinton, Iowa, it was disclosed Saturday.

Kline operated a farm in Benton County, Iowa, when he was named president of the farm bureau in 1947. He served until 1954.

another auto on Lomita Boulevard at Normandie Boulevard in Carson at 3:10 p.m.

Her companion, Lemuel Price Jr., 42, was in fair condition at Harbor General Hospital.

The other driver, Solofua T. Mapu, 24, of 342 W. 234th Place, Wilmington, was uninjured. He was not cited, police said.

The Costa Mesa couple was killed when their auto piled into the rear of a semi-trailer truck on Highway 15, four miles east of the Mojave Desert city of Baker, sheriff's deputies said.

Both were ejected from the car in the 8:30 a.m. accident. The victims were on their way home from Las Vegas, deputies said.

War Widow Faces Staggering Bills, Marine Corps 'Sorry'

The problem of Janice Thompson, who lost her husband in Vietnam only a month ago, faces many other war widows — that of government regulations which limit medical benefits to survivors after the day the soldier dies. She wrote to The Independent, Press-Telegram's "ACTION LINE" to "sound off" against the injustice.

By MARY NEISWENDER, Staff Writer

For 21-year-old Janice Thompson the world was really alive on May 2, 1968. Her husband wrote that he would be coming home — out of the service forever — in less than three months, in time to be with her for the birth of their children. She was expecting twins.

Mickie Thompson would return to college, graduate, get the job he wanted. Their family would grow and they would live happily.

This was the world they had planned.

But in a steaming Vietnam jungle their world ended when he was killed by a Viet Cong bullet. The shock, a week later, killed one of the children she carried. It still threatens the life of the other, born prematurely.

Yet the young widow has more trouble ahead, Marine Corps officials say.

She must pay one-fourth of all her medical expenses beginning on the day her husband was killed. It's regulations, and the military lives by regulations. The circumstances, all agree, are "unusual."

All are sympathetic, a little apologetic, but all say the same: "Rules are rules."

She tells her story:

They were married two years ago last Jan. in Toledo, their home town. Mickie had enlisted in the Marine Corps a year before they were married.

IT HAD BEEN a big church wedding, she recalled, and they came to California together, to be near the Marine barracks where he was stationed.

Last January he was sent overseas. He went to Okinawa first, then to Vietnam. But it wasn't to be for a long time, because he was due out in August. His four years would be up.

Mickie (Sgt. Howard Michael Thompson) had been a student at Bowling Green and at Toledo University before he joined the Marines. He played a little semi-pro baseball. "When we got to California," the young widow says sadly, "he took some courses at Long Beach City College and planned to go to the Los Angeles Police Academy in August — that was when he was due home."

But his plans ended in the Quang Tri Province of Vietnam, she learned from government notification and letters from his friends.

"His buddy told me Mickie was shot in the arm first, but was able to move, and led his squad to safety across a river. But while he was crossing, he was shot in the chest."

THE SERGEANT was airlifted to the USS Iwo Jima, where he died two hours later of what government sources said was a rifle wound in the chest.

Six and a half months pregnant, but still working at the General Telephone Directory offices, the young woman came home from work the evening of May 2 to be met by the Marine Corps casualty officer. As gently as possible the officer did his job: told her her husband was dead.

The shock caused the premature birth of her twins a week later.

One of the babies — 3-pound, 4-ounce James Michael — survived only two days. The other, Michele Annette, 2 pounds, 12 ounces, was placed under intensive care and still remains in an isolette in Long Beach Memorial Hospital.

"I wanted to bury my son with my husband in Toledo, but my doctor recommended against it. He said it would be too much for me."

So, the young widow made funeral arrangements for her child in Long Beach, and then returned for her Toledo home to bury her husband. Her first baby, fighting for her life in the hospital, was 11 days old when her father was buried.

BUT THE YOUNG widow's troubles didn't end when she buried her husband and baby son.

As her baby daughter fought for her life, hospital and medical bills mounted. In addition to a charge of $22 per day for use of an isolette, a special crib which controls oxygen and heat, other hospital charges, pediatrician and doctor bills have reached almost astronomical proportions.

One-quarter of all bills must be paid by the widow.

"Those are the regulations," a Marine Corps spokesman said. "The widow must assume 25 per cent of all medical costs from the time of her husband's death."

"We took this case, however, all the way to Washington. Everyone agrees that this should be classified as an unusual case, and that the military regulations should bend in such cases. But they don't."

Veterans' affairs officials are helpless, too.

"There's a burial allowance we can get for her, but that's it," a spokesman said.

The Veterans Administration hospital and the Navy Hospital have no accommodations for obstetrical cases.

Rep. Craig Hosmer, read to cut through governmental red tape to aid needy veterans and their families, said Friday he would "look into it," but registered little hope.

"THESE REGULATIONS are cut and dried, and there's little chance of getting around them."

"I've already paid $400 of the hospital bill," Mrs. Thompson says, "but it'll take a while for the rest — I just started back to work."

"This regulation," she says frankly, "should be changed in cases like mine — and there are probably many cases similar. I'm not desitute — I can work. But there are other women — war widows — who can't work, or have children at home who prevent them from working. How could they pay big medical bills?"

"They'd be in worse shape than I am — they'd be without a husband and deep in debt. I can work — and I've got my daughter."

"The only bad part about working," she adds, "is that it prevents me from seeing my girl three times a day. Now I can only visit her at night, when I come home from work."

"I can't touch her, and she probably doesn't know I'm around, but it makes me feel better to see her. She's all I have now" — the baby and debts that keep mounting.

'I Was Forced to Face Truth About Myself'

EXCLUSIVE:

By MRS. ANN LEVY
N. Curson Ave., Los Angeles
As told to Gloria Marshall
In an exclusive copyrighted letter

"When my husband jokingly referred to me as his 'plush pony' I was forced to face the real truth. It has been just ten weeks since I walked into your Beverly Hills salon and weighed in at 172½ pounds. My latest progress check showed a total loss of 30 pounds and 40 inches, but you have given me much more — a warm and friendly atmosphere with people who are genuinely interested in helping me with my program."

"Your reducing program is the easiest and fastest way to lose those extra pounds and unwanted inches. I've tried dieting many times, but just couldn't seem to keep the weight off. In eight weeks I lost 25¼ inches and 15¼ pounds. Everyout at the salon has been very helpful and encouraging, and have helped make reducing fun. I look forward to my visits and feel better every time I leave the salon."

Mrs. Mardell Doty,
Wingate Ave., Tujunga

"Your method is the quickest way to lose weight I have ever tried . . . I know, because I've been on many of them. When I had to buy a size 18 dress a couple of months ago, I decided to stop in at your salon on the way home. You guaranteed me to not only lose weight but inches too! I've lost 20 pounds and 35 inches—from a size 18 to a size 11! The best money I ever spent. P.S.: My husband stopped playing cards Friday nights and is taking me out again!"

Mrs. Gladys Heath,
Ratburn Ave.,
Northridge

Gloria Marshall has helped thousands of women regain their youthful, slender figures. The above is a sampling of the hundreds of letters she has received, telling of how she has completely revamped her patrons' lives. Declaring, "I haven't met a woman yet, whose figure I couldn't improve," Miss Marshall invites you to see for yourself how she can guarantee a lovelier new figure quickly and safely without pills, strenuous exercise or starvation diet. Babysitter, 13, Raped Then Slain

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Police say a 13-year-old babysitter was raped and slain in a Sunset District home Saturday as her three young charges slept peacefully nearby.

The victim was identified as Lana Panchak, who Mrs. Marian Bain, 24, said worked for her as a babysitter several times before.

Mrs. Bain told police she went out with friends for supper Friday night, leaving Lana with Pamela, 7, Ronald, 6, and Deanna, 2.

Mrs. Bain said when she returned around 2:15 a.m. she found Lana sprawled on the front room floor, her throat slashed and her clothes disarrayed. The coroner's office said the girl had been raped.

The three Bain children were unharmed. Mrs. Bain is separated from her husband, police said.

Now, at last, you can lose pounds and inches quickly and safely this one absolutely guaranteed way: and, you can do it without starvation diets, pills or strenuous exercise.

The Gloria Marshall System is a personalized program of complete figure and posture improvement combined with expert instruction on every facet of beauty. To our knowledge, no other weight reducing system can, or does, offer our services. We have developed a variety of machines to banish every correctable figure fault. It is a relaxing, quick and easy way to lose those extra pounds and inches. We can help you regain and keep a trim, poised, youthful shape and at the same time release muscle tension!

Appearance Affects Personality
Overweight is not only damaging to health but too many pounds make a woman appear years older than she is. Every woman knows that her personal appearance does affect her personality. Overweight can change a normally vivacious woman into one who is depressed, irritable and unhappy. The more dissatisfied she becomes with herself, the more she is likely to overeat. She gets less and less exercise and loses the energy to lead an active life.

You can look lovely as long as you live. Today, it is easier than ever to look like a new woman. We will take care of the difficult part. Call today for your free treatment and figure analysis with no obligation. We will discuss your figure problems with you and show you how we can guarantee results . . . remember, it's never too late to be lovely.

Results Are Guaranteed
Every patron receives a WRITTEN GUARANTEE that she will reach her predetermined dress size within a specified period of time. If the promised results are not attained on schedule, Gloria Marshall will furnish additional treatments until the guarantee is fulfilled at no further cost or obligation to the patron.

How Can We Guarantee Results?
A personalized progress chart is prepared so that each time you visit the salon a trained counselor can guide you toward your specific goals. We keep a constant check on your progress toward a lovelier figure. In this way, you reach your desired goal in the shortest time . . . and for the least expense.

How Much Does All This Cost?

Ministry Students Play Realistic Convict Roles

By DON REEDER

LEAVENWORTH, Kan. (AP) — The slim young man wearing hornrimmed spectacles and a khaki inmate's uniform walks among some of the country's toughest convicts in the exercise yard of Leavenworth's U.S. penitentiary.

He appears a bit nervous and out of place — more like, say, a seminary student than a felon.

And he is.

Since last fall 33 students and faculty members from the St. Paul Methodist School of Theology in Kansas City have spent 30-hour periods playing the role of convicts — about half that time locked in the unnerving isolation of a solitary confinement cell.

The program, believed the only one of its kind in the nation, is part of what St. Paul officials call their new "radical curriculum." It's a carefully plotted effort thrusting would-be clergymen into situations where they learn the world as it really is.

THESE SAME students also work in mental institutions and hospital emergency rooms, sleep in flop-houses, chat with homosexuals, drink coffee with suburban housewives, ride in police cars and enter Playboy clubs.

If our students are to minister, they must know the people and their problems," explained Dr. W. Paul Jones, a mustached, 38-year-old St. Paul faculty member who accompanied the first group through Leavenworth.

"If you can't come to grips and face these problems, you've got no business in the ministry."

Three students were asked to recall their stay in the penitentiary. They were John Blinn, 24, Willsall, Mont.; Emil Muhlhäusen, 32, Ellsworth, Wis., and Dick Talley, 24, Bogalusa, La.

"I wasn't exactly calm," the husky, curly-haired Blinn admitted when asked about that Friday afternoon ride to the prison. "I really didn't know what to expect."

SHOWED, finger-printed and photographed, the students were dressed in khaki uniforms to distinguish them from regular prisoners, who wear blue.

Muhlhäusen told of a life term inmate who jeered:

"When you walk out that front door, I know you don't give a damn for us."

While no harm has come to any seminarians wandering about the prison without guards, there have been some nervous moments.

Talley said he was on the fifth tier of a cellblock talking to a prisoner serving a term for murder when the inmate remarked casually:

"You know, guys around here got mighty poor eyesight. If I was to throw you over that rail, nobody would see a thing."

Talley still doesn't know whether the convict was serious but admitted, "I was never so scared in all my life."

AFTER VISITING the prison honor farm about a mile outside the walls, the students were taken for the night to individual cells in the segregation building, an escape-proof fortress with a series of double-locked doors known to prisoners as "building 63."

For some inexplicable reason, the students agreed, the first thing they did in solitary was almost unconsciously look around for a way to escape or commit suicide — although they knew they would only be there a brief time.

"You've sure got to come to terms with yourself in that place," said Talley.

For the next 12 to 15 hours the only sign of humanity seen by the imprisoned students was the eyeball of a guard occasionally squinting through a peephole in the cell door.

Some did exercises, others napped, few mentally prepared sermons.

AND THEY all tried to suppress a horrifying, un-

MAKE-BELIEVE CONVICTS

Shown against a created background of a present-day prison cell block, these three seminarians know something of what life really is behind bars. They are among 33 students of the St. Paul Methodist School of Theology, Kansas City, Kan., who have spent 30 hours living as prisoners do in the U.S. penitentiary at Leavenworth to gain insight into one of the real problems of society they will encounter as ministers. From left, John Blinn, Dick Talley and Earl Muhlhäusen.

reasoning fear gnawing at the back of their minds that somehow a mistake might be made, and they would be left behind when the others returned to the seminary.

"Almost to a man," said Dr. Tex Sample, "everyone who came out of solitary expressed hostility. It's not that the people at the prison weren't good to us. They were. But it was just the idea of being penned up." Sample, a sociology professor also made the prison tour.

Late Saturday morning the seminarians were released from segregation and spent several hours mingling with prisoners.

Muhlhäusen recalled one inmate told him he had 24 years to serve and intended to spend the time planning to kill somebody — anyone.

OTHERS complained about needing a better rehabilitation program and more job opportunities for released convicts, Blinn said.

After a discussion period with volunteer inmates and prison officials on effects of their visit, the students left Leavenworth to drive back to Kansas City.

"I didn't realize," Muhlhäusen said, "the tension I had been under until I walked out that door. It was like 200 pounds being taken off my shoulders."

"The church," said Blinn, "must revise its attitude toward ex-convicts as well as hippies, homosexuals and others. They won't come to us. We've got to go them."

Castro Says Educational Reform Underway in Cuba

New York Times Service

MIAMI — A far-reaching educational reform is underway in Cuba, Premier Fidel Castro has announced.

Although Castro gave only a few sketchy details of the reform, he described it as "the greatest educational revolution ever carried out anywhere." He strongly indicated that one of its aims was to avert or minimize student unrest and disillusionment.

In a graduation speech delivered last Monday at a technological institute near Havana, the premier hinted that Cuba is not immune to social problems caused by youth alienation.

"We are thinking about the world panorama today in which students of all countries are practically rebelling against irritating privileges and injustices," he said. It was the first official Cuban comment on student agitation both in the west and in the east.

Mummies on Sale

CAIRO (AP) — Tourists soon will be able to buy a Pharaonic mummy or a statue of an ancient Egyptian god if they can pay in dollars or pounds sterling. The Antiquities Department announced a shop selling "authentic" treasures from the stores of its Cairo museum is to be opened at the Great Pyramid of Giza. No prices were quoted.

New Train Speeds at 145 MPH

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — After many fits and starts and re-fittings of various mechanisms, the Sikorsky Aircraft Division of the United Aircraft Corp. brought its new TurboTrain onto the Penn Central Railroad's test track between New Brunswick and Trenton, N.J., to show what it could do. It did 145 miles an hour, permanently throttled back from its top 170 miles an hour because on the curving tracks of the New Haven Railroad, for which it is destined it probably will never get over 120 miles an hour.

The TurboTrain also proved on that recent morning ride that it does a better job over the same track than does the long-heralded, and as yet undeveloped, electro-powered Budd Co. experimental train scheduled for the New York-Washington run. The TurboTrain rides smoother, steadier, transmits less vibration to the passenger through the seat and the floor, and jiggles up and down considerably less than the Budd train did at comparable speeds.

THE SIKORSKY people claim their experimental train is ready to go into service in a matter of weeks or a month. Crew training is the next order of business.

Just one year ago federal officials predicted that the Budd electric would make its first regularly scheduled passenger run on Oct. 29. That was October 1967. There is little evidence that the 120-mph train is any closer to an October 1968 debut than it was this time last year to an October 1967 debut.

The TurboTrain carries its own power. It has two engine cars, one in front and the other at the rear of the three-car train. Canadian National Railways is getting a seven-car TurboTrain, with five passenger units, between the power cars.

The New Haven's train has three jet-type engines in each power car. Each engine is rated at 550 horsepower. The engineer shifts no gears; he just moves one control lever for speed and brakes.

THE ENGINES are mounted in the elevated dome-ends of the cars, where also the engineer sits in a small control booth at the front right end.

In the lower levels of the engine cars, and in the middle, all-passenger car, two-by-two, airplane-type seats with adjustable backs and built-in folding tables provide a roomy, relaxing ride. Here the jet engines are far enough removed to that the engine sound is not too objectionable.

The train took a gentle S curve at better than 120 miles an hour; one would not sense the curve from any motion in the seat.

The American taxpayers are paying for the developmental and experimental work that is producing both the Budd train for the Penn Central and TurboTrain for the New Haven. The Transportation Department has $90 million to play with in developing high-speed train transportation along the Atlantic Seaboard. It is leasing the TurboTrain from United Aircraft Corp. for a two-year demonstration on the New Haven's curving tracks for about $4.8 million for two years.

In addition, the Transportation Department will pay the New Haven Railroad $4.1 million for its operating costs.

Sikorsky officials say they hope to make the 230-mile New York-Boston run in 3 hours, 15 minutes, with four stops. Present trains do it in 4 hours, 15 minutes. They hope to average 79 miles an hour on the open road above New Haven; between that city and New York, their goal is in the high 50s.

SPATER SCULPTURE STILL REBELS' CAUSE

CSLB Activists Vow to Continue Militancy

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Education Editor

"Student-power" militancy will continue on the California State College at Long Beach campus — perhaps this summer, certainly in the fall.

Such is the prediction and the promise of two young prime movers in this past year's startling transformation of the onetime "mausoleum on the hill" into what has been called "the second most activist campus in the state college system" — after San Francisco State.

And when — or if — assorted rallies, mill-ins and picketing resume in coming months, the New Left rebels' "cause" assuredly will be erstwhile art student Bill Spater and his erotic, still-locked-away, sculpture.

ACTIVIST leaders Andor Skotnes, 21, a senior fine arts student, and Robert M. Ehrlich, 28-year-old English instructor, agree that the ban by State Colleges Chancellor Glenn S. Dumke provides "an issue very much alive here."

On May 21, the system's chief executive officer cancelled "for the time being" a planned "limited showing" of Spater's frankly sensual sculptures.

Realists both, Skotnes and Ehrlich know an overheated local issue such as this brings more students into the militant fold than even a crucial but remote one such as the Vietnam war.

WHEN MILITANCY made its first real move here, in November, picketing recruiters for the napalm manufacturer, Dow Chemical Co., no more than 75 demonstrators crowded into the Administration Building.

But in late May, in the week following the Spater decision, between 1,000 and 2,000 previously uncommitted students publicly voiced their displeasure over "academic censorship."

An even larger number, more than 7,000, came in late May to hear pacifist folksinger Joan Baez — who, instead of entertaining, turned the event into a music-less anti-war meeting.

SINCE THE beginning of this campus transformation, Skotnes and Ehrlich have played prominent roles, participating in most of the incidents. On May 29, however, when Long Beach police took into custody 43 students and a faculty member after a rowdy rally for Spater, neither was present.

"I'm a coward," the Brooklyn-born Ehrlich said later in an interview. "I ran when the cops appeared" — a fact scornfully tossed back to him at other meetings.

Skotnes then was testifying in a student conduct committee hearing investigating earlier demonstrations in which he reportedly was involved.

Each man holds a distinctive place in the local hierarchy of protest.

Skotnes, a native of South Africa, was active in the original Student Action Committee, a more moderate group which melded into the militant Students for a Democratic Society last year.

TIME AND TIDE —

There are indications the Kennedy assassination has shaken the morale of our men in Vietnam, which until recently has held up extremely well in the face of a steady barrage of undermining news. One L.B. mother has a letter from her son in Viet, clearly showing a change in attitude largely based on the tragedy. "What is America coming to?" He asks, and says the question is on the lips of his buddies. They wonder what kind of a country they're fighting for.

Tragedy of it is that the Kennedy killing was not basically the act of an American nor the product of a political contest here as so many quickly surmised. There's more tragedy in the fact that the war has been bad-mouthed by a lot of politicians at a time when our people are at the conference table and need solid support. Richard Nixon had the best idea when he said he'd keep his mouth shut on that issue during this delicate period. Doesn't anybody else understand anything?

Typical of ridiculous statements was one by an anti-war columnist who said Kennedy was the victim of a conspiracy involving everybody who disagreed with the columnist's viewpoint on the war. Obviously, the Vietnam war had nothing whatsoever to do with the gunfire in the Ambassador Hotel.

It is noteworthy that a great many people have attempted to use the Kennedy assassination to justify their positions on a variety of issues, no matter how remote or completely disconnected the relationship of the issue to the killing.

FOAM AND FROTH —

There's an irate father in town who is ready to sign a "contributing to the delinquency of a minor" complaint if he can identify the parents of a Wilson High senior who threw a party for some of the grads when they were supposed to be at Disneyland. He says his daughter and others got smashed on champagne dished out by the parents. Daughter, hung over but stubborn, won't give names.

Speaking of graduations, they say that valedictorians and salutatorians at many of these affairs make a great thing out of giving the old folks hell. One grandmother who went to the Poly exercises was shocked to learn what a rascal she is. . . . Oh well, give the kids another 20 years, and they'll be getting the same kind of hell from their offspring. Maybe even worse.

In newspaper parlance, any item is a story. Woman who called up here was asked by the "phone operator" if she wanted to give us a story. "Oh no, it's true," she said.

DRIFTWOOD — Rockefeller, according to people who heard him speak in this area the other day, needs to brush up on his reading technique. He stumbled, mispronounced and had quite a time, reading a prepared speech. His supporters say hopefully he does better off the cuff.

When Jane Addams Elem. School opens this fall, it will be the first time in 25 years there'll be no members of the Lee Stokes family enrolled. The line of visitors to USS New Jersey strings down her main deck (upper left), over gangway to Pier E (upper right) and 600 yards in a sinuous line to parking area. Beyond the horizon are about half a million more people who tried to see the 65,000-ton battlewagon but, instead, became bogged down on the Gerald Desmond Bridge, the Terminal Island Freeway, Vincent Thomas Bridge and any other route drivers could think of to get near the huge ship. Communications Gap Top Concern of Youth

By BOB ANDREW

"Our society may not be sick, but it sure has got one hell of a cold."

That was the summation of Paul Devan, director of the Los Angeles Urban Training Center of the Office of Economic Opportunity, for the Delinquency Prevention Conference held Saturday at Washington Junior High School.

"Both parents work 40 or 50 hours a week, buy a color TV and big cars, go off on a vacation and the kids stay home and smoke pot," Devan said.

Devan said much of the conference had been spent "in ducking the issues" but, even so, several constructive suggestions had been made.

Among the issues that were touched on, in the panel discussions that concluded the day-long conference, were the breakdown of the family, lack of employment opportunities for youth, and alienation of youth toward the police.

Most important, according to the reaction of the teen-age audience, was the breakdown in communication between youth and virtually everyone: parents, police, ministers, and even the government that "will let them fight but not vote."

One relevant response to the audience's quest for communication came from Sgt. Deo Genignani, representing the community relations division of the Long Beach Police Department.

"There is a program under way to get the police officers out of their cars and give them an opportunity to talk to the youth," he said. "But you must understand that with the case load there just isn't time to socialize."

Sgt. Genignani said police want to talk to young people at the Teen Centers and in the club meetings. "But we want to be in the club meetings. But we want to be in the club meetings."

Miss Alice Sampson, a psychologist for the California Department of Rehabilitation, suggested that less time should be spent trying to place the blame for delinquency and more spent discussing responsibility.

She said that, while the parent is responsible for the training of a child in the home, the child must eventually become responsible for his own actions.

In his summation, Devan defined two ideas that had come from sessions earlier in the day and that offered a new approach to preventing delinquency.

One was organization of a conference for parents at which they could discuss parental responsibility and ways to improve communication with their children.

The other was a redirection of training in the home.

"All of our training of a child is directed toward what not to do," he said, "don't touch the stove, don't cross the street. But nobody ever says what to do."

Carl Wallace, executive director of the Long Beach Commission on Economic Opportunities, was keynote speaker at the morning session. State SEN. George Deukemejian spoke at the afternoon session on a bill he has introduced in the California Legislature to establish youth service bureaus in four cities to coordinate activities for the prevention of juvenile delinquency.

The conference had been billed as an opportunity for youth to tell the adults what projects they wanted in Long Beach to prevent delinquency, especially if Long Beach were selected for one of the bureaus proposed in Deukemejian's bill.

Hobbyists End Show Today

The largest number of hobbies ever exhibited in a Long Beach Recreation Department Hobby Show are on display in the 1968 edition of the show, which closes a four-day stand at 9 tonight.

The show is being held in the Municipal Auditorium beginning at noon. There is no admission.

"I do not believe anyone could visit this show and not find something enjoyable to become wrapped up in," commented Mrs. Lois De Lano, supervisor of arts, crafts and hobbies for the department and manager of the show.

The show combines the avocations of youth and adults. For example, 15-year-old George Kosanovich has a display of near life-sized woodcarvings of Abraham Lincoln, Daniel Boone and other early American patriots. The Society of Early Recorded Music has a compelling display of old phonographs and sheet music.

Two outstanding animal displays are those of Mr. and Mrs. Art Mathews, who have their pet ocelot at the show, and of the Akita Club of America whose members are showing the rare breed akita dog strain which originated in Japan.

Besides the exhibits, there is a continuous presentation of entertainment acts, exhibiting specialties and vaudeville, from 1 p.m. to closing time.

Facts Push Us Toward Gun Control

STRONG gun control legislation at both the state and federal levels now seems possible—because of what one man described as "hysteria."

The label was applied by a National Rifle Association spokesman ridiculing demands for effective regulation of firearms.

At first legislators in Washington and Sacramento apparently assumed that the shock of outrage would soon subside. Committees in the U.S. House of Representatives and the California Assembly deadlocked on bills for tighter controls.

BUT THE protests from the grass roots have not gone away. Instead, they have begun to take effect. Local governing bodies such as the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors are speaking out for gun legislation.

Delegates to the United States Conference of Mayors joined the chorus. Many of them favor the stern measure of restricting possession of hand guns to law enforcement officials.

Ten U.S. Senators have introduced a compulsory registration and licensing bill that goes well beyond anything, seriously, considered by congress. The chief sponsor, Sen. Joseph D. Tydings, D-Md., has demanded an investigation of the gun lobby.

A California assemblyman, Winfield A. Shoemaker, D-Santa Barbara, is demanding an investigation specifically of the National Rifle Association's activities. He also is planning a new, tough bill.

IF ALL THIS is wild emotionalism, it is supported by cold, grim facts that have been too long ignored.

In 1966 guns were used in 6,552 murders, 43,500 assaults and 59,300 robberies in the United States, according to official figures compiled by Sen. Tydings.

In 1966 guns were used in 6,552 murders in this country. The total for Britain was 29; Japan, 37; Holland, none. One difference: These three countries have strict gun control laws.

No one contends that gun control is a cure-all for lawlessness. It is one small piece in a preventive mosaic that must evolve over a long period. But it can be applied almost immediately. There is a real prospect that it will be — if the people persist in the sort of "hysteria" that causes reluctant and apathetic lawmakers to spring to action.

that, because of the states' special duty to protect the welfare of children, a restricted New York state law did not violate civil rights.

THE MEASURE introduced by Sen. Robert J. La Follette, R-Ore., has already cleared the Senate. Sale, distribution or lending of "harmful matter" to minors would be made a misdemeanor. The other measure covers essentially the same ground.

According to the committee chairman, Assemblyman W. Craig Biddle, R-Riverside, Reagan is fighting a losing battle. The 5-5 committee deadlock on pornography legislation developed last year. Democratic members continue to take an inflexible stand.

We hope the governor will refuse to let the issue die. Solicitude for the purveyors of dirty books to children is not exactly a tenable attitude in an election year. The Supreme Court has failed to influence the Solid Five, but perhaps the force of public opinion and the advice of more sensible Democrats will do the job.

Anti-Administration

EDITOR:

Tom Wicker put in print what many political pundits were saying in private.

The combined Kennedy-McCarthy vote was an anti-administration vote.

The Humphrey "politics of joy" never got off the ground. Our tragedy underlies the hypocrisy involved in that slogan.

Even as the Republicans committed political "hari kari" in '64 a repetition of a "lemming like" rush to death by the Democrats seems in the offing.

Every Democrat from dog catcher to governor will bear the odium if the administration forces dictate a candidate tied to its unpopular policies. Local candidates should be in the vanguard in saying no to political suicide. We could recover from four years of Nixon but not from all our good local men going down the drain.

Gun Control Plea

EDITOR:

Congress recently passed a crime bill with an inadequate gun control provision. Yesterday the House Judiciary Committee rejected a stronger gun control law despite the public outcry for action.

But no matter what new legislation is proposed to register guns and license their owners, Congress will do nothing until and unless it is convinced that the people want such laws. We have fought for many years, without success, against the organized lobbies in Washington and their allies in the Congress.

I propose that each community in every hamlet and city in our country form a Citizens Committee for Proper Gun Control. Each committee should advise its representative and senators in Washington that Congress should not adjourn this year until it passes proper gun control legislation.

No one I know in Congress wants to eliminate the right of peaceful citizens to own and operate guns for hunting or sports purposes. Licensing gun owners and registering their weapons will not abridge this right anymore than auto and driver registration and licensing prevent you from operating your car.

Without popular support, a good gun control law will never pass. With forceful support, the gun lobby can be overcome.

Another Post-War Population Spurt Seen

From Our L.A. Bureau

LOS ANGELES COUNTY faces another population spurt after the Vietnam War.

This is the prediction of George Marr, regional population planning specialist, who noted there has been a recent slowdown in new inhabitants.

Some one thousand newcomers a month were streaming into Los Angeles County in the early 1960s. It now has dipped to around 700 a month.

Fewer births in the depression years is one factor. Also, the migration of young job-seekers has been slowed by the war, according to the Marr theory. He figures many must remain close to their military reserve units. Others are serving in the armed services.

But in-migration will renew its zoom when the war ends, Marr theorizes.

Other smoggy siftings:

SLASH CANDIDATES — Promotional funds and building projects are the most likely candidates for slashes if supervisors decide to cut the 1968-69 budget. Among the projects that may face the ax: the downtown Los Angeles Music Center, the Southern California Visitor's Council, the $938,000 addition to the Long Beach County Building, the $1.2 million Health Center in Santa Monica.

WELFARE DISPARITY — The real reason some California politicians are concerned about an influx of out-of-state welfare recipients is the fact that some other states maintain such low welfare levels. Maximum in California for a family of four is $191, compared to $40 a month in Mississippi, $107 in Arizona, $130 in Nevada. A recent federal court ruling has invalidated California's welfare residency laws. That means a Mississippi family can increase its income almost five-fold by moving to California, where there will be no waiting for welfare eligibility.

DOOMSDAY DATE? — Los Angeles seer Helen Greenwood, who previously forecast much of the West Coast shoreline area will be swept away by tidal waves or earthquakes in 1968 and 1969, now has pinpointed the trouble. She says an asteroid crash in the ocean June 25 or June 26, causing the tidal waves. Mrs. Greenwood in the Los Angeles world, an who claims to have predicted the deaths of both President Kennedy and Robert Kennedy.

ECONOMY BLOC MELLOWS — Howard Jarvis, United Organizations vice president and perennial campaigner for less county spending, stunned County supervisors by saying: "The taxpayers I represent are wiser than they used to be, and have no hope your board will reduce spending a nickel... the only question is how much are you going to raise the proposed budget?"

Dissent Vote Loose Enough To Go GOP

THE MAN WHO was Number 2 among prospects for the presidency of San Francisco State College can talk like a president, or a pundit or a scholar with the facility of genuineness.

Or he can use another genre, as he did after leading a California State College at Long Beach memorial service to Sen. Robert F. Kennedy: "Black people believed in the cat."

Dr. Joseph White, 35, is a college professor, clinical psychologist, assistant to State College Chancellor Glenn Dumke for the Educational Opportunities Program on all 19 state college campuses, and black.

He'll decide this summer about jumping into politics. Right now it sounds like yes and it sounds big — first Congress, then the U.S. Senate. As faculty adviser to Students for Kennedy and a man with an obsession about relevant politics, White says there's no waiting this time.

In 1963, after President Kennedy's assassination, "there was a long period of mourning because we had no decision to make. But now we have to decide what to do in November; we don't have the privilege of a long bereavement."

Joe White says there's no hip pocket in America strong enough to contain the determination for change among the young, the black or "the deserted peoples on plantations, on reservations or the Mexican-American barrios."

And so, he says, "I could bolt to the Republican Party for a ticket headed by Rockefeller — of course you know we're not going to go for Nixon. It depends on who Rocky appoints to replace Kennedy. If it's Lindsay (New York Mayor), his stock will go up."

SUPPORT for Vice President Humphrey depends on Humphrey's decisions, said White. "He must decide, if he moves toward us, how much he would lose from the establishment support. If Humphrey does not win on the first go-round at Chicago there's a chance for a change-oriented ticket and it will grow with each ballot."

California, in its voting, "has never made sense to me," says Dr. White, singling out the electoral success of Dr. Max Rafferty and Ronald Reagan "who's romancing the nation and not taking care of the problems in the state."

But a part of that senselessness, in White's view, is that brilliant minds in the universities are not entering politics. Those who can lead are not taking that responsibility.

Dr. White is taking the responsibility and doesn't mind being appraised as "an emerging figure in the state — one who wants to create a shadow and take advantage of the substance." Specifically, his EOP work will be operating on all 19 state college campuses by 1969, a shadow power base with indisputable substance.

THE SUBSTANCE extends with his outspoken advocacy of student power, "the only consumers who are never consulted. Teachers are making the determinations, making education in the image of their own experience and not dealing with the world's future."

White is committed to making education more relevant to everybody, including especially the student who "takes tests, gets a degree and learns nothing."

Above all, White would have universities become "the engineer of social change" as the agricultural universities were in America's yesterday. White's threat is not violence, but one of excellence and preparation to besiege what White considers to be certain moldy ramparts of exclusion in this nation.

Do They Want to Get Off?

WAS WESTERN man listening to D. S. Parker?

Probably not. Certainly the parliaments of the most privileged and affluent minority in the world were not giving ear to him — or any other similar voice.

For that matter, few of Mr. Parker's audience were listening. They were too busy thinking about cutting foreign aid and about how they may withdraw from the world.

Mr. Parker is president of the U.S. National Association of Manufacturers. He spoke to the Canadian Manufacturing Association at Halifax, Nova Scotia.

"TWO BILLION people throughout the world are going to ignite a giant social upheaval if the rich countries continue to ignore their discontent," said Mr. Parker, who is chairman of the Parker Pen Company. Mr. Parker cannot be faulted. His statement is accurate.

But almost no one is listening. Britain, the United States, France, Belgium, Italy, West Germany, the Netherlands, and other Western areas of less affluence are now emotionally concerned with their own problems — not the world's. They will in time be sorry for this, but it may then be too late.

RALPH

It does no good at all to point out the direct relationship between problems commonly shared around the world.

Britain almost suddenly, for example, finds out that it has a race, or color, or problem. There are parades and protests that rival those in a Mississippi or Alabama town. But rare is the British citizen who considers that it is lack of jobs and food and a plenty of low living standards that have caused several hundred thousand West Indians and Africans to arrive on his shores.

MORE THAN a dozen cities in the United States reflect the overcrowding, lack of opportunity and poor living standards in Puerto Rico. Every large U.S. city must cope with an immigration of several millions of poorly educated and untrained white and black people from the relatively underdeveloped Southeastern states.

Spot checks by United Nations agencies indicate that the greatest percentage population growth rate today is in Africa. But the birth rates in all Asia (Japan excepted) are climbing. India and China and other areas of Asia have had to combat large famine areas.

Another U.N. agency, the Food and Agricultural Organization, is not able to obtain accurate statistics, but its experts believe they are conservative when they estimate that somewhere around 10 to 15 per cent of the world's population is suffering from malnutrition. Proteins especially are short.

Put into numbers, those percentages of 10 to 15 per cent mean there are somewhere between 300 to 450 million people who are hungry every day. The spin-off in diseases of children and adults is staggering and most unpleasant to contemplate.

A PART of the anti-American and anti-Western sentiments that boil up here and there is based on this privileged position.

Western man is a minority. He constitutes a minority that steadily grows smaller as populations of less developed continents and peninsulas burgeon.

Nonetheless, there is evident a growing wish to withdraw from the world. The present U.S. Congress, with a record of unbelievable liveliness, reacts to this attitude of "Stop the world, I want to get off."

It is an ironic fact that many of the loudest voices demanding to get off are included in the membership of the organization which Mr. Parker now heads.

They aren't listening to him, or anyone else whose facts are unpleasant.

Today's Book

THE MAKING OF A WORKERS' REVOLUTION! Russian Social Democracy, 1891-1903. By Allan K. Wildman. University of Chicago Press, $7.95.

One of the big troubles with us, vis a vis the Soviet Union (and it goes for the Communist nations in general) is that we do not really know what makes them tick. Not as Russians, so much, but as political ideologists. Communist regimes, and Communist political leaders, have definite goals and long-term aims, set down long ago, and changing only temporarily for the sake of expediency or strategy and tactics.

This vastly interesting book by Allan K. Wildman deals with a period long past, yet, because one of its main themes is the root of the split between the Mensheviks and the Bolsheviks, we learn how the latter think, and how they act to achieve their aims. The Bolsheviks were, after all, fated to seize the reins as Russia, and later in other countries.

Using memoirs, publications of the underground, and police sources, Wildman studies the technique of social action and agitation, the motivation of the participants in the Russian Social Democratic movement. He shows the forces being brought together in the shaping of the 1905 revolution, and the factors that isolated the Social Democrats from the Russian people, a leadership which the Bolsheviks were to take up. — N.

SHAMANISM: The Beginnings of Art. By Andreas Lommel. McGraw-Hill, $12.

A remarkable history, by Dr. Andreas Lommel, of the shaman (the witch doctor or sorcerer); his significance as social and cultural leader in primitive societies, his historical place as poet, artist and theatrical producer, his magic, sacrifices, costumes and masks.

The shaman was the focal figure of every hunter society; it was he who interceded with the spirit world. Dr. Lommel, director of Munich's National Museum of Ethnology, analyzes the factors which brought an individual to shaman-hood. There are many excellent examples of shamanism's art, from all parts of the world. — N.

L. A. C. SAYS

Death Penalty for Assassins

By L. A. COLLINS Sr.

IT WOULD BE interesting to know how many Americans today would oppose the death penalty for the assassins of Senator Robert Kennedy and Martin Luther King. This is especially so in view of the Supreme Court ruling which in effect would permit men or women to serve on a jury — if they testified they could do so without prejudice—even though they had scruples against inflicting the death penalty for those who have wantonly taken the lives of others.

The slayer of Senator Kennedy executed an act caused by his hatred of a man who spoke out in favor of our giving aid to Israel. The slayer was a Jordanian Arab—not a citizen of this country. He was here because he chose this country to live in. He defied our laws and with careful deliberation killed a man in cold blood.

decision is the greatest assurance of justice we have. When a state provides the death penalty for murder that jury should be empowered to inflict that penalty.

The Supreme Court decisions over recent years have greatly encouraged crime by making it more difficult to apprehend and convict those who are guilty. The innocent are protected by our jury system to a greater extent than any other people. It is now up to public opinion to impress their views on their legislators whether or not the death penalty should be applied to such assassins as those now so much in the news.

State Spending Outlook: More of Same

From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — California's expenditures — schools, health and welfare, highways, prisons, administration, and countless et ceteras — are increasing far faster than the income of the state's citizenry.

And inevitably, if the gap between state expenditures and personal income continues to widen, there will come a time when taxpayers simply will not have the capacity to pay for government or for the things government does.

This is according to figures prepared by the State Chamber of Commerce and printed in a frightening little pamphlet entitled "The Impact of State Taxes."

It was pointed out here last week that the old saw about "Everybody complains about the weather but nobody does anything about it" applies as well to taxes.

body does anything about it" applies as well to taxes.

JUST ABOUT anybody can spell

out what's wrong, but who can suggest a practical way to make things better?

One of the causes of the problem is the citizenry itself. During the years of World War II, the birth rate soared (as it historically soars during every period of war). Those great numbers of war babies are now children-producing adults, with the result that the numbers of babies born and growing up in California during the current decade far exceeds the number in any previous period of time.

And that's even not counting the children of families migrating here from other states.

And on the other end of the line people are living longer because of medical advances, so there are more old people still with us as well as more young people.

This means, logically, that even though the number of tax-paying wage earners has increased in California, the number of non-tax-paying dependents is increasing even faster.

Those dependents must be cared for. Either the wage earner does it directly, or he does it with his taxes. Either way, there is more and more of an assault on his wallet each year.

MORE YOUNG people means, of course, more schools, more teachers, more books, more playgrounds, more buses, more crossing guards, more everything.

And more old people means, in many cases, more bills, for somebody.

Medical science has also, it mustn't be forgotten, not only found ways to prolong the lives of healthy people, but of the infirm as well. Retarded "children" are now living into middle age, for example.

So the problem of the function and cost of government, already enormous, grows and grows. Just how much should government do for the citizen? Should it try to determine what needs doing and then try to raise enough money to do those things, or should it first raise a fixed amount of money and then tailor its functions to operate within that figure?

AND IN either case, from whom and according to what formula should money be taken in the form of what kind of taxes? Should a childless couple or a single person pay as much in taxes for schools as a family with seven children pays? Should a resident of Long Beach help pay for construction of rapid transit system between San Francisco and Oakland? Should a resident of Sacramento contribute toward the battle to reduce pollution in the Long Beach and Los Angeles Harbors?

And countless et ceteras.

There isn't a doubt in the world that the huge amount of money federal, state, and local governments take each year in taxes could be used more efficiently. There is also no doubt in the world that most people would like to have more services—better police and fire protection, more parks, more libraries, cleaner air, more and better roads, less crowded schools, and on and on—at less cost.

Legislators haven't found a way to do that, yet.

An Obscure Message From Moscow

New York Times Service

PARIS — The Soviet Union appears to have indicated indirectly that if Washington can persuade Moscow it is truly in earnest about seeking peace in Vietnam, Moscow will try and help the process along. Nevertheless, Russia has no intention of playing any role as mediator. It remains faithful to Hanoi's cause and takes pains to warn that if the Paris peace talks fail and the U.S.A. reacts by escalating the war, the U.S.S.R. will escalate right back.

This in substance is the message conveyed by Premier Kosygin to American officials through the unofficial channel of Cyrus Eaton, 85-year-old Cleveland millionaire. Eaton has long crusaded for better East-West relationships and has close contacts with the Kremlin. He was in Moscow last week and conferred with Kosygin, Brezhnev, Communist Party boss, subsequently assured him that he endorsed Kosygin's views one hundred per cent.

ACCORDING to Eaton, Kosygin inquired at length about Ambassadors

C. L. SULZBERGER

Harriman and Vance, who head the U.S. delegation here, and then asked Eaton to urge them to accept an honorable peace. At the Soviet premier's suggestion, Eaton saw the North Vietnamese ambassador in Moscow. He then flew to Paris and consulted with Hanoi's and Washington's peace negotiators.

Eaton felt Moscow was worried that the existing stalemate may wind up in a complete break and renewed widespread bombing. In that case, the Russians insist that, although they infinitely prefer peace, they will never abandon the North Vietnamese cause and will furnish enough aid to face any increased level of fighting.

Moscow seems persuaded that the deadlock here is caused by American, not North Vietnamese obduracy; that Washington, not Hanoi, wants to postpone progress in negotiations until after the U.S. elections. Kosygin plainly would have preferred Senator Kennedy as the next American president.

The Soviet leadership seemed to hold out the bait of large new markets for American enterprise if Vietnamese peace could first be arranged. The implied alternative was: no increased trade, even cooler relationships, and fresh efforts to bury the hatchet with Peking.

THIS informal message was passed on after Hanoi sent Le Duc Tho to Paris as its new chief negotiator. Tho is a member of the North-Vietnam Communist Party's politburo. The assumption is he came as a token of his government's willingness to make a real deal. On his way to Paris he stopped in Moscow and conferred with Soviet leaders.

Russia therefore appears to be putting on diplomatic pressure and urging speed, a quality not often noted in the U.S.S.R.'s own diplomatic negotiations. Furthermore, Russia is stressing the danger of deadlock leading to breakdown and a massive increase in fighting.

One hazard in the kind of indirect diplomacy apparently being practiced by Moscow now is lack of precision. However, the Soviets don't wish to put anything embarrassing in formal diplomatic writing. The impression conveyed is that they would like the United States to prepare a specific list of its ultimate objectives in Vietnam, even at the risk of repeating past statements, so both the negotiators and the world can study Washington's minimal terms for settlement.

THIS suggestion, of course, is unbalanced unless likewise addressed to Hanoi. Only when two lists of minimal terms are submitted will it be possible to examine the gaps between them. And at this stage of talks, when no advance has been registered, there is danger that any lists would not in fact represent real minimal terms but only bargaining positions.

Harriman and Vance are wise and experienced negotiators and acutely aware of this danger. Nevertheless, they are obviously eager to secure honorable peace if this is possible. They are also realistic and know the only outside capitals that may in the end be able to help this process along are Paris, where the talks are taking place and which has good relations with Hanoi, and Moscow, on which Hanoi depends largely for its survival capacity.

So far neither Paris nor Moscow has shown conviction that Washington is really prepared for adequate concessions. Is Hanoi? Paris has already reaffirmed to Harriman its urgent hope for settlement and in substance, if one looks for the essence of Eaton's message, so has Moscow. The question is how to get a token of Hanoi's readiness for compromise.

"The trouble is, these looks are getting too much publicity!"

Wait on Ted Kennedy, Labor Advises

WASHINGTON — A group of labor chiefs, acting informally while AFL-CIO President George Meany was in Europe, has advised Vice President Humphrey to give up any notion of offering Sen. Ted Kennedy the second spot in the Democratic ticket.

The labor leaders believe that

DREW PEARSON

Meany, though a Catholic like Kennedy, will back them up.

It is known that Humphrey, eager to ignite the young people and resume his pre-vice presidential role as a liberal crusader, seriously considered asking the last surviving Kennedy brother to be his running mate.

The labor leaders sent blunt word to Humphrey, however, that the United States is no monarchy and that political power shouldn't be handed down from brother to brother. It would be even worse, they contended, to offer Kennedy the vice presidential nomination as a "consolation prize" out of sympathy for the family.

They advised Humphrey to let young Kennedy spend the next few years proving himself. He is much too young to give any indication of his real character. If he shows any presidential qualifications, they said, then they might support him for higher office in the future.

Meanwhile, Kennedy has let intimates know that he isn't interested in the vice presidential nomination. He told them that he considers himself too young and inexperienced to be Vice President. In effect, he agrees with the labor leaders that he should concentrate for the next few years building up a record in the Senate.

WHILE VICE PRESIDENT Humphrey has been preaching "unity" in his speeches, unhappiness and disunity have broken out inside his campaign organization.

Aides are grumbling privately that Walter Mondale, the bright young Senator from Minnesota and one of Humphrey's campaign managers, won't let anyone else make a move unless he has given his personal approval.

He held up a contract with a Madison Avenue advertising agency for three weeks, they say, because he hadn't been present when the decision was reached.

He also delayed the organization of a citizens' committee for several weeks because he objected to the appointment of Robert Short a Minneapolis businessman, as coordinator.

Campaign aides also complain that Mondale has kept adding people to the payroll until the cost of running the Humphrey headquarters has soared so high that it has appalled the thrifty Humphrey. Yet Mondale has turned away volunteers, who have offered their services free of charge.

One of President Johnson's most skilled advance men, Chuck Lipsen of Retail Clerks, volunteered his services to the Humphrey campaign three months ago. Mondale still hasn't found anything for him to do.

As a front man, Sen. Mondale radiates happiness and unity. But behind the scenes, aides charge, he has become a disruptive force.

Note: The other campaign manager, Sen. Fred Harris, D-Okla., has tried to smooth over the trouble.

SDS, UNDER the curly-bearded Skotnes' chairmanship, before Dr. Dumke's action was built around perhaps a dozen — by several estimates — hard-core activists. On the perimeter were roughly 200 not completely committed followers.

Ehrlich's power base has been the Faculty Peace Committee, which he helped organize shortly after he arrived last fall on the Long Beach campus from Kent State University, Ohio.

Although membership rolls never have been made public, Ehrlich says the Faculty Peace Committee membership stands at about 200.

Hawkish teachers scoff at this figure and say at most there are no more than 90.

Instructor Ehrlich (instructor is the low rank on the academic totem pole) stirs strong sentiments among the campus community. A recent letter to the editor, published in the 49th student newspaper focused on two points: "Should Ehrlich teach here?" and "Does Ehrlich

(A majority of students with whom this reporter talked praised his teaching skills, however.)

EHRlich SAYS he "was rehired for next year . . . and they (the administration) would have to find legitimate grounds" for dismissal. In which case, "I would seek to redress my grievances as emphatically as possible."

He was brought here on a contract expiring in 1969.

Like other fulltime faculty members, he meets a 12-hour weekly class load, of two classes in freshman composition, one each in contemporary literature and introduction to British and American writings.

While Ehrlich seemingly thrives on controversy, Skotnes "plans to go East this fall, to another college. It's time to get back to studying — I want to read and think."

The duo also disagrees on future courses of action.

Ehrlich would submit those questions plaguing the campus to an all-student referendum — if Chancellor Dumke would agree to be bound by the decision.

SHOULD A SPATER show then be voted down "in an atmosphere of freedom," he says, "you at least recognize the college is sensitive to the needs of its faculty and students." Other issues center on student demands for an "open campus" in which "free speech" areas would be expanded.

Such a vote, considered highly unlikely by campus observers, is Ehrlich's answer to "the many people who accuse us of being a militant minority trying to impose our will on the school."

Skotnes stands instead for protest programs in summer school, continuation on a permanent basis of the underground radical newspaper, "Apathy Axe" and "educational programs" in the campus free-speech area this fall. He lacks enthusiasm for Ehrlich's referendums, feels they would be a "meaningless exercise."

Ehrlich, born in Brooklyn, grew up in the more affluent suburb of Scarsdale. He is a graduate of Bard College and a master of arts from New York University, where he hopes to get a Ph.D. in 1971.

BROUGHT FROM South Africa as a small boy, Skotnes — of Norwegian-English-Canadian ancestry — began his education in East Los Angeles, says he is "a product of Southern California schools." His father fought with a South African regiment against the German Afrika Korps.

Each man was influenced, he said, by Marxist political thought. More specifically, the two label themselves "social democrats."

Skotnes' brand of SDS philosophy seeks "to build a socialist-democratic system in this country." He would radically alter the basic cultural environment.

"THERE IS a need in this society," he avers, "to develop creative thinking human beings — not data burpers, but people who can build a humanized society."

Although Ehrlich's beliefs evolved from what he describes as a liberally oriented home, Skotnes' conversion was more dramatic. He recalls working for arch conservative Barry Goldwater on the precinct level during the 1964 presidential campaign.

"Then I had my mind blown open. All of a sudden I realized there are things going on in this world that I wanted to know about, things my earlier education prevented me from seeing."

Neither man is enchanted with the Soviet Union or Red China.

Says Ehrlich: "Russia is represented by its own overbearing bureaucracy which is repressive intellectually. China I'm really confused about . . . it's so difficult to get an accurate picture."

"Life in both countries," he concludes, "is better than before the revolution."

NON-VIOLENCE remains a central article of faith to each, they say, although in the future "we'll be more militant." Skotnes' view of non-violence "does not deny the right of black people to arm themselves for self-protection."

In months to come, "We're going to break down the authoritarian structure of the college," says Ehrlich. "We're going to involve students and faculty in what now is the administration — chancellor-Legislature decision-making function."

By his "radical reaffirmation of American values" Skotnes says it is not necessary "to destroy everything before rebuilding. You convert the structure, you bring about change in an unviolent revolution."

"But," as Chancellor Dumke, said, "the campus is the springboard to revolution."

WHAT A WAY TO HAVE A FUN DAY

Thrills of an amusement park ride and the fascination of other attractions belonged to 2,300 underprivileged and handicapped children Saturday during the 9th annual Nu-Pike Fun Day. Children were given free use of park and free drinks. Poly High School Key Club helped serve drinks. Red Cross members were on hand. Chairman of the event was Clyde Seek, general manager of the Long Beach Amusement Company. City Council proclaimed the day as "Fun Day at Nu-Pike."

Chandler, Gaul Win Air Race

The seventh annual Henry Ohye Air Race — a Long Beach to San Diego test of aviator speed and proficiency — was won Saturday by Bud Chandler and Dr. Henry Gaul, of San Gabriel.

The race was held on Henry Ohye Day, officially proclaimed for Saturday by the Long Beach city council in recognition of Ohye's contribution to aviation in Long Beach and elsewhere.

Trophies and cash awards to the victors, presented by flying's grandfather Max Conrad, included — in addition to Dr. Gaul and Chandler:

—Dr. Phillip Reams, of Long Beach, second in proficiency.

—Virginia Wegener, of Pomona, second place in speed.

—Margaret Mead, of Santa Barbara, third place in proficiency.

—T albot Delgado, of Long Beach, third place in speed.

The race, sponsored by the Japanese-American Aeronautical Association, sets forth rigid standards for pilot and plane functions on the round-trip air voyage to San Diego.

Ohye said he received the

The official Long Beach council resolution establishing Saturday as Henry Ohye Day was read by Long Beach Airports Director Nicholas Dallas to the crowd gathered for the awards banquet at the Golden Sails Restaurant.

Y Summer Camps Open Next Week

The biggest camping season in the history of the Greater Long Beach YMCA officially gets underway next week when the first 11 summer sessions opens at the Long Beach Y's Camp Oakes.

Between next Sunday, when the first contingent leaves for Camp Oakes, and Sept. 4, when the summer season closes, more than 2,000 Long Beach area youngsters will spend a delightful week at camp.

Last year about 1,500 kids attended the camp.

CAMP OAKES, a 270-acre wilderness plot owned and operated by the YMCA of Greater Long Beach, is situated high in the San Bernardino Mountains near Big Bear Lake.

Nestled in Gocke Valley, 7,500 feet above sea level, Camp Oakes affords its summer residents a picturesque view of mountains and canyons and from some vantage points, the Mojave Desert is visible.

The program offered during the 11 one-week sessions include swimming in the Olympic-sized pool, horseback riding, hiking, archery, outdoor sports, chapel and campfire activities.

Although the program is primarily designed for elementary-age youngsters, the last session of the summer is restricted to high school students. There also will be one session for junior high school girls, from July 13 through 20, and one for elementary girls, from July 6 through 13.

A new program this year features counselor-in-training, open to high school sophomore, juniors and seniors, designed to train counselors. This program will be conducted during the regular session all summer long.

"YOU DON'T need to be a member of the YMCA to attend the camp," Larry Gray, camp executive, points out. "A lot of our summer camp youngsters get their first real contact with the YMCA at the camp."

Registration for the camp must be made through one of the five branches of the Long Beach YMCA, Gray emphasized.

Further information on any aspect of the program may be obtained by contacting one of the following branches: Downtown, 600 Long Beach Blvd.; Lakewood, 5424 Centralia Ave.; Los Altos, 1720 Bellflower Blvd.; Los Cerritos, 15530 South St.; Bellflower, and North Community, 6095 California Ave.

L.A. Group to Join in 'Poor' March

Members of a group calling itself Volunteers for the Poor People's Campaign will leave Los Angeles today aboard a chartered jet for Washington and participate in next Wednesday's "Solidarity Day" march.

A spokesman for the group said public response to the planned trip has been slow and there are still 90 seats available on the plane.

Those who do go will pay their own fare — $170 round trip — but will be provided free food and beverages aboard the jet.

They will be met in Washington by buses which will take them to public accommodations at the Hilton Hotel, or private accommodations at a church near Resurrection City.

Wednesday, those from Los Angeles will join other "campaigners" in a march from the Washington monument up Constitution Avenue to the Lincoln Memorial.

FRANK COOKE Receives Appointment

Cooke New L.B. Scout Executive

Central city requests for a minority representative on the Long Beach Area Council of Boy Scouts were met when Frank Cooke, a 32-year-old ex-Teen Post director, was named assistant district executive in the Dan Beard District.

Cooke, a local resident since 1957, is scheduled to command the area bounded by Spring Street and Ocean Boulevard on the north and south and Long Beach Boulevard and Junipero Avenue on the west and east.

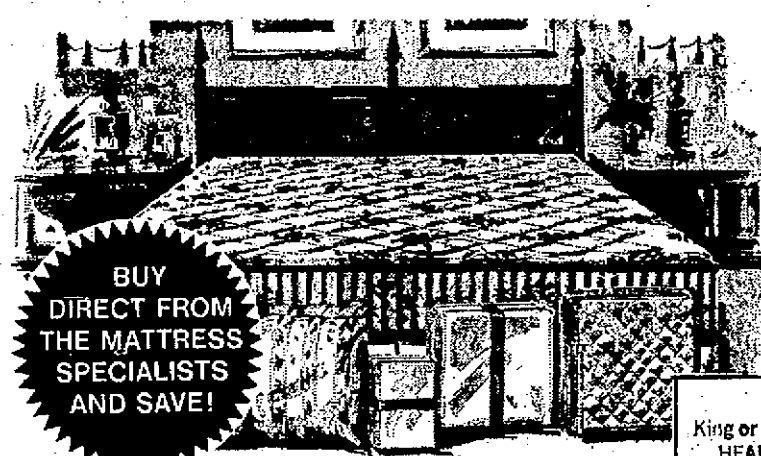

Plans call for Cooke to work with volunteer leaders in making the scout program available to all boys within the district where 18 cub packs and scout troops now are active.

Cooke's appointment to the council is another step in an intensive 3½-year effort to increase scout participation in the central area, officials explained.

Cooke is a Birmingham, Alabama-born Air Force veteran married to a counselor at Franklin Junior High School who is now on maternity leave. They expect their first child in October.

USS Long Beach Gets New Skipper--Spencer

Capt. Kenneth C. Wallace turned over command of the nuclear missile cruiser USS Long Beach Saturday to Capt. William A. Spencer.

The shipboard ceremony was held in Subic Bay, Republic of the Philippines.

Capt. Wallace, soon to don his rear admiral's stars, reports to Washington for an assignment involving strategic and space systems research and engineering for the Secretary of Defense.

He commanded the ship for 22 months.

For Capt. Spencer he returned to the ship as her commanding officer after serving as the commissioning engineering officer from 1959-63.

Before the Long Beach assignment he was skipper of the missile destroyer USS Buchanan and was also executive officer of the Long Beach-based nuclear frigate USS Bainbridge.

The Long Beach made her first Vietnam War deployment under Capt. Wallace, compiling a brilliant record as the Navy's PIRAZ (positive identification radar advisory zone) ship. The ship's all-seeing radar can pick up anything within a 200 mile radius.

Capt. Wallace started the second deployment on April 15.

The ship presented him a long-wanted cannon. He had always expressed a desire to have one to summon neighbors for activities on his Merritt Island, Fla., estate.

L.A. Port Plans Big Improvement Outlay

The Port of Los Angeles, heralding major gains in ship movements, tonnage and gross revenues, will plough more than $1 million back into improvements at three container terminals.

The Harbor Commission let a contract to Sully-Miller Co. of Long Beach for $643,498 worth of work on a 34-acre container terminal in the west basin. The job involves clearing, grading, drainage, installation of water and sewer lines, railroad trackage, paving and fencing.

A $233,333 contract was given to the Mutz Contracting Co. of Los Angeles for construction of a metal-sided warehouse 350 feet long and 70 feet wide. It will be at the rear of Berth 126, also in the west basin.

A third contract, for $179,971, was awarded to Acres Electric Construction Co., Inc., for a container pier for Japanese shipping. It is to be completed by Dec. 15.

The port boasted a 12 per cent increase in the number of ships arriving in the past 2 months, as compared to the same period a year ago ending April 30. It listed 3,530 vessels, and 3,151 a year ago.

Those ships carried 21,419,491 tons of cargo, up 13.6 per cent, or 2,468,571 tons. Revenue tonnage increased 4.7 per cent, the port claimed.

Jr. College Bond Vote Slated Vaccine Shot Due

Trustees in the Orange Coast Junior College District have called a $7.25-million bond election for Sept. 17.

The move followed recommendations of an area-wide citizens' finance study committee.

The bond issue would take care of building programs at both Golden West College in Huntington Beach and Orange Coast College in Costa Mesa for the next four years.

At the same election trustees also will ask voters for permission to convert the present 10.5 cent capital outlay tax passed in 1962 to general purpose use.

This would not change the present tax rate of 54-cents per $100 of assessed valuation.

The bond issue, on the other hand, would cost district taxpayers seven to 12 cents per $100 of assessed valuation, depending on the length of time trustees want to take to pay it off. A decision has not been made on that yet.

Approval of the bond issue would unleash $7,106,000 in matching state and federal funds over the next four years.

Bomb Under Auto

Foley last Jan. 19.

Brigaldino pleaded guilty last month to one count of using explosives to "intimidate and terrify a human being." An attempted murder charge was dropped.

Immunizations against diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus, polio, measles and smallpox for children to 18 years of age will be given at the Bellflower Health Center, 10005 E. Flower St., on June 26, from 5 to 8:30 p.m.

To be eligible for an immunization, children must be free from illness and be accompanied by their parents or legal guardian.

Convict Militants of Plot to Kill Rights Leaders

HERMAN FERGUSON
Hoted 'Uncle Toms'

ARTHUR HARRIS
Impassive to Verdict

NEW YORK (UPI) — A white jury Saturday convicted two alleged members of the black militant Revolutionary Action Movement of plotting to assassinate moderate civil rights leaders Roy Wilkins and Whitney Young.

State Supreme Court Justice Paul Balsam released both defendants in continued bail of $25,000 each pending their expected appeal. He set no date for sentencing on the charge of conspiracy to commit first degree murder.

The defendants, Herman B. Ferguson, 47, a suspended assistant public school principal, and Arthur Harris, 22, face up to seven years in prison.

The all-white, all-male jury deliberated 8½ hours before returning its verdict at 2 a.m. They had been deadlocked 3 hours earlier.

Both defendants listened impassively to the verdict. Their attorney, Gene Ann Condon, became ill during the jury deliberations and was not present for the verdict.

Mrs. Condon charged in her summation that the police "planned and engineered the evidence" in the case through Negro detective Edward Lee Howlette, who allegedly infiltrated an arm of RAM and pretended to aid the conspiracy.

Howlette was the chief prosecution witness. The defense presented no witnesses.

EARLIER in the eight-day trial the defense attorney sought unsuccessfully to have the trial dismissed because of the emotion engendered by the assassination of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy. Howlette had testified that Kennedy and President Johnson were mentioned by the conspirators as possible future victims.

In his summation, Asst. Dist. Atty. Thomas Demakos denied any police "frameup" and said there was no doubt that Ferguson's and Harris' hatred of Wilkins and Young inspired the plot.

Demakos said they considered Wilkins, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and Young, national director of the Urban League, "Uncle Toms."

Spending Cut, Tax Hike Delays Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, voiced doubt Saturday that the House will pass the tax increase pending cut bill this week and may not pass it this year.

The House is scheduled to take up the Senate-passed measure Thursday.

Long, in a talk for broadcast in Louisiana, noted the House already has postponed action on the bill until after the New York primary elections, which will be next Tuesday.

He added: "As sure as I'm sitting here, you watch them postpone it again when they come up to the time."

As to whether the bill ever will be passed by Congress, he said "My guess is that it will happen sometime after the election if the president wants to call us back, or sometime in January or February."

"My guess is that those House fellows know what I know — that the people are not for that bill."

The bill passed the Senate, he said, because Republicans supported it on the theory it was unpopular and would hurt the Democrats. And most of the Democrats who supported it, he said, are not up for election this year.

In the House, everyone is up for election, Long said.

Czech Teetotaler

Federation Revived

PRAGUE (AP) — The Federation of Teetotalers, banned in 1950 for some reason lost in an alcoholic fog of the Stalinist era, has been revived in newly liberalized Czechoslovakia. The trade union newspaper Prace reported dihard dries decided to "resume their activities in view of . . . the decline of public morals." This country is a leader in alcoholic consumption per capita despite government campaigns against alcoholism.

COLLAPSES FROM SMOKE INHALATION

Fireman Rescue Boy, 12, Near Death

Firemen Saturday rescued a 12-year-old Palos Verdes Estates boy who collapsed inside a blazing $50,000 home as a woman and her three children escaped out a bedroom window.

Timothy Hiler, of 1513 Addison Road, who narrowly escaped death while staying overnight at the home of a friend, was in serious condition at Little Company of Mary Hospital, Torrance.

Firemen found his body when they broke down the front door at the blazing home of Mrs. Susan Sullivan, 35, of 1528 Addison Road.

The boy suffered only minor burns but was unconscious and close to death from smoke inhalation, firemen said.

Mrs. Sullivan — who said she thought Timothy had escaped through a rear patio door — broke a bedroom window to hoist her three children and herself to safety.

The Sullivan children — Chris, 9, Melissa, 4½, and Amy, 2½ — escaped injury. But the family dog perished in the blaze, firemen said.

Mrs. Sullivan told police that Chris awoke her about 2:15 a.m. and told her the house was on fire.

The woman said she saw Timothy heading towards the patio door, and went with Chris to the girls' room where they broke a window, lifted the girls to safety and climbed out themselves.

Hemmingsen said when firemen arrived the house was engulfed in flames and threatening two neighboring houses.

Firms Nationalized

ALGIERS (UPI) — The Algerian government Friday night nationalized 18 foreign companies manufacturing food products, construction equipment and other materials. It was not immediately known if American interests were affected by the move.

Burglars Net $16,470 in New Cash Registers

Nineteen new cash registers worth $16,470 were stolen Saturday from the National Cash Register Co., 2760 Atlantic Ave., Signal Hill police said.

Officers said burglars broke open a rear door and loaded the cash registers on a rolling table which they wheeled outside to a waiting vehicle.

The prowlers passed up scores of older cash registers for the new ones, investigators said. They ransacked a storeroom desk but didn't tamper with the rest of the building.

The front half of the building is in Long Beach, but Signal Hill police handled the case because entry was made in the rear, which is their city's territory.

Students Veto Worker Alliance

LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — The Students for a Democratic Society, their ranks thinned by early departures of delegates, scrapped proposals Saturday for students to join forces with workers.

The proposals had been debated all week at the SDS national convention. They were killed after remaining delegates defeated another motion that would have tabled all issues and adjourned the six-day meeting.

The number of delegates on the Michigan State University campus dwindled from about 500 during the week to about 200 Saturday. Many of those staying for the final day's session brought knapsacks and bedrolls with them, apparently planning to leave town directly from the convention floor.

A NUMBER of student-worker alliance resolutions had been proposed. One of those tabled warned that "the student movement remains isolated from the majority of students and almost completely from working people."

"Students are also victimized materially and intellectually by the same system that exploits workers," the resolution said. "Therefore, there exists the basis for a common fight."

Chairman Tim McCarthy had difficulty maintaining order during the final session. Presiding without a gavel, McCarthy blew on a harmonica, banged his fists on the rostrum and finally pounded with a coffee cup in an effort to keep the attention of the delegates.

McCarthy is a national SDS staff member from Chicago.

Saturday's session began with the reading of a newspaper dispatch of the conviction of Dr. Benjamin Spock on charges of conspiracy to persuade youths to avoid the draft. The news was greeted with moans and groans.

MCCARTHY PRESIDED from a platform which bore one plain red and one plain black flag. An SDS delegate explained the flags had no special significance in the movement, but that they were universal symbols of students and workers struggles. Most of the male delegates were shaggy-haired, many were mustached and bearded and wore blue work shirts. Most of the girls had long straight hair.

A few of the students were clean-shaven and neatly dressed. One wore a suit and tie.

Only two Negroes were visible Saturday.

Two tables were strewn with Marxist and Trotskyite literature, and pamphlets by Che-Guevara.

LOSER KILLS DICE PLAYER, INJURES 3

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A dice player, angered by the refusal of other players to return his losses, drove his car into a group of players and spectators, killing one man and injuring three, police said Saturday.

The dead man, James Dickerson, 20, of St. Louis, was pinned against a wall. Another man suffered head injuries and fractured legs and two others were treated for minor injuries.

Witnesses said the suspect being sought in the automobile assault, a stranger to them, demanded the return of his money and when his demand was refused he warned, "you'll be sorry."

Investigators said the man walked to his car, made a U-turn and drove into the group. The assailant fled but a witness got his license number.

Gay Joyride Becomes Drag Race, Then Tragedy--3 Dead, 4 Critical

MIAMI (UPI) — Bernard Driessen, 18, rounded up six teen-age friends early Saturday and went joyriding in his 1962 white convertible.

The top was down and the cool breeze was a refreshing relief from a hot, muggy night.

At a stop light on N.W. 54th Street, another car with four teen-agers pulled up beside Driessen and his friends. The light changed, motors revved, and tires screamed. The drag race was on.

Deputy Constable Danny Linares was checking store fronts on 54th Street and heard the screaming engines. He turned around in time to see the joyride become a tragedy.

Driessen lost control of the car at 24th Avenue. It swerved wildly, jumped a curb and exploded through a concrete wall at the Wholesale Muffler Co.

Ruthie Mae Harris, 14, Fay Ellen Bridges, 14, and Robert Graham, 19, died instantly.

Driessen, Ed Spalding, 17, Mary Mitchell, 15 and Deyana Sturup, 17, were rushed to Jackson Memorial Hospital. They were in critical condition.

The other car in the race slowed down after the accident. The driver looked back at the wreckage, then sped away.

Cali-to-Cali Transplant in Havana

HAVANA (AP) — Dr. Noah Gonzalez said Saturday doctors at Havana's Manuel Fajardo Hospital transplanted a calf heart to another calf Friday.

Radio Liberation described a "successful heart transplant operation" involving a calf heart at the hospital and it was interpreted in some quarters abroad as meaning the heart had been transplanted to a human.

But doctors said the operation was only one of a series of experiments with temple human heart transplants.

Israel, Lebanon Blame Each Other

United Press International

Lebanon accused Israel of attacking one of its border villages Saturday and Premier Abdullah Yafi summoned foreign ambassadors to outline details of the incident.

Israel said Lebanese troops fired first, hitting a village in Upper Galilee.

In Beirut, a Lebanese military spokesman said the attack came early Saturday morning when Israeli troops lobbed 20 mortar shells into the village of Maiss El-Jabal. Five homes were destroyed and four persons, one a woman, injured, he said.

Yafi summoned ambassadors of the "Big Four" nations — The United States, Soviet Union, Britain and France — to the foreign ministry where he notified them officially of details of the attack.

Information Minister Jean Aziz meanwhile denounced "continuous Israeli aggression" and condemned the Jewish nation's failure to abide by U.N. resolutions on the mideast.

In Jerusalem, an Israeli military spokesman said the exchange erupted when Lebanese fired mortars into the village of Manara in Upper Galilee.

Israeli troops silenced the Lebanese fire, he said.

The Lebanon border incident was the second in little more than a month.

Lebanon charged Israeli soldiers killed one Arab woman May 12 when they mortared the border village of Houle.

Israel replied at the time that Houle had been used by Arab commandos as a base for forays into Israel.

In Warsaw, Mahmud Riad, foreign minister of the Arab Republic, said at the end of an official visit that "we have succeeded in rebuilding our armed forces and we have enough strength to cope with any Israeli aggression."

Cloud-Seeding Device That Makes Rain, Snow Claimed by D.C. Firm

DENVER (AP) — A Montreal engineer says his firm has developed a cloud seeding device that produces rain or snow rather than increasing precipitation as cloud seeding has done in the past.

Bernard A. Power, president of Weather Engineering Corp. of America, based at Washington, D.C., described the method at a hearing by a U.S. senate subcommittee on weather modification.

Power said his system has been proved in experiments in California, Labrador and Iran.

He told the subcommittee that explosively are used to vaporize large quantities of silver iodide at high altitudes and that precipitation begins within 20 to 30 minutes after detonation.

"We have the possibility of having a device that actually makes rain instead of just increasing rain," Power said.

The devices were used over Iran's 12,000 to 15,000 foot high mountains during a six-month project ended last April. He claimed the project helped fill all agricultural and city water supplies in the area worked near Tehran. He said the project will be resumed this fall.

He said the cost of the new seeding technique is about 1 cent for 1,000 gallons of water, based on the Iran experiment. On a larger scale of more than 10,000 square miles, he said, the cost would be down to "not more than" 30 cents per acre foot of water or 326,700 gallons.

Isherwood Due in L.B.

Poet-writer Christopher Isherwood is scheduled to appear at a "Right to Dissent" party Saturday evening in the home of Mrs. Forrest Peters, 667 Los Altos Ave.

Long Beach's chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, sponsor of the party, announced that one purpose of the affair is to recruit new members.

Another purpose, according to a spokesman, is to "support the right of the poor and impoverished to dissent."

Rule Girl's Singing 'Inhuman Baying'

LONDON (AP) — Sounds from the home of singing teacher Daphne Elizabeth Braggins were described in the High Court by a neighbor as "inhuman baying, wailing, warbling and hooting — somewhat similar to the effect of a strong motor churning."

Judge Sir Robert Megarry agreed and enjoined her from singing and playing musical instruments on weekends and limiting her sonic output to one three-hour session each week day.

Poverty Security Is Biggest Protest Problem Facing Fading Political Parleys

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Many of the huts are empty now and piles of discarded clothing and bottles and cans litter the walks round the muddy camp.

"It's not fun any more," said a young Negro from Philadelphia who joined the poor people's campaign weeks ago.

"The whole thing has changed," he said, "I'm beginning to believe it wouldn't make any difference now if we all went home."

It was near 6 p.m. and at Resurrection City, the poor people's encampment on the mall beneath the Lincoln Memorial, the blue food tent was crowded and filled with noise.

MOST OF THE people inside the tent were young, and they sat at the long wooden tables wearing jackets and heavy shoes or boots that were covered with mud. Many of the older people took their food on paper plates and carried it back to their plywood shacks to eat alone.

An announcement that came blaring over the public address system interrupted the meal.

"Buses are now waiting at the front gate to take demonstrators to the Agriculture Department," the message began. "We need demonstrators," it continued. "The people up there have been there all day and they need to come back and eat. We need people to replace them."

Inside the food tent the noise dropped off but hardly anyone moved.

THE BOOMING voice on the loudspeaker resumed.

"Citizens, we got some people here who aren't paying dues. We got some friends who sleep all day and all they make is their meals. We expect everyone in this city to pay dues. If you aren't here to take care of business you ought to leave."

The announcement ended and the noise picked up again.

"What they ought to do," an older Negro who stood near an opening in the tent explained, "is go back there and drag them hippies out. They ain't doing nothing around here anyway."

A Negro woman suggested that "they make some of these kids get out and demonstrate." She said that "if they would do that, they wouldn't have so much time to study devilment."

A TEEN-AGE youth who sat at a table with a blue blanket wrapped around his shoulders said he was not going anywhere. "I did my time last night," he snapped. "Besides they ain't doing nothing up there anyhow."

The bickering faded, and eventually the few who could be persuaded went off the Department of Agriculture.

A few weeks ago it took no persuasion to muster demonstrators. The bickering now only reflected the changed mood in the poor people's camp.

"The problem is that they let these people lay around too long," one of the camp marshals explained. "A lot of them don't want to do anything and they're not going to do anything."

MUCH OF THE camp has now split into sections.

The poor whites are off by themselves. The hippies have their section. And the blacks keep mostly to themselves.

At the end of May there were about 2,500 people living in the huts. But the number has dwindled. At a rally this week a member of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference staff said there were "only about 500 of us" left in the camp now.

(In August Republicans will convene in Miami Beach to nominate their presidential candidate and Democrats will meet in Chicago. This dispatch reports on how the two cities are coming along in their preparations, with emphasis on security problems.)

By DAVID SULLIVAN

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — When Miami Beach made its successful bid last year for the Republican national convention it had neither an adequate hall, nor the communications facilities to handle the massive news coverage demanded.

But this month the city is almost ready for the opening of the August 5-10 GOP meeting with a convention hall doubled in size and set up with trainloads of communications equipment — from teletype switchboards to a microwave TV tower.

FOR A START, Miami Beach had a 16,000-seat convention hall with a small adjoining auditorium. A new hall seating 18,000 was rushed to completion in May, complete with color TV facilities and 1,800 tons of air conditioning equipment.

The older portion of convention hall and the auditorium has been transformed into facilities for the estimated 6,000 reporters, commentators and technicians expected to be on hand.

The huge space will be jammed with newsrooms, television vans and darkrooms, criss-crossed by lines for more than 300 teletype machines in the hall and in Miami Beach hotels.

Officials estimate the Republican nominating session will bring 40,000 visitors to town. But, for a town famous for its tourism, hotel space was the least of its problems.

Police security is another matter, however. Officials said plans have been set up to mount a tight guard around the convention hall complex. Special credentials will be necessary for admittance inside a wire fence surrounding the hall.

DURING THE convention, patrolmen will go on 12-hour shifts. Extra officers will be brought in from neighboring cities, as well as the county sheriff's office and the Florida Highway Patrol.

A police operation center will be established near the hall, officials said. From there all units will be under direct radio control. Security within the hall will be handled by private agencies.

Police said peaceful demonstrations will be permitted in an area outside the fence in front of the hall. So far, there have been no threats of massive demonstrations, but officials weren't taking any chances.

CHICAGO (UPI) — Chicago, site of more political conventions than any other city in the nation, is getting ready for what is being billed as the biggest of them all.

At least 50,000 Democratic Party delegates, alternates, workers, hangers-on and newsmen are expected to converge on the city for the event.

According to Democratic National Chairman John Bailey, 7,500 newsmen are being assigned to cover the convention, which begins Aug. 26, and city officials hope nothing happens to distract the journalistic attention from the political drama unfolding in the International Amphitheater.

Several groups, including Negro militants, peace advocates and "yuppies," have threatened to disrupt this, the city's 34th national political convention.

OFFICIALS will not discuss their plans for a tranquil convention but say, off the record, they are prepared for anything.

The 12,000-man Chicago police force will be bolstered by at least 3,000 men from the suburban area, where most of the delegates will be billeted.

Officials, according to some reports, are considering transporting dignitaries to the amphitheater by helicopter. A helicopter pad is available on the roof of the Conrad Hilton Hotel, where President Johnson presumably will be housed if he stays overnight in Chicago.

A total of 1,000 federal agents are available for convention duty, according to another source. This group includes men from the Secret Service, the FBI and other agencies as well as U.S. marshals.

Secret Service agents already have been reported surveying the city for drawing up security plans.

CHICAGO Mayor Richard J. Daley has repeatedly stated the convention will not be disturbed by any agitators of any variety. His police superintendent, James B. Colisk Jr., says simply: "The Chicago Police Department will arrest anybody if they, in any way, attempt to disrupt not only the convention, but any other aspect of city life."

In January, Negro entertainer Dick Gregory threatened to lead so many demonstrations during the convention period "the whole police department will be tied up." Three months later, however, Gregory said he had abandoned any plans to hold demonstrations this summer.

BELMONT PLAZA OLYMPIC POOL, WORLD'S MOST MODERN INDOOR SWIMMING FACILITY, NEAR COMPLETION

Belmont Pool World's Safest

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Marine Editor

Talking waters and television watchdogs are but two of many innovations which will make the new $3.6 million Belmont Plaza Olympic Pool in Long Beach the safest and most modern indoor swimming facility in the world.

The completely enclosed, million-gallon, T-shaped pool is being rushed to completion to be ready for the Olympic triathlon aquatic events this summer.

The public may be using the pool by October.

The five-story building of Greek-modern design is located on the beach east of the foot of the Belmont Pier.

"Two years of intensive research and study of pool equipment and design went into the creation of this facility," comments Walter J. (Skip) Skibicki, aquatics supervisor for the city of Long Beach and Olympic trials coordinator.

"When completed this August, the pool will be second in magnitude only to the seating capacity of the Olympic pool in Tokyo — and even more modern," Skibicki added.

ELECTRONIC wizardry includes an underwater sound system. Swimming coaches watching their athletes from either an underwater viewing room or at poolside can use the underwater speakers to give instructions to practicing swimmers.

Constantly watchdogging action beneath the surface are a series of scanning, closed-circuit television cameras. The cameras can be remotely controlled to move from side to side, up or down and to zoom in on a swimmer in trouble.

Skibicki is hopeful that eventually the television cameras can provide a tape for instant replay which will help judges and swimmers perfect their techniques.

Spotted around the huge pool are six lifeguard towers. Each is equipped with a television monitor. The guards are linked with each other and to the administrative office by an intercom system.

A SWIMMER in trouble anywhere in the pool can be reached by one or more of the guards within two seconds.

The pool has a capacity of 800 persons during recreational swimming periods, according to Skibicki.

Facilities include dressing areas, checkrooms, restrooms and lockers for use of athletes.

A foolproof arrangement of electric eyes will automatically trigger a group of overhead and side-spraying showers which will drench all bathers entering the pool area.

While the pool was designed to meet Olympic standards for swimming, diving and water polo (as well as recreational swimming) the beachgoer who prefers the surf and sand has not been forgotten.

On the eastward end of the 240-foot-long building are dressing rooms, restrooms and showers. There will also be an outside snackbar.

The beachside facilities will be separated from the pool facilities.

ADDITIONAL outside

facilities include a 3½-foot-deep warm-up pool 75 feet long and 42 feet wide. The pool will be used by swimmers to limber up before competitive events.

There is also a Tiny Tot pool 50 feet long and 25 feet wide. The depth ranges from 12 inches to 30 inches.

Although the main pool is located indoors swimmers will be able to bask in the sun. In the ceiling are 10 movable plastic panels 20 feet square that can be opened to the overhead sun.

The walls surrounding the pool are windows nine feet high which open vertically providing access to a huge patio where swimmers may rest and dry off on a deck area twice the size of the surface of the pool.

THE STEM of the T-shaped pool is 50 meters long and 75 feet wide. The 50-meter course is composed of eight lanes, each nine feet wide in water ranging from three and a half to 12 feet deep.

The short course of 75 feet, used in many AAU events, features 10 lanes each eight and a half feet wide.

"Because of the wide lanes and the extra deep gutters which prevent a backwash, the water will remain smooth creating a fast pool," Skibicki points out.

"We should see many new record times in this pool," the aquatic supervisor claims.

The cross-bar of the "T" is a regulation-sized water polo course with a minimum depth of eight feet.

Olympic diving trials in August will be conducted from six platforms and springboards over water 17 feet deep. Diving facilities include a 10-meter and a 6½-meter, two 3-meter and two 1-meter springboards.

A $25,000 COMPUTERIZED automatic scoreboard will post diving scores six times faster than present scoring methods.

Electronic timing plates which respond to a touch of a quarter pound of pressure will all but eliminate ties among swimming competitors. Timing is accurate to 1-100 of a second.

During the Olympic trial events there will be spectator seating for approximately 2,700. At other times the capacity can be increased to 3,000, Skibicki claims.

Located above the grandstand is a completely-equipped press box including facilities for TV, radio broadcasts, and telephoto photography.

The first Olympic trials, men's and women's diving, will be held Aug. 21 to 24. Men's swimming events and the water polo competition will be held on Sept. 1 to 3.

Skibicki reports the pool will close following the Olympic events to permit contractors to make minor adjustments of equipment and facilities.

"We plan to open the pool to the public in October," Skibicki said.

Admission charge will be 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for youngsters.

Youth Follows Dad Into Naval Career

A Garden Grove youth, just graduated from Bolsa Grande High School, will follow his father into the U.S. Navy for a career.

Robert Simmons, son of R. L. Simmons, (USN, ret.), of 9292 Imperial Ave., received a Presidential appointment to the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., and will report there June 26 to begin training.

Eight young men from the 32nd Congressional District will enter service academies, Congressman Craig Hosmer announced. Four will go to Annapolis, three will enter the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, and another will attend the Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs, Colo.

Named to Annapolis were Robert W. Haislip, just graduated from Lakewood High School; Karl T. Lawson, who got his diploma ma from the Zama American High School this month; James N. Lees, 1967 graduate of Poly High; and William V. Moody, a June graduate of Lakewood.

West Point accepted Arthur E. Balchelder, graduate from Jordan High this month; and Christopher P. Tillman and Timothy E. Bynon, both Lakewood High graduates.

William C. Beck II, who was graduated from Wilson High last year, will report to the Air Force Academy.

Two Santa Ana youths were accepted at West Point, and will report there July 3.

Robert Allen Crawford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Crawford of 12052 La Colina Drive, and Paul Edward LaBonte, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. LaBonte of 2215 N. Baker St., were named by Congressman James B. Utt, R-Santa Ana, of the 35th Congressional District.

Competition to Design Flag Begins

County wide competition for a design for an official Orange County flag has been launched.

In true "Betsy Ross tradition," only honors will go to the one whose design is chosen to fashion the flag scheduled to be raised over the new Orange County Court House at dedication ceremonies in October.

The competition is aimed at students enrolled in the now-closed junior and senior high schools of the county, either public or private. Designs must be submitted by July 22 to John McDonough, special fields director for county schools.

McDonough said the county flag must incorporate the county seal, but its placement is at the discretion of the designer.

Orange County has no "official" color. Its seal is a kaleidoscope of colors: light blue sky over snow-covered dark mountains, with light-gray foothills fringing green orange trees bearing fruit. Lettering of the seal is in gold.

Art teachers of the county's schools will do preliminary judging of entries. The county supervisors will pick the design.

Tape Deck Stolen

Burglars forced open a right wing on a car owned by Joseph A. Ruthenford, 1060 W. 23rd St., San Pedro, and made off with a tape deck and tapes valued at $305. It was reported to Long Beach police Saturday.

MONUMENT GETS BATH, NOT GEORGE

BALTIMORE (AP)—The Washington Monument in Baltimore is to get its first bath in 153 years Monday. George himself, standing atop the 188-foot column, may remain unwashed.

The Baltimore Chapter of the Painting and Decorating Contractors of America will clean the monument, as part of its charity activity for the year. Only water under high pressure will be used to clean the monument built in 1815. Detergents or other chemical material might harm the marble surface. The job should take about a week.

Legal Maneuvers for Sirhan, Ray

By DON HASTINGS

Legal maneuvering was under way for two accused assassins last week.

In Los Angeles, it appeared that the court-appointed public defender for Sirhan Bishara Sirhan, indicted for the assassination of New York Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, will seek a change of venue for the accused man on grounds the tremendous publicity, statements by Los Angeles Mayor Sam Yorty, among others, and the emotion-charged atmosphere in the place of the slaying would make a fair trial impossible.

IN LONDON, AMERICAN officials formally requested the extradition of James Earl Ray to the United States to stand trial for the slaying of civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King. If the 40-year-old escaped convict chooses to take advantage of court formalities and appeals, it could delay his being returned for several weeks.

PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES were on the hustings after a week's moratorium following the assassination of Sen. Kennedy. All were heavily guarded by Secret Service agents.

Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon rejected a bid by his Republican rival, New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, for a debate, contending it would only help the Democrats. Sen. Eugene McCarthy, D-Minn., said it would be difficult for him to support rival candidate Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey if Humphrey holds to his present view. Humphrey did not campaign.

A TORNADO SLAMMED into the farm town of Tracy, Minn., Thursday, killing 9, hospitalizing 70 and destroying a 1½-block-wide strip of homes and businesses the length of the community.

IN AN 8-TO-1 DECISION, the United States Supreme Court last week upheld the power of police officers to stop suspicious persons on the street and "frisk" them for weapons.

The decision, given by Chief Justice Earl Warren, said a policeman is entitled, for the protection of himself and others, "to conduct a carefully limited search" of suspects' outer clothing to find weapons which might be used in an assault.

PAY INCREASES FOR MORE than 3 million servicemen and 2 million federal civilian employees were ordered by President Johnson. The 5 per cent average hike will cost about $1.6 billion annually.

THE WAR

The high cost of peace rose more last week as Communist guerrillas poured almost daily barrages of artillery shells and rockets into South Vietnam's capital city of Saigon in an effort to pressure American negotiators in Paris into agreeing to North Vietnam's cease-fire demands. The bombardments have taken a rising toll of lives, wounded hundreds and caused damage in the millions.

More than 12,000 American and South Vietnamese troops fanned out around Saigon to try to find the Viet Communist shelling of Saigon has skyrocketed the price of sandbags in that beleaguered city from 10 cents a dozen to 25 cents apiece in less than one month.

Cong artillery nests and stop the attacks, but more shells fell in the city Saturday.

In peace negotiations, the United States warned North Vietnam that the shelling would have "the most serious consequences." There was no visible progress in the talks and they were recessed until Wednesday.

FIGHTING CONTINUED THROUGHOUT South Vietnam at a rate that took the lives of 380 American servicemen for the week ending June 8. The toll, announced by the U.S. Command in Saigon Thursday, was the lowest in five weeks.

THE WORLD

A treaty to halt the spread of nuclear weapons was endorsed last week by the United Nations General Assembly. President Johnson paid a surprise visit to the U.N. following the endorsement and said the pact obliges the United States and the Soviet Union to take further steps to curtail atomic arms.

NEW CLASHES BETWEEN POLICE, protesting students and striking workers in Paris early in the week threatened to plunge France into a new major crisis, but by week's end the turmoil appeared to be subsiding. President Charles de Gaulle cracked down on the agitators. He expelled 43 foreign participants, dissolved seven student extremist organizations and banned all street demonstrations.

WORLDWIDE STUDENT UNREST spread to Yugoslavia last week, forcing President Josip Tito to fly home from a vacation retreat. He promised rebellious students at Belgrade University that he will satisfy their demands for sweeping educational and social reforms.

A 20-YEAR FRIENDSHIP and mutual assistance pact was signed by Hungarian Premier János Fock and his Czechoslovakian counterpart, Oldrich Cernick, in a ceremony in the Parliament building in Budapest.

TWO UNMANNED SATELLITES were launched and another was brought down for a controlled soft-landing by the Soviet Union Wednesday. A day earlier, the Russians set off an underground nuclear blast, the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission reported.

UNDERSHOOTING A RUNWAY in an early morning, monsoon squall, a Pan American World Airways jetliner crashed and burned Thursday at Dum Dum Airport in Calcutta, killing six of the 63 persons aboard. Four of the dead were Americans.

ISRAELI AND EGYPTIAN FORCES fought a brief artillery duel across the Suez Canal in the area of Port Taufiq Friday. United Nations observers arranged a cease-fire after two hours.

THE EAST GERMAN GOVERNMENT announced that all West Germans travelling to the West Berlin Island in East Germany must acquire travel passes. The United States, Britain and France denounced the travel restrictions as invalid.

Massive Police Expansion Under Way in Southern California

By JIM McCAULEY
From Our L.A. Bureau

A massive expansion in Southern California police power is well under way — backed by most politicians and recently endorsed by 70 per cent of Los Angeles voters.

Only a whisper of dissent had been heard. The few objections come from those who fear police may be over-arming.

The California Highway Patrol is at the mid-point in a program to double its force. And the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department would land an additional 305 positions if County Supervisors approve the budget before them.

Best index of the public climate for beefing up law enforcement agencies: a $25.2 million Los Angeles police bond issue.

IN SPITE of the fact the bond issue would increase taxes for householders, voters June 4 gave a 5-to-2 margin to a measure that would provide:

A new police training academy, a facility geared to train 6,000 new officers in the next seven years.

Funds to create two new divisions, the Devonshire in the San Fernando Valley and the South Central.

New stations for four existing divisions in Wilshire, West Los Angeles, Venice and Central Patrol and Traffic.

Helicopters throughout the City of Los Angeles for patrol, surveillance and speedy pursuit of criminals.

A closed-circuit television network to link Los Angeles police facilities for fast instruction, training and high-speed criminal identification.

A new pistol range in the San Fernando Valley.

The typical Los Angeles householder with a $20,000 home will pay an additional 87 cents a year to finance the police beef-up.

One sobering aspect to the situation is a warning from a state legislator who has voted for most recent law enforcement measures in Sacramento. The lawmaker, Assemblyman William Greene, D-Los Angeles, wondered aloud recently whether Californians are going too far.

"This thing could get out of hand to the point where we built up small armies," said Assemblyman Greene.

HE SAID he is concerned that the public and politicians may not be getting all the facts.

He criticized city officials of Los Angeles for submitting only pro-arguments on the police bond proposition. There was no opposition voiced in the ballot-arguments publication.

Also coming under fire from Greene was the wording of the ballot proposition. It did not, Greene complained, make it clear specifically how the police intended to expand. The ballot arguments stressed mostly building expansion, but personnel also is involved.

"I felt it would have been a bit better if the plans had been more fully defined. No issue should be on the ballot unless the different points of view also is represented in the ballot arguments," he said.

"No argument against this bond proposition was submitted," explained the official mailer to voters.

ENDORSED the measure on the ballot were Mayor Sam Yorty, nine councilmen, Rabbi Edgar F. Maginn, Most Rev. John J. Ward and others.

Greene stated:

"I hope the general public and legislative bodies of local government keep a close watch on what law enforcement agencies are doing so there is no overexpansion."

He said there would be a natural tendency for any overexpanded police agency to acquire all types of weapons. "They will get public support because people are frightened and angry after recent disturbances," predicted Greene.

Dr. King's Widow Carrying On to Make Dream a Reality

By KATHRYN JOHNSON

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The four children climbed reluctantly into the family car with a friend.

"Don't go, Mommy, come with us," pleaded 10-year-old Martin Luther King III, fighting back tears.

The widow of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. climbed in the car, comforted her tearful children, and then stepped out.

She had to address a rally of the Poor People's Campaign. And neither tears, fear nor family have kept Coretta King from aiding the cause started by her husband.

That resolute will has carried her through the kaleidoscopic events and emotions since King's assassination April 4.

The 41-year-old widow says: "I feel I have a definite role to play in carrying on. When he was alive, I played mostly a supporting role." Now she feels it has changed to one far more active.

MRS. CORETTA KING
Faithful to Late Husband's Cause

"I'M MORE convinced than ever of the rightness of our cause. I'm more determined now than ever that my husband's dream will become a reality."

Many expect Mrs. King to take an even more active role in the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, which her husband founded.

Her unfaltering composure and controlled grief during the days since her husband's murder have stirred the hearts of millions.

"I think you rise to the occasion in a crisis, I think the Lord gives you strength when you need it," she told a friend shortly after King's death. "God was using us — and now He's using me, too."

Even as a grieving widow, she interrupted her mourning to lead a march in Memphis, where her husband had been shot to death. That day, she mingled with striking garbage collectors and the next with dignitaries and celebrities from over the land, who came to her husband's funeral.

"I'LL CONTINUE to do these things which I feel are necessary for the continuance of my husband's work — and this means many things," she said.

It has meant:

— Flying to Memphis, with three of her children, to lead the silent march of thousands in honor of her slain husband and to plead for his cause.

— Flying to California a few days ago to enlist Hollywood support of the Poor People's Campaign — which her husband planned.

— And, on Mother's Day, linking arms with marchers in Washington and walking in the rain through the city's worst slums and past riot-damaged buildings to kick off the Poor People's Campaign.

Sitting in her large airy bedroom near the little booklined alcove where her husband wrote many of his speeches, Mrs. King spoke of the book she is writing of her life with her husband.

LONG CLOSE to her four children, Mrs. King does not try to overprotect them. Nor does she want special treatment for them. She has insisted they take part in open marches.

When Yolanda, 12, the eldest, recently was named to an honor council at her school, her mother took time out from her arduous schedule to attend.

Long ago, Mrs. King had prepared her children to understand about their father's going to jail — and for his death. She took them with her in August 1962 to visit him in jail in Albany, Ga.

Coretta picked cotton to help the family income during the depression. She won a scholarship to Antioch, and worked as a waitress to earn her way.

Her father runs a country store and has for 20 years or more.

INTENT ON A singing career, she went from Antioch to Boston to study voice at the New England Conservatory of Music.

There she met the young Baptist minister who was studying for his Ph.D. at Boston University.

Mrs. King recalled, "I wasn't interested in meeting a young minister at that time." Eighteen months later, on June 18, 1953, they were married in the garden of her parents' home.

The strong will that lies beneath the placid calm and dignity of her character was shown long before her husband was killed. She even tried to call President John F. Kennedy because her husband was in jail and she had not heard from him.

LATER, THE president himself called Mrs. King and told her arrangements had been made for a phone call from her husband.

She marched beside him from Selma into Montgomery in 1965 in the triumphal climax to his drive for voting rights law.

In the early days of King's crusade as leader of a Negro boycott of buses in Montgomery, Mrs. King and 9-week-old Yolanda were at home when a bomb was thrown on the front porch and detonated with a shattering force. No one was hurt.

Neither the bomb nor other threats have deterred her from going wherever she could to raise an eloquent voice in the cause for her husband.

The high moment of her life came when he received the Nobel Peace Prize. "I wish," she said then, "we could remain on this mountaintop forever."

Mother Chided; Lullaby on China Bus Didn't Sing Praises of Mao

HONG KONG (UPI) — What could be wrong with a mother singing her child to sleep with a lullaby?

Plenty, if it happens to be on a public trolley-bus in Communist China and if the song does not sing the praises of Chairman Mao.

Take the case of the lady riding on Shanghai's Route 25 one morning last April, singing softly to the baby in her arms.

She had the misfortune of sitting behind Tuan Tung hung, a primary school teacher, who recognized the lullaby for what it really was — a fiendish "foreign song called 'Darling.'"

"Finding the tune particularly irritating, Tuan turned around and rebuked the woman. 'The woman was too stunned to reply,' according to an account carried in the Shanghai Wen Wei Pao newspaper, one of the major organs of Communist Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung's Cultural Revolution.

TUAN REBUKED the mother again. Other passengers joined in, some defending the lady's singing as a harmless gesture with no political significance.

"Endorsing Tuan's opinion about the song, several passengers regarded 'Darling' as demoralizing and belonging to the bourgeoisie and declared that this demoralizing influence was a manifestation of class struggle," the paper said.

Bank of California Unveils New Home

A new address and new home for The Bank of California will be unveiled in downtown Long Beach Monday at special ribbon-cutting ceremonies to be attended by civic and bank officials.

First two floors of the 17-story, $6 million Bank of California Building, 444 West Ocean Blvd., will house the bank's Long Beach main office, to be introduced to the public with festivities all this week.

"We're thrilled to be the first major building completed in the West Ocean Boulevard urban renewal area", said Vice President-Manager Dean G. Quinlan.

"The same pioneering spirit that gave birth to our bank almost 104 years ago is still going strong today, as exemplified by our exciting new office in what will be a dynamic area of Long Beach."

THE BUILDING is of reinforced concrete, and surrounded on three sides of the first floor by a 16-foot colonnade.

The floor itself is constructed on a raised plinth, surrounded by granite-faced planters and enclosed by window walls set between black granite, with a walkway covered with terrazzo.

The second floor contains balconies over the colonnade, veneered with Plateau Danby marble, plus a walking deck outside the executive dining area which can be used for outside dining.

Inside the traditional design 25,500-square-foot banking office, the walls are paneled in a golden teak from Thailand, alternating with plate windows throughout the main floor.

THE LOBBY flooring itself is composed of carnelian red granite, while the officer's platform is covered with loop carpeting in coral shades.

All the building's columns are inlaid with a variety of exotic woods. Period chandeliers grace the main lobby, and desks are of cherrywood in a transitional period.

The executive dining area features an antique mirror ceiling.

A lobby feature of special interest is two 10x14 foot decorative wood panels behind the teller counters, one a map showing aerial view of the downtown Long Beach area 100 years ago when the bank was founded, the other the same scene in the present day.

SUPERIMPOSED on both are historical and modern scenes, respectively, of major features of the area.

The panels were executed in the studios of the Heinsbergen Decorating Co. of Los Angeles, the bank's interior designer.

An innovation in July, 1965, was the first television teller installation in the bank's tri-state system and in any Long Beach cluding trust and escrow services and conference rooms. In addition, there are 10 teller windows, one special merchant's teller window, and a vault containing over 1000 safe deposit boxes.

THERE ARE two subterranean levels of parking, enough to accommodate 300 cars.

Besides its new main banking office, the bank has completely rebuilt the drive-in, walk-up office remaining at its old site at 235 Locust Ave.

Attractively landscaped and uniquely designed, the facility features two drive-in tellers and a night deposit service to handle payments, withdrawals and deposits.

LOAN applications and new accounts will also be serviced at the new facility.

The Bank of California established its Long Beach offices by way of a merger with First National Bank of Long Beach in July, 1965, bringing its tri-state total to 54 offices. There are now 63 offices in the system, inbank, with two units situated adjacent to the building.

These units use closed circuit tv and pneumatic tubes to serve customers in their cars.

The office offers complete banking facilities, including 19 in Southern California.

The bank listed total assets of $1.591 billion on March 31, 1968, and at year end 1967 ranked 28th largest among the nation's commercial banks.

TRAFFIC FLOWING SLOWLY... Array of Green Lights Says So

SHOW GREEN TAIL LIGHTS; SAVE LIVES

By ROBERT BECKMAN
Progress Editor

The existing method of rear lighting of vehicles is wrong — and has been wrong since the first red light was installed on the back of a buggy.

If you don't agree, argue the point with Bill Bernheimer Jr., a Boston advertising firm president.

Bernheimer has renewed a two-year-old drive to get the American public to back his demand for a new lighting system.

"We are due for a change to correct lighting that will result in the saving of many, many lives," Bernheimer says emphatically.

HIS IDEA: all vehicles moving forward should have green lights glowing at the rear of the vehicle — day or night.

All vehicles applying the brake, stopped, or moving backwards would show the traditional red light.

"Vehicles stopped for an emergency should display two rear flashing red lights, now available on most cars," the ad executive declares.

BERNHEIMER asks that the public take one generous look at the line of cars ahead of them the next night drive.

"Note how difficult it is for the drivers following a car that has jammed on its brake to know that car is stopping.

"Now, imagine all cars moving along steadily — with green tail lights glowing."

"Except that one car that is stopping. Drivers behind the stopping car can spot the red signal ahead as if it were a beacon."

BERNHEIMER, in expensive brochures mailed out to the Progress Section and other newspapers, adds:

"Think of the thousands and thousands of rear-end collisions that will be avoided in the future because a red light can be seen — because a red light then would really signal DANGER."

"We need laws to make changes, but the car manufacturers should recognize immediately what this change could mean."

"It is a simple mechanical job to make this change — and it should be done immediately."

Industry Moving to Suburbia, But Staying Close to Freeway Ramps

Special to Progress Section

Location on an interstate highway or close to an interchange is being given increasing priority in site selection as industry places more importance on environment and amenities that recognize the dynamic change brought about by the highway system, S. M. Tideman Jr., Chicago, president of the Society of Industrial Realtors, said.

Greater use of trucking by light industry, ease of access in shipping and receiving, and attracting skilled employees who may live a long distance away are among the major reasons for the increasing appeal of interstate locations, Tideman stated.

He based his remarks on the annual real estate market survey conducted by the Department of Research of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

The Society, a professional affiliate of NAREB, is composed of 1,100 members who specialize in marketing industrial properties and meeting industry's real estate needs.

TIDEMAN noted that many large concerns are moving out a considerable distance from cities where they lack rail spurs, and their dependence on trucking has increased the importance of proximity to a freeway for fast movement.

He pointed out that many large industries and manufacturers of heavy type goods still require rail siding.

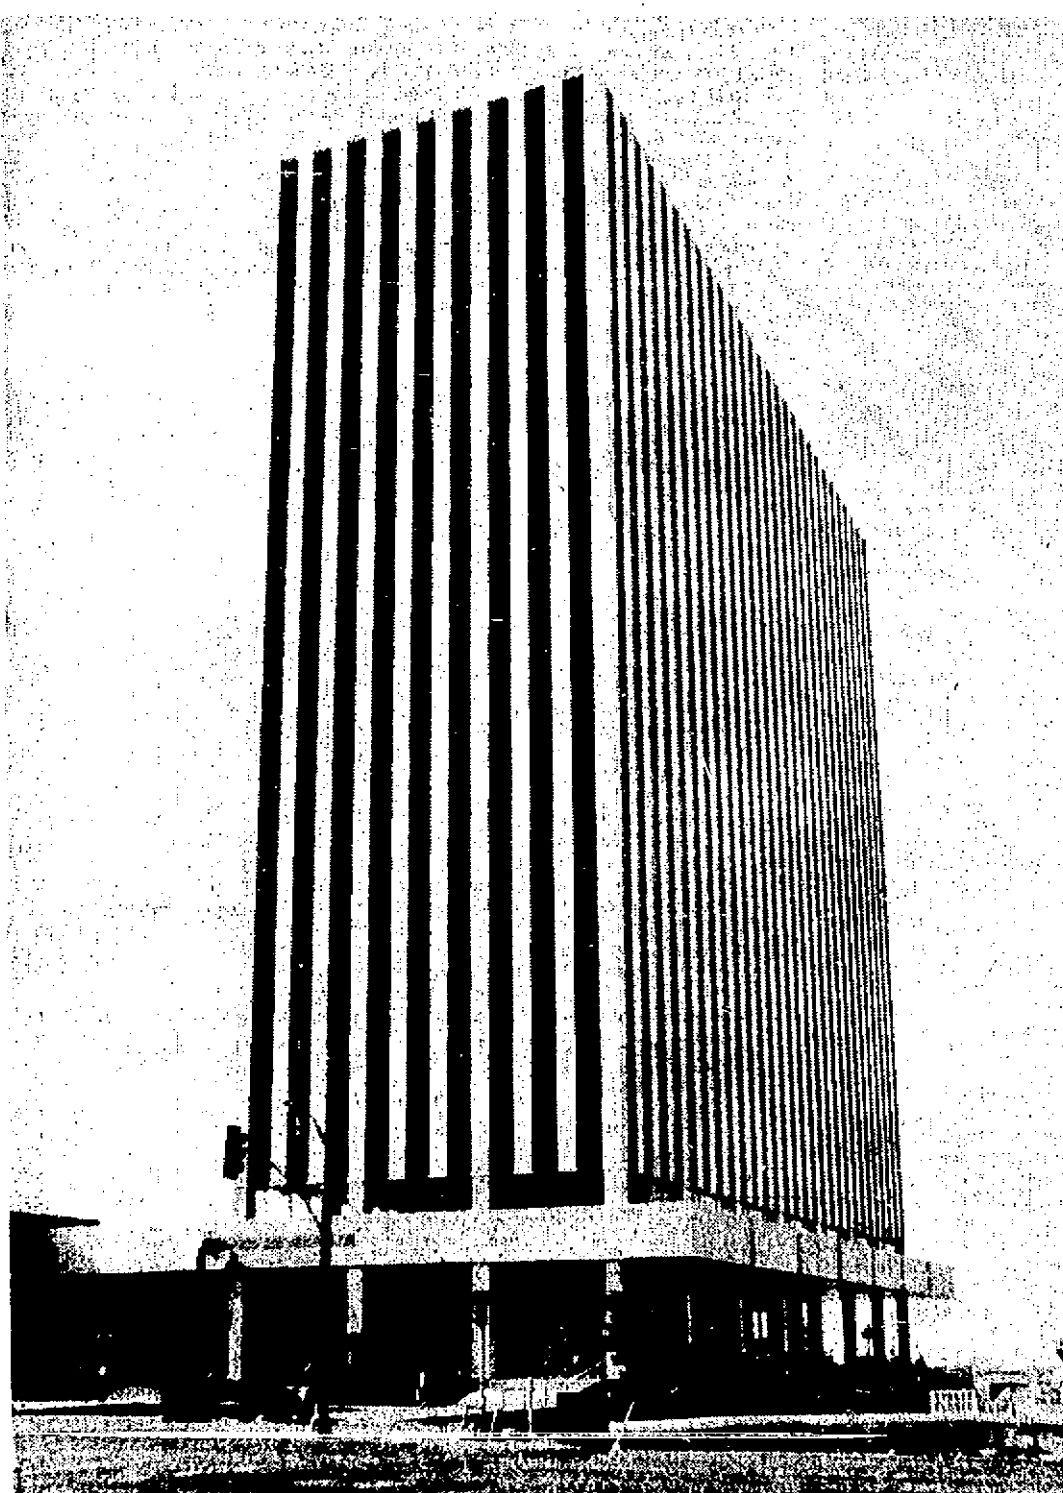

"For others, it may not be essential but is desirable. If available, buyers will often pay an extra cost as a form of insurance against trucking rate increases and strikes," he asserted.

In selecting a site, both large and small industry is showing an awareness that a well-landscaped location from which its plant can be seen creates an appealing image not only for advertising, but as an advantage in recruiting skilled and professional employees, Tideman declared.

Small Plane Industry Now Foresees Good Comeback

By KEN CHILCOTE
Business Editor

Remember right after World War II when everyone was predicting a great growth for aviation in general? There were those who envisioned a small airplane in about every other driveway for American homes.

The war had made so many aviation conscious that predictions were the returned flyers wouldn't be satisfied until they had their own plane to use for business and pleasure jaunts.

Those predictions were dead wrong. After topping 15,000 units in 1947, general aviation sales went into a tailspin that trimmed volume by a staggering 75 per cent in two years. Not until 1965 did the industry manage to squeeze out a 10,000 plane year and 1966 was the first year the plane makers were able to match the record set nearly two decades ago.

FOLLOWING THIS TORTUOUS comeback, prospects for the industry never looked better, says Francis I. duPont & Co., in their publication Investornews.

So far this year, sales in units are 8 per cent ahead of a year ago while dollar volume is up 19 per cent.

Like the automobile industry, general aviation is dominated by a Big Three. They are Beech, Cessna Aircraft and Piper Co.

Beech, located in Wichita, is known as the "Cadillac" of the light plane industry, turns out a 19-plane product line ranging from a two-seater to the new Beechcraft 99 airliner which seats 17 for commuter operations.

Cessna, also of Wichita, maintains its position as the biggest plane maker with the hottest seller a two-place model 150. Piper, of Lock Haven, Pa., probably the best known of the smaller aircraft. It stays out of the military and space business and is turning to building mini-airliners to tap the air taxi and commuter markets.

Reason for the optimism is increasing sales of larger planes for the fast-growing air taxi and commuter business and brisk interest in personal and business flying.

"Add to this the swelling discretionary spending power of the American consumer and the result is a prescription for a robust industry," said the du Pont Co.

SHELL OIL CO. will expand its Houston, Texas refinery to make it the largest of eight refineries operated by Shell in the United States.

The increased facilities will boost the daily crude oil intake at the Houston refinery to 255,000 barrels. New facilities planned include a 160,000 barrels a day distilling unit with an integrated vacuum flasher and a naphtha hydrotreater, a 25,000 barrels per day hydrocracker, a 75 million cubic feet per day hydrogen plant, a 36,000 barrels per day catalytic reformer and a saturates gas plant. The refinery is located in Deer Park, 20 miles from downtown Houston.

With these increased facilities the eight Shell refineries in the United States will have total capacity of near the million barrels per day capacity.

A RECORD $15 MILLION contract for coolant pumps for nuclear-fueled power plants has been awarded the Los Angeles-based Byron Jackson Pump Division of Borg-Warner Corp. The largest single pump order ever placed, was awarded by Combustion Engineering Inc., New York City, a major builder of nuclear power plants.

The 24 giant pumps will be installed in six plants in various locations in the East. They will be constructed at the Byron Jackson's main plant in Los Angeles, and, because of their size, will be shipped unassembled to the plant sites.

The four pumps to be assembled at each site will have the combined capacity to circulate 340,000 gallons of coolant water per minute.

Auto Production Is Going Strong

The Index sprang back last week, after the previous week's minor slip on the chartline, and hit a 164.2 per cent all-time high.

Auto production increased 2.1 per cent above last week. Producers scheduled heavy overtime on Saturday to compensate for the Memorial Day holiday and to keep pace with strong end-of-the-month auto sales.

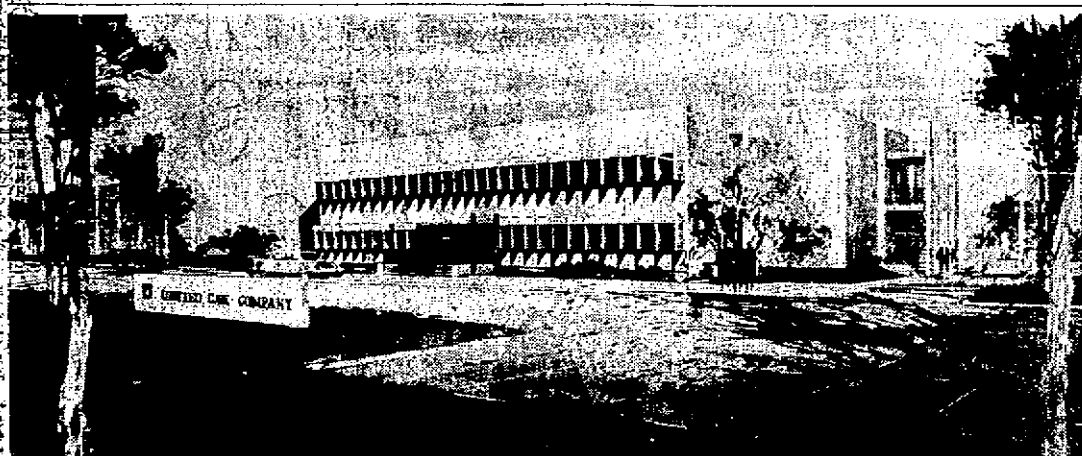

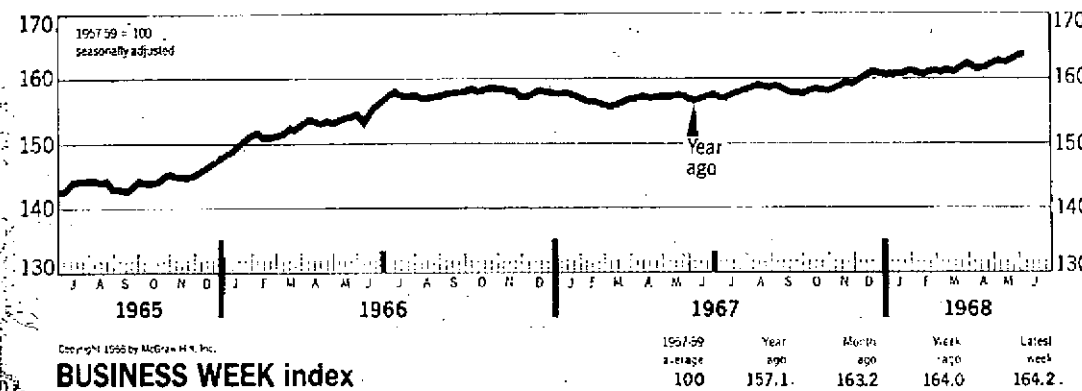

Steel output inched upward 0.5 per cent in the current week, as steel production maintains a normal increase level after the hectic strike-hedge buying of previous months.

Steel production is up 22.3 per cent above a year ago.

The energy components offset each other this week. Crude oil refinery runs increased 3.0 per cent, while electric power output decreased 0.1 per cent.

Paperboard production increased 2.6 per cent in the current week.

Surface transportation components continued last week's pattern. Inter-city truck tonnage dipped 0.5 per cent and all other carloadings decreased 0.6 per cent below last week, while miscellaneous carloadings increased 2.5 per cent above a week ago.

UNITED CAN'S NEW LA MIRADA CENTER TO RISE

Architect's rendering of new 270,000-square-foot corporate offices-manufacturing-warehousing facility for United Can Company shows fresh concept in fenestration. More than half of single-story warehouse and plant will have ceiling height of 29 feet. Facility, to be occupied late this year, is on 28-acre site at Artesia Boulevard and Industry Circle.

BIA Announces H.S. Architectural Winners

Winners in the annual Long Beach area high school Architectural Scholarship competition, sponsored by the Harbor Area Chapter, Building Industry Association, were announced last week by BIA President G. O. Millie and S. Y. Kimball, scholarship program chairman.

Judging at the high school level provided the finest entries in the history of the competition, according to one veteran contractor member who has been judging the scholarship program for 10 years. Competition is provided in models, design and working drawings.

WINNERS in the models field were: first, Burt Brown; second, Nord Embroden; and third, Doug Bothwell, all from Wilson High School. Judging for the contest in models were Robert Hoffman, Department of Building and Safety, City of Long Beach, and Kimball. Charles Copeland is instructor at Wilson High School.

WORKING drawing entries from Long Beach Poly High School swept all three places in the competition.

First place went to Martin Mancini, second to Ty Drake and third to Robert Rahenkamp. George Wilson and Chester Hansen are the instructors at Poly High.

Judges of the finals were Paul Williamson, A.I.A. and Carl Brooks, general contractor.

In the design field, which included floor plans, plot plans, elevations and interior and exterior perspectives, winners were: first, Steve Tiner of Lakewood High, second to Gary Ortelz of Lakewood High and third to Patricia Gehlke of Wilson High. Otto Krebs is the instructor at Lakewood.

JUDGING this section were Marvin Hopewell, assistant superintendent of the Department of Building and Safety, Long Beach, and Paul McKenzie, Jr., general contractor.

Winners were honored at a BIA membership meeting and awards dinner at the Petroleum Club. Fifty dollar scholarships were awarded each first place entry and certificates of achievements to the others.

These are but a few of this week's trade tips, supplied by Revan Komaroff of the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce, along with his comments on the import-export business aimed at Long Beach-Orange County businessmen.

The short term comprehensive policy insures commercial credit risks up to 90 per cent, and political risks up to 85 per cent of invoice value.

Rates for such coverage average less than 50 cents per $100. The medium term comprehensive policy insures both commercial credit and political risks up to 90 per cent of contract price less buyer's down payment, plus interest on deferred installments up to 6 per cent — all at an attractive single premium rate covering the entire credit period.

A prudent exporter or manufacturer insures his foreign receivables against risks of non-payment which may arise.

ALL DRESSED up, no place to go — Over 10 million Japanese possess driver's licenses — and no car! They represent about half of the country's total license holders.

A survey by the Japan Automobile Manufacturers Association reveals 8.1 per cent of working households now own passenger cars. It is also estimated that a Japanese family must have an income of approximately $2,500 per year to afford a car.

TARIFF curbs of 50 per cent mean profits for exporters — These cuts are being made by 38 foreign countries as a result of the Kennedy Round. Thousands of U.S. products benefit. VARIOUS meetings are being held throughout the U.S. to implement the pressure on Japanese trading firms to be neutral and impartial and trade favorably with all nations.

It is somewhat ironic that the Japanese themselves deplore discrimination and yet exercise discrimination against Israel.

Arab pressure on many U.S. companies has been tried in recent years, but the U.S. Government will not tolerate the same and there are penalties involved when any U.S. firm yields to Arab pressure.

THERE HAS BEEN A 12 PER CENT gain in the Southland's economy during the last year, reports L. H. Showalter, vice president and manager of Security First National Bank. A sharp gain was noted by the bank's economic research department for May. As measured on the index of business activity compiled by the bank, the economic performance increased from a previous high of 171.1 in April to a new record of 176.5 in May. The local economy registered 160.5 in March and 170.4 in February. A year ago the May index stood at 157.5.

Increased activity for May was reflected in all available statistical components of the index, Showalter said. Substantial advances were recorded in department store sales, bank clearings, and real estate sales. Construction activity based on the dollar value of building permits issued, also increased but at a slower pace.

Employment reached an all-time high in April, the latest month for which statistics are available. There were 4,683,000 civilian jobholders in the nine metropolitan counties of Southern California, after adjustment for seasonal influences. Employment had increased by 157,000 workers or 3.5 per cent over a year's time. April unemployment remained at 4.4 per cent on a seasonally adjusted basis. Nationally the ratio of unemployed to the total civilian work force was 3.5 per cent.

MODEL T FORDS ... Head For Avalon

WORLD OF WHEELS

By ART STEPHAN
Auto Editor

In shops and garages all over the country, fine old Model T Fords, originally manufactured in the period from 1908 to 1927, are being readied for their departure to Avalon on Santa Catalina Island.

Sponsored by the Model T Ford Club of America, a 3,000-member national group headquartered in Los Angeles, the event will draw together, late in June, representatives from Massachusetts to California.

Highlighting the three-day event will be a tortuous drive through thirty-five rugged inland miles of unfenced wilderness inhabited by free-roaming bear, bison and mountain goats.

Over two hundred people are expected to participate in this unique event which will transform historic Avalon into an early-century motoring town.

FORD DEALERS sold a record number of cars and trucks during the final 10 days of May with a 42 per cent increase over the same period last year.

Car sales for the period totaled 73,170, up 39 per cent from the 52,216 sold in the corresponding period a year ago, said John B. Naughton, Ford Motor Company vice president and Ford Division general manager.

Truck sales for the period, a record for the fourth consecutive time, were 27,345, up 52 per cent from the 17,973 sold in the same period a year ago.

The daily sales rates for cars and trucks were 8,130 and 3,038, respectively, compared to 6,590 cars and 2,247 trucks in the corresponding period in 1967. There were nine selling days in the period just ended, compared to eight a year ago.

CAR SALES in May totaled 170,598, almost 9 per cent over the same month last year. Each had a total of 26 selling days.

Truck sales for the month rose to 63,330, establishing a record for any month in the history of the division. The increase was 21 per cent over May of 1967, when 52,404 trucks were sold.

"This is the spring surge we predicted, and we look forward to a continuing steady pace through the summer," Mr. Naughton said.

For the calendar year, we passed the million mark in sales two weeks earlier than in 1967. We closed this month this year with a total of 1,065,154 car and trucks sales.

Car sales during the final period in May included 36,000 big Fords, 17,373 Fairlanes, 5,514 Falcons, 12,408 Mustangs and 1,875 Thunderbirds.

Grove Board Reports Sales

Multiple Listing sales for May for Garden Grove Board of Realtors far exceeded all previous months, according to figures released by Volney Womack, chairman of the West County's Multiple Listing Committee.

A total of $6,285,985.00 in dollar volume has been reported, topping the highest previous record by over one million dollars.

A total of 262 sales were reported with an average price of $23,900.00.

Of these, 60 per cent were cooperative sales involving one office as the listing office and another as the selling office.

Sales this year are running 23 per cent ahead of last year with volume of $52,847,194.00 during the past 12 months.

MEMBERSHIP committee chairman, Stan Moore has had a busy year with nearly 200 new members added to the rolls.

New members were inducted at the last meeting, including heads of two new member firms: Glynn J. Ledet, owner of Mark Realty, and Chester Lautzenheiser who heads his own firm.

However, the greatest portion of the membership increase can be attributed to the fact that the Westminster Board merged with the Garden Grove Board earlier this year, a move that provided greater service to the property owners in the western Orange County area.

TOTAL membership is now 595, the highest ever recorded for the local board.

"By virtue of these members' common pooling of specific and vital information, the home and income property seller and buyer can find a ready market or a very specific type of home or income property," said John E. Schultz, president of the board.

Real Estate Trade-Ins Gains Popularity

For years the real estate industry has been searching for a way to take homes in on trade similar to the trade-in programs offered in the automobile industry. The cost of financing a trade-in program is much higher in the home industry, however, than in the automobile industry.

Too, no wholesale outlet exists in the home industry as does the auto industry.

In spite of these variables in today's home-buying market Walker & Lee feels that at last they have developed an exceptional trade-in program.

BASIC secret of the trade-in program is that the home-owner remains on the property during the guarantee period, maintains the home, makes the payments and if the property is sold in a normal manner during the guarantee period the homeowner receives all the excess profit obtained from the sale of his property.

If at the end of the guarantee period the property is not sold, Walker & Lee will immediately purchase the property from the owner, take title, and the owner is free to move and complete the purchase of another home, or trailer or do whatever their purpose was in selling their present home.

MOST appealing part of the Walker & Lee "Guaranteed Sales Program" is:

1. The seller receives full market value of his property less exactly the same selling costs he would have had if the property had been sold in a normal manner through a real estate broker.

2. If the property sells above the guaranteed figure the homeowner receives the full profit of the higher price.

3. The guarantee gives the homeowner the peace of mind to know that after a specified period of time his property will be sold at a satisfactory price and he is able to plan his future without having to worry about maintaining a house while occupying a house trailer, home or apartment in another location.

THE GUARANTEED Trade Program developed by Walker & Lee has proved successful because 22 general brokerage offices, and a sales force of over 325 salesmen and women, affords the facility to dispose of residential real estate quickly and at a fair price which includes consideration of the market conditions, the condition of the home and the location of the property.

Another condition that exists in the Southern California area today is what is known as the "tough" market and the "easy" market.

BUILDERS and individual sellers of homes, over the $30,000 price range, find themselves in a buyers market, because there are more houses than the demand, making it difficult for sellers to sell and easier for buyers to buy a higher priced home at a greatly reduced price.

Today, homes in the $15,000 to $30,000 price range are much in demand because lower priced new homes have not been built during the last 4 years.

One of Walker & Lee's most successful sales campaigns has been to encourage owners of higher priced properties to take in on trade the homes of buyers who have lower priced properties and immediately re-list them for sale.

THIS accomplishes two things: the seller of the higher priced home disposes of his difficult-to-sell higher priced property. The buyer who has a lower priced home to sell negotiates his move very simply and directly with the least inconvenience and cost to him.

The seller who originally found himself in the "tough" market now finds himself in the "easy" market with a property in the $15,000-$30,000 price range that can quickly be sold.

Walker & Lee's participation in this program is to actually guarantee the sale of the lower priced home after it is taken in on trade. The original owner of the higher priced home can be completely free of any obligation within a very limited period of time.

The basic concept of the Guaranteed Trade Program is to break even on a trade-in program while creating a large volume of sales.

When we designed the homes at Greenbrook, we realized every one was a big deal.

For openers, look at their size.

Not one of these homes has less than 3 bedrooms. Some have 4, some 5, and some even 6. And they're all big bedrooms at that.

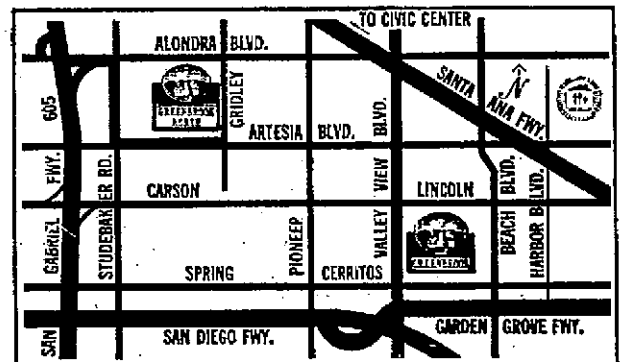

We've even got one you can easily turn into a 7 bedroom home. It's our Spacemaker.

And inside you'll see styling. Like you've never seen before. Beautiful fireplaces, balconies and "mile-high" living room ceilings. (Several people have used the word "fantastic" to describe the interiors of our homes.)

Finally, there are the prices of these homes.

Even though they are big and well-designed we have been able to make the prices very, very reasonable.

In fact, you'll probably find yourself looking at other homes and saying "Greenbrook homes are a big deal!"

DOZENS OF DESIGNS... In College Park Homes

College Park Homes' Quality Exceeding Buyer Expectation

Top quality materials and construction are homebuyers are delighted to find after learning the moderate prices of College Park homes, according to Jerry Henderson, marketing director of the Seal Beach development.

Many visitors to the model homes center are surprised that prices include such hallmarks of quality as lath and plaster walls, concrete driveways, imported marble entryways, ceramic-tiled countertops and custom cut-crystal chandeliers," Henderson said.

Also included are many appointments, such as carpeting, all-electric kitchen appliances, furniture-fine cabinetry and wet bars.

PRICES AT THE S&S Construction Co. development are from $27,950, on VA, FHA or conventional terms.

Eight floor plans provide a choice of three, four, five and six-bedroom homes in an extensive variety of exteriors.

Among the most popular floor plans is one with an architecturally integrated bonus room which can be converted at a later date to two additional bedrooms without altering the exterior appearance of the home. In the meantime, the bonus room is usable immediately as a game room, library or hobby headquarters.

Flower-fresh kitchens have luminous ceilings and offer the convenience of direct service to the patio-garden area through sliding glass windows.

The variety of fireplace designs amazes most visitors. More than two dozen styles are available, making it possible to choose the exact degree of formality the purchaser desires.

Schools are in top-rated school districts and shopping facilities abound.

LOCATION AMENITIES have helped to make College Park the fastest growing community in the area.

Inspection of the decorator-furnished model homes is invited. Take San Diego-Garden Grove Freeway to Valley View Street turnoff and go north on Valley View to Cerulean.

THE WEEK'S PATENTS

Nuclear-Powered Heart Developed

New York Times Service

A nuclear-powered mechanical heart, designed for complete implantation in the body, contains a miniature steam pump.

A patent for the heart was issued to Thermo Electron Engineering Corporation, Waltham, Mass., holder of contracts in the federal program aimed at developing devices to assist the natural heart or serve as substitutes for it.

The little power plant gets its energy from a radioisotope, preferably plutonium 238, which heats a boiler. A pair of blood pumps is connected to the arterial and venous systems of the body.

The power supply regulates itself according to the needs of the body — from activity to sleep.

Blood pump models, powered by external sources, have been tested in animals. A capsule of plutonium 238 has been in a dog's body since last September.

No artificial heart has yet been built. In a human being, the pumps could be installed in the chest, but the power supply (including capsule, boiler and engine) would probably have to be placed in the abdomen. As the system is closed, there will be no steam exhaust.

Robert J. Harvey invented the mechanical heart while heading the company's Dynamic Systems Department. He is now working for his doctoral degree in biomedical engineering at Clark University, Worcester, Department of Health, Education, under a grant from the National Science Foundation.

E. I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co. received a patent for a necktie.

The company is not entering neckwear manufacture. It merely obtained the patent to protect its customers. No one else can now get a patent covering the use of non-woven material as a tie lining.

The Du Pont product is Reemay, a spun-bonded, paperlike polyester material. Since Reemay was introduced two years ago, more than 100 million garments are said to have been lined with it. In neckties it is expected to bring economy and washability.

Conventional woven inner linings of four-in-hands must be cut on the bias. The non-woven material can be cut without regard to direction. This permits more complete use of the fabric. The inventor is Dr. George Limperis of Du Pont's fibers department in Wilmington.

Westinghouse Electric Corporation has reminded rival manufacturers of commercial nuclear reactors that it believes they have been using inventions for which it received patents.

Unauthorized manufacture, use or sale of a patented invention during the term of the patent constitutes infringement. In this instance the firm began last Tuesday.

The patents cover innovations in fuel assemblies. In a statement issued in Pittsburgh, Donald J. Povejsil, general manager of the nuclear fuel division, said the inventions had been used in most of the nuclear reactor cores that Westinghouse had built for electric utility power plants.

"We believe these inventions also have been adopted by substantially every manufacturer of commercial nuclear reactors in the U.S. and, to some extent by manufacturers in foreign countries," Povejsil added. "Westinghouse will consider licensing responsible manufacturers under these patents on reasonable terms."

The principal patent was awarded to Erling Frisch, long an engineer for the company and now a consultant.

It covers an arrangement of metal grids to hold the fuel rods precisely but allow them to expand.

A patent covering modifications was granted Harry N. Andrews and Herbert W. Keller. A third fuel assembly patent went to Andrews and Faust N. Vespa.

CEA President Is Guest of L.B. EA

Dorothy Clausen, president of the California Escrow Association, was honored guest at last week's meeting of the Long Beach Escrow Association.

She spoke to chapter members at their Princess Louise meeting, detailing state-level activities and the upcoming educational seminar and convention.

THE STATE president presented the CEA certificate to Judith Kribs, Long Beach group alumnus.

Miss Clausen, of Palm Springs, was given a key to the city by the mayor and a tour of the Long Beach Harbor, conducted by John Carr of the Long Beach Naval Ship Yard and Long Beach group president Al pha M. Larrieux.

WHAT'S YOUR PROBLEM?

To Invest or Not—What Should the Retired Do?

By BERNARD MELTZER

As a group, retired people are faithful readers of this column. It is frequently asked by people in this group, "Is real estate a proper investment in one retirement plans?"

MR. MELTZER:

I love to get columnists fighting with one another. The two columns I have in front of me give exactly opposite advice.

You advised a couple that one of the best ways of increasing their retirement income was to invest in a small apartment house. The chap who edits the "Old Folks Column" gave exactly opposite advice. He told the couple in a similar circumstance to invest their money in preferred stock or high yielding bonds.

What goes — whose advice shall I follow? I think you owe me an explanation.

MR. G.Y.

ANSWER: If it were prudent I'd run from this question. Since on occasion I've been known to stick my head into the lion's den, I'll valiantly attempt to answer.

My basic advice was that, "the couple buy the small apartment house provided that they had the health and energy to cope with the problem." I have literally investigated hundreds of cases where this advice has been followed and I have found that these are the benefits:

(A) The investment return is very high. If the couple do minor repair work, collect rents and manage the apartments they can get about a 20 per cent return on their money.

(B) Psychologically, as property owners they become part of the community and the community's institutions. A tragedy of old age is the couple alone and slowly living out their days without any interests.

(C) It gives the elderly couple a chance to meet new people, face new problems — in short, it keeps them young and interested in life.

(C) Real estate is probably the best hedge against inflation for the average person. Retired couples who have no such hedge have been watching their savings dwindle at the rate of about 3 per cent a year.

The reason many retirement counselors do not ordinarily recommend real estate is because they have a background in finance. They understand stocks and bonds, but real estate is often a strange field to them.

MR. MELTZER:

I am a high school English teacher and therefore think I know the meaning of words. I am now in a dispute with my broker over a problem of semantics.

In the Agreement of Sale he has inserted a clause that the title be "marketable." I consulted the dictionary and I think that this word is not strong enough. I insist that the seller give me a "good" title.

I am sure you will agree that my choice of words is superior.

It may come as a surprise to many readers, but a "marketable" title is superior for a "good title."

ANSWER: Every profession has developed its own language and gives special meaning to words. Real estate is no exception.

(Meltzer welcomes your letters and comments. He is unable to enter into correspondence with readers, but will attempt to answer letters through his column.)

But my grandparents have, my mother and father have, my aunts and uncles have, my older brother has, and when my savings account grows, I will too!

Guess it's because S & S builds such great houses.

Mommy just loves the imported marble entries, custom cut-crystal chandeliers, and the huge all-electric kitchen. Daddy says the construction is "tops" because S & S uses double thick lath and plaster (not drywall), marble countertops, genuine stone or brick fireplaces.

I love the plush wall to wall carpeting and it's in all the rooms.

Shapell Park, one of the newest parks in Seal Beach, is within the community and my school, the beach and mommy's shopping are just minutes away.

Walker & Lee Sets Sale Week

Walker & Lee Inc. is about to kick off one of its most impressive real estate sales drives of resale homes in the company's history.

Naming it "Walker & Lee World's Record Week," the company has announced plans to break its own record of selling over 100 homes during the week of June 23.

The drive is based on the company's conviction real estate can offer excellent buys with good financing packages despite the aspects of the current interest rate structure.

WILLIAM McCABE, senior vice president and head of Walker & Lee's Resale Home Division points out that the present resale home market offers some of the best values in real estate, many of them only one, two or three years old, and in critical areas where the population has increased because of added growth in industry in the area.

Homes are in every style and with every feature to facilitate any size family and among them homes with three bedrooms and den, with or without pool, single or two story dwellings.

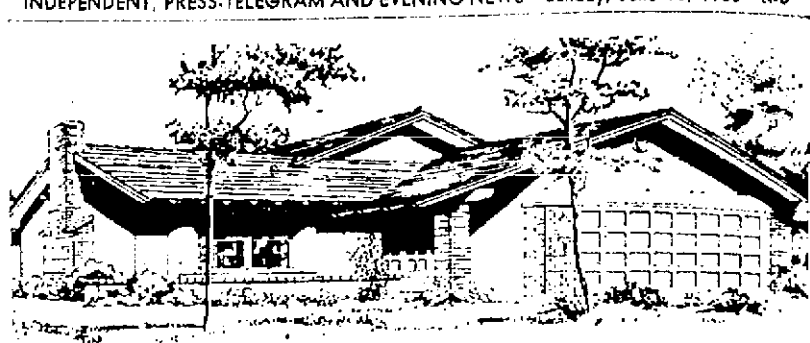

We intend to make it known that we have over 1,000 listings ready and available to be shown by any one of our staff of over 325 salesmen and women at any of our 22 offices," said McCabe.

Walker & Lee offices are located in Orange County, Lakewood, Long Beach and Ventura County.

New Accreditation for Memorial Hospital

New accreditation of Memorial Hospital of Long Beach by a national organization representing the American College of Physicians, American College of Surgeons, American Hospital Association and American Medical Association was announced last week.

The Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals again gave Memorial its stamp of approval after conducting a routine, intensive examination of hospital records, services and facilities.

Memorial's certificate of accreditation cites the hospital "for providing high quality medical and hospital care in all services and for maintaining as its primary objective the safety and welfare of the patient."

ACTION by the Joint Commission's board to accredit Memorial "without reservations" followed a three-day site visit by a physician-field representative and a review by the organization's staff in Chicago.

Accreditation by the Joint Commission is given to hospitals which apply and can meet the rigorous standards of the national medical-hospital panel.

The accreditation is not permanent and the application, on-site survey, staff review and board action are required every few years to qualify for it.

Industry Moving Trend to Suburbia

schools, churches, recreational facilities, and a favorable municipal climate are among the other amenities of location considered especially important by industry today, according to Realtors from across the country who answered the NAREB survey.

Respondents indicated the strong demand for industrial sites and space in existing facilities is expected to grow in the coming months.

"Higher costs of external financing and construction have not dampened appreciably business plans for investment in new plant and equipment. Recent reports indicate an 8 per cent increase over last year, which would bring the total for 1968 to $66.5 billion," the survey report says.

RESULTS of the NAREB survey show:

Higher prices for industrial sites reflecting the demand for space for growth. Higher than a year ago in 83 per cent of the nation, prices of improved sites are stable in 14 per cent, and lower in only 3 per cent. A similar upward movement was reported for unimproved land suitable for industrial development.

Vigorous market activity, with dollar volume of improved and unimproved sites higher than a year ago in 61 and 59 per cent of the market areas, respectively.

Vacancies in one-story industrial structures have declined over the past year, although the construction level of both manufacturing space and warehousing facilities has been high. Less vacant manufacturing and warehouse space than a year ago is reported in 62 per cent of the country.

Strong demand, associated with industrial expansion, has strengthened prices of both manufacturing and warehousing facilities. In three out of four market areas, transfers of smaller one-story plants (less than 50,000 square feet) are at price above those prevalent last year. Values of manufacturing space of 50,000 square feet or more are up in two of three areas, while warehouse buildings are currently selling at prices above those of a year ago in 70 per cent of the nation.

Dollar volume of transactions involving one-story manufacturing structures of 50,000 square feet, or more is reported higher than last year in 38 per cent of the country, about the same in 56 per cent, and lower in about 6 per cent.

Comparable figures for smaller manufacturing space reported were 52, 46 and 2 per cent. Market activity involving one-story warehousing, measured by dollar volume, is similar to last year in 60 per cent of the areas, higher in 38 per cent and lower in only 2 per cent.

Larwin Co. Official Urges Updating Home Ad Plans

As moderator of a panel discussion entitled "Advertising and Public Relations in the Home Building Business" during the 10th Annual Pacific Coast Builders Conference, in San Francisco, Michael L. Tenzer, vice president and director of marketing for the Larwin Co., called for a fresh and dynamic approach to communications.

"Developers need to take a completely new look at their advertising and public relations," he said. "Our industry today is not reaching the consumer. Today's homebuyers are sophisticated readers and demanding viewers; they are younger and more affluent than they used to be, and well aware that competition for their discretionary income is the hottest it's ever been!"

"If the homebuilding industry is to command its rightful place in consumer spending, it must convince people that their primary expense should be for the best possible home. All other expenditures such as travel, cars, cameras, color TVs, are subordinate to good living."

"We just sell the concept of home ownership itself, and many builders today are too bogged down in traditional advertising techniques to do the job. Media selection is vital too. At the Larwin Co. we are currently evaluating all of our present media, including television, magazines, radio, and local and area newspapers, in order to be absolutely sure that we have the best traffic-producing combination at our command. Changing patterns in economics and consumer psychology make this a necessity for our entire industry."

PETROLEUM, NATURAL GAS LEAD

California Mineral Production Increasing

California mineral production increased by $20 million last year, according to a report by the Economic Research Department of Security First National Bank.

Output increased from just less than $1.7 billion in 1966 to an estimated $1.72 billion in 1967. Security Bank reported that Southern California's contribution to the state total is unofficially estimated at 80 per cent.

California mineral production, which ranks third nationally, behind Texas and Louisiana, has increased in each of the past eight years. Since 1960, it has advanced by 22.4 per cent.

PETROLEUM ($45.4 million) and natural gas ($311.8 million) accounted for 67 per cent of the total mineral value derived in 1967. Fuel extraction increased by 4.9 per cent last year, but declines in other commodities reduced the over-all year's gain to one of 1.1 per cent.

Among those which declined in production last year were the state's third and fourth ranked minerals: Cement ($139.5 million) and sand and gravel ($17.5 million). Decreased production was reported for virtually all materials used in construction — also including stone, clay and gypsum.

AN OVER-ALL decline of 6 per cent was recorded in the production of 28 non-metallic minerals. Only six of the nonmetals gained in both volume and value during the year. Mercury production was higher in value but lower in quantity.

Wayne Roy in L.B. Realtor Talk

Bill Phillips, program chairman, announced the guest speaker for Tuesday's 7:15 a.m. meeting of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors at the Crown Cafeteria will be Wayne Roy of the Long Beach Unified School District.

Roy's topic will be "What Has Happened in Education?"

Salt Water Use

An additional seventy trillion gallons of fresh water a year will be needed in the U.S. by 1975. Nickel containing alloys that can stand up to corrosive salt water and to the heat and cold of conversion, are in the forefront of materials for new seawater conversion equipment.

Metals decreased by 5 per cent. Only in iron ore, tin and zinc was production higher than in 1966.

The southern 14 counties accounted for slightly more than $1 billion in petroleum and natural gas production and for roughly $400 million in other minerals mined.

COUNTY-by-county figures for 1967 are not available, Security Bank reported, but the six leading counties in 1966 were Kern ($427 million), Los Angeles ($290.2 million), Santa Barbara ($126.3 million), Orange ($121.4 million), San Bernardino ($112.6 million) and Ventura ($107.5 million).

The greatest recent percentage gains between 1960 and 1966 have been made in Inyo (88.1 per cent) and Riverside (82.7 per cent) counties. San Bernardino leads California counties in the production of minerals other than petroleum and natural gas.

KERN COUNTY outproduced 33 states during 1966, as its crude oil production rose by 8.8 per cent. Together, its oil and natural gas brought $340.3 million during the year. Kern's balance was principally provided by boron minerals, cement, stone and sand and gravel.

By the end of 1966, Los Angeles County's Wilmington Field has surpassed that of East Texas to become the largest oilfield in the United States, yielding approximately 144,000 barrels of petroleum a day.

During the year 73 new slant wells were drilled from piers and offshore islands in the development of the field's southeast offshore extension.

VIEW FROM BALCONY

Camera angle from balcony overlooking living room provides added height and spaciousness in "Monterey" model home at El Ray Park, the R. A. Watt Co. residential community in Cerritos. Sunken living room, richly decorated in shades of gold, features cathedral-style open-beam ceiling and massive floor-to-ceiling brick and wood-faced fireplace. Model homes in the middle-price range of $32,950 to $37,950 have been opened at El Ray Park, located on Studebaker Road between South Street and Del Amo Boulevard.

Fire-Retardant Shakes
Now Produced in West

Red cedar shakes and shingles which resist fires effectively that Underwriters' Laboratories has given them a Class "C" rating in fire safety, are now being produced for the first time in the West.

The fire-retardancy is attained by closed-retort impregnation of the wood with chemicals that are leach resistant, colorless and odorless.

Production has started in new facilities installed at the Oroville plant of Koppers Company, Inc.

Since most shingles and shakes are cut in the Pacific Northwest timber areas, these now can be given the fire-protective treatment in transit when enroute to California and other states.

The Oroville plant is capable of producing about 6,000,000 square feet of the shakes and shingles annually.

Underwriters' Laboratories Class "C" approval has now opened the way for greatly expanded use of red cedar shakes and shingles by architects and builders in places where use of wood roofing materials previously was restricted.

Particularly, architects who desire a freedom of rustic design now expected to specify them in roofing of apartments, motels, educational buildings, churches, restaurants and other light construction.

While fire-protected wood has met virtually all building code regulations for a number of years, its use was restricted to interiors of buildings because the fire-protective chemicals tended to leach out under rain.

Koppers research has now developed the leach resistant treatment, and the Underwriters' tests now only proved that wood thus treated has high resistance to flame spread, but retains this resistance, even after being subjected to the equivalent of 80 inches of rainfall per year over a ten-year period.

In the treating process, the wood is placed in large cylinders and completely surrounded with the preservative chemical in liquid form. Heat and pressure are applied, driving the preservative deeply into the wood cells where it becomes chemically fixed.

Giant Machines

Giant new machines capable of boring a six-foot diameter hole through 180 feet of rock in less than two weeks are speeding development of International Nickel's mines in Ontario and Manitoba. The rebarbers can complete a job in one-quarter of the time it used to take.

Plumbing, wiring, lumber . . . these and virtually all the other things that go into building a house will be higher. Therefore, so will the whole house. Later, building materials will look just like the ones that are going into homes now. The only difference will be the price. Up!

The experts say that a new home will cost about 3% more next year. For that reason, the homes being built right now will be worth more next year, too. So buying a new home now makes good business sense.

Costs Reduced for Home Air Conditioning

NOTE: Richard N. Thunes is public service director for the American Building Contractors Association and Western Regional Home Improvement Council.

Air conditioning has become one of great comfort

RETIRES

Mrs. Opal M. Murrin of Long Beach, key punch supervisor for General Telephone Company's data processing department in Long Beach, has retired after 31 years' service.

Kenneth W. Epling, of Cypress, assistant vice president of United California Bank, has been named sales manager and put in charge of all sales of government and federal agency securities.

buys for the homeowner.

Engineering advances, and the simple fact that many more home air conditioning units are now being manufactured, have combined to reduce the cost.

Even so, it still represents a major investment in improving a home. And since the comfort and well-being of your family are involved, you will want to get the best advice you can. You don't want to get a unit that's too small or too large. Especially, you don't want to get a unit that won't do what you want it to.

Many factors enter into sizing of air conditioning. The orientation of the house to the sun's path, the arrangement of rooms, the home's insulation, the location and size of windows are all important.

It's not a job for an amateur, and especially not something a department store salesman can do.

A WORD about window air conditioners. They will definitely cool a room, perhaps even two. But no matter what their size, they won't cool an entire house. And the number of window air conditioners required to serve all areas of your home will almost certainly cost more than will a single system custom-designed to your home.

It's interesting what a difference air conditioning makes in a family's life. Recent studies show that families in air conditioned homes eat, sleep and live quite normally during the summer.

They aren't bothered by the excessive heat and humidity. Families that don't have air conditioning tend to eat haphazard meals, miss valuable sleep and spend much more of their time outside the home — often in air conditioned restaurants and motion-picture theaters.

QUESTION: Are the self-cleaning ovens available as built-ins?

ANSWER: Yes, in many models, both gas and electric, and from many manufacturers. They all work on the same principle. The oven is super-heated, and that converts cooking residues into a fine ash.

Most go up the vent and the remainder are wiped away with a damp sponge. The self-cleaning oven is quite safe because the door has an automatic lock to prevent accidental opening during the cleaning process, which lasts two to three hours.

Adequate insulation in the oven keeps your kitchen cool. Cost of cleaning is economical, too.

The utility companies calculate that the average cleaning costs only about 15 cents in fuel consumption.

ZODY'S NEWEST STORE TO RISE IN SANTA ANA

Ground was broken last week for Zody's fifth Orange County store and the 11th in the fast-growing chain. Newest facility will be at 17th Street and Grand Avenue, Santa Ana. Official opening ceremony, at which champagne bottle was smashed on

"bow" of caterpillar, was Lee Freedman, senior vice president and general manager of Zody's. New store, of 109,000 square feet, will be chain's largest.

Green Valley Opening Features

A combination of new kitchen design ideas, six new model homes, and a new unit in one of Orange County's unique communities, will join today in the grand opening of George M. Holstein and Sons Green Valley development in Fountain Valley.

The six model homes will be highlighted around the prize winning 7 Chef's Gourmet Kitchen — the revolutionary new kind of kitchen that delighted over 200,000 at the recent Orange County Home Show.

The kitchen was actually designed by seven famous county chefs and incorporates new ideas in color, design, convenience and built-in appliances in a compact, yet functional kitchen. The kitchen will be on display — and will be available in one of the development's most popular models.

THE SIX new model homes in the new Green Valley Parkside homes unit include three, four and five-bedroom plans, include indoor-outdoor living ideas, dramatic two-story living rooms, garden kitchens, a garden bath, family rooms. The prices will be from $25,500 to $32,000, with both FHA and veteran terms available.

The Green Valley planning is some of the most unusual in the United States — and could be a today at the site on Warner Avenue just east of Brookhurst and just north of the San Diego Freeway, Brookhurst off-ramp.

THE SEVEN CHEF'S Gourmet Kitchen was designed by seven famous Orange County chefs.

Among the new ideas that highlight the kitchen are new colors, wall-to-wall carpet, wine storage, French pot and pan rack, and revolutionary inside-outside barbecue. The barbecue may be operated from within the kitchen or from the patio area.

The seven chefs who participated in the unusual design are Fred Hossli of Chez Cary; Edward Shin of Five Crowns; Antonio Stipcevic, Villa del Sol; Thomas Trent, Branding Iron; Ulysses Yanis, Francois; Antoine Brunin, Newport Beach Tennis Club; and Oscar Zink, Newport Inn.

One Month in Real Estate; Sells 9 Homes

Change of career has paid off for Larry LeBlanc, a former finance executive.

Only one month in real estate and on the job at Walker & Lee, Orange County real estate firm, LeBlanc has sold 9 homes.

LeBlanc led all other company salesmen to win the "Most Homes Sold" award of the month. His total sales volume for the month was $191,151.

LeBlanc, who lives in Garden Grove with his wife, Anita, and their four children, recently moved to California from Canada.

LeBlanc became interested in real estate and Walker & Lee through his brother Ernie who is a district manager for the company.

Air West Asks Line in Mexico

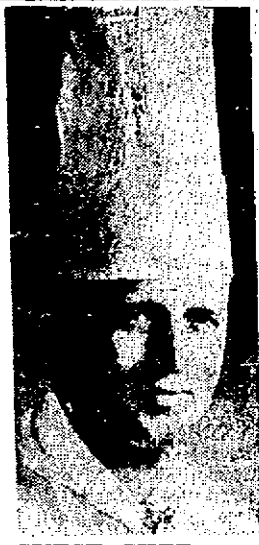

Air West has requested authority to provide the first commercial air services between key cities in the west and Mexico, it was announced by G. Robert Henry, president of the new regional airline.

Henry said Air West, created recently by the merger of Bonanza, Pacific and West Coast Airlines, has asked the Civil Aeronautics Board for rights to operate between San Francisco, Mazatlan and Guadalajara; between Yuma, Arizona, Mazatlan and Guadalajara; and between Los Angeles and Ensenada, Baja, California.

Henry said that if the company is granted the routes, which also will require approval of the Mexican government, Air West plans to use Boeing 727 tri-jets on the San Francisco-Mexico route, Douglas DC-9 twinjets on the Yuma-Mexico route and F-27 propjets on the Los Angeles-Baja, California route.

No carrier, either Mexican or U.S., presently provides air service over any of the routes.

AIR WEST, whose route system extends throughout eight western states, and as far as Calgary, Canada, inaugurated its first service to Mexico on April 30 on a Phoenix-Tucson-La Paz-Mazatlan - Puerto Vallarta routing.

GUEST CHEF

One of Orange County's most famous chefs, Ulysses Yanis, of the Francois restaurant in Huntington Beach, will be guest chef today at Parkside Homes in Green Valley where the award winning Seven Chef's Gourmet Kitchen will be on display.

WALL STREET BRIEFS

NEW YORK (UPI)—E. F. Hutton says the shooting of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy probably will have only a temporary impact on the market. It notes that any profit taking in the wake of the shooting probably would have occurred anyway, but says it is not expected to alter the basic upward trend.

Bache & Co. says any market reaction to the Kennedy shooting will be "psychological and short-lived." It says that the forces which have been fueling the current market appear "sufficiently powerful to overcome the shock of the tragic news."

Stanley Heller & Co. says it believes the income tax surcharge would aggravate the present inflationary spiral, but this negates possibility may not become noticeable for some time after the legislative action is completed. It adds that for the time being at least, "we would anticipate little change in the market's bullish interpretation of the tax bill."

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Bell System has revised telephone rates between the United States and Australia on a basis that is expected to save regular customers in the United States about $365,000 a year.

SAN JUAN (UPI)—The Puerto Rico government development bank has appointed First Boston Corp. leader of an underwriting group to negotiate the sale of $40 million in Puerto Rico Highway Authority bonds. Half the 20 year issue will be serial bonds and half term bonds.

KANSAS CITY (UPI)—Gateway Sporting Goods Co. has agreed in principle to buy Arlen Trophy Co. of Plainfield, N. J., which has sales of about $3.5 million a year, for an undisclosed amount of convertible preferred stock.

WILMINGTON, Del. (UPI)—The Latin American operations of Atlas Chemical Industries, Inc., will be established in Coral Gables, Fla., July 1 and headquarters if Atlas Chemical International, Inc., will be moved to Coral Gables from Panama City, Panama, at the same time.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Michigan-Wisconsin Pipe Line Co. has asked permission of the Federal Power Commission to raise rates on natural gas by 8.4 per cent or a total of about $19 million a year. The company said it has to pay more for the gas now.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Federal Power Commission has authorized Consolidated Gas Supply Corp. of Clarksburg, W. Va., to build a $15.3 million natural gas pipeline in New York and Pennsylvania. Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Co. obtained permission to build a $12.5 million line extension in Kansas and Oklahoma.

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Alexander Hamilton Institute says downside risk apparently is limited with some $3 billion in mutual funds available for investment. The advisory service says that as long as the "flight from the dollar" continues, stock prices can be expected to work their way higher.

Reynolds & Co. says the "concept of performance" seems to be gripping the market, with the strength supplied by inflation, to which the government "is committed." The firm says that while inflation may "cause a lot of trouble some day," the day is far off, and says that this is a market "in which to be a frightened bull, but a bull nevertheless."

Shearson, Hammit & Co. says that while a collapse of the Vietnam talks in Paris would be upsetting to the market, it doubts that institutional investors, short sellers and odd-lotters would "stay on the sell side for long." Thus, the company would advise investors "to approach the stock market reasonably boldly."

Automotive Personality of the Week

Our subject this week is Frank Marshall, owner of Import Auto at 1460 Long Beach Blvd., Long Beach, now serving a second term as president of the Long Beach Motor Car Dealers Association.

Marshall sells imports, as his dealership name implies, handling the popular Renaults and Peugeots from France and the English Rover and Sunbeam lines.

FRANK MARSHALL

Frank hails from across the continent, making his debut in New York City. In fact, his father was in the theatre on Broadway but after marrying a California girl, the senior Marshall was induced to move west, the family settling in Long Beach in 1925.

YOUNG Marshall attended Horace Mann, Jefferson, Wilson High and Long Beach Junior College.

"Because I needed wheels, I guess," was Frank's laughing answer to my question of why he entered the automobile business. He went on to explain that during a career in finance, with jobs at Security Bank, Commercial Credit and Dalton Finance Co. here, he did a little moonlighting as a salesman at Nowlings Used Cars on Long Beach's auto row.

"I knew my eventual goal was to own an auto dealership so I took various jobs that would give me the experience for that operation," Marshall recounted.

After a stint in the Air Corps during the war, he returned to a salesman's job at McKenzie Ford, pioneering Long Beach auto firm. He was soon upped to sales and then finance manager.

IN 1961, Marshall went into the import field, taking a job with Dick Scatard operating the first Renault dealership in California. In 1965 Frank bought out his boss and the modern sales and service layout on the Boulevard.

Frank and his wife Dorothy live in the Bixby Knolls section of Long Beach with their three children. George has just graduated from Poly Hi, Michelle will enter Stanford this fall and Fred was graduated last week from Stanford.

For recreation Marshall likes to take auto trips (via Rover, naturally) into Mexico, taking a multitude of color photos. Dorothy's forte is the artist's brush, and is active in local art circles. — By ART STEPHAN, Auto Editor

Future Mailmen

One-day mail service to any place in the world could well become commonplace and inexpensive in the future. Messages would be relayed from local "post offices" to the nearest satellite. The satellites (powered by nickel-cadmium batteries constantly under charge from solar cells) would then redirect the message to earth.

Record Cantilever

The largest cantilever span ever erected, the Quebec Bridge spanning the St. Lawrence River in Quebec, contains nearly 17,000 tons of structural nickel steel.

Rick's HR in 10th Gives Angels Win
By FRED CLAIRE
Staff Writer

Rick Reichardt's home run in the 10th inning gave the Angels a 5-4 win over Washington Saturday afternoon, but you can chalk up an assist for Jimmie Hall and Frank Robinson.

It was a 36-ounce Robinson bat that Reichardt used to paddle a pitch by Dave Baldwin over the left-field fence.

"I've never used a bat that heavy before," said Rick. "But I wanted to make sure if I hit the ball good it would carry."

The ball carried over the fence at the 366-mark and the homer carried the Angels to their third consecutive victory.

And just how does Jimmie Hall, traded by the Angels to Cleveland Saturday, figure in the victory picture?

"Jimmie had picked up that Robinson bat in Baltimore," explained Reichardt. "I saw the bat in the barrel (where they are stored) and then I noticed it in the rack."

While Rick's seventh homer was the decisive blow, it was a two-run triple by Jim Fregosi in the ninth inning that enabled the Angels to tie the game at 4-all.

The Angels pulled off a storybook rally in the ninth against a pitcher who has given them nothing but trouble — Darold Knowles.

There were two outs in the ninth and nobody on base when pinch-hitter Bubba Morton singled to left. Rookie Leo Rodriguez, recalled from Seattle due to Paul Schaal's injury, singled between third and short and Morton moved into third.

Fregosi slammed the first pitch by Knowles to right and Jim raced all the way to third for his seventh triple of the season.

The two runs driven home by Fregosi were the first by the Angels off Knowles in 22 2-3 innings.

"Well, we finally got to that guy," said Angel skipper Bill Rigney.

THE ANGELS used rookie pitchers Jim Weaver and Marcy Pattin to hold off the Senators in the top of the 10th.

Weaver started the inning and yielded a single to Mike Epstein. Ron Hansen's sacrifice moved Epstein to second and he took third on Bernie Allen's deep drive to right.

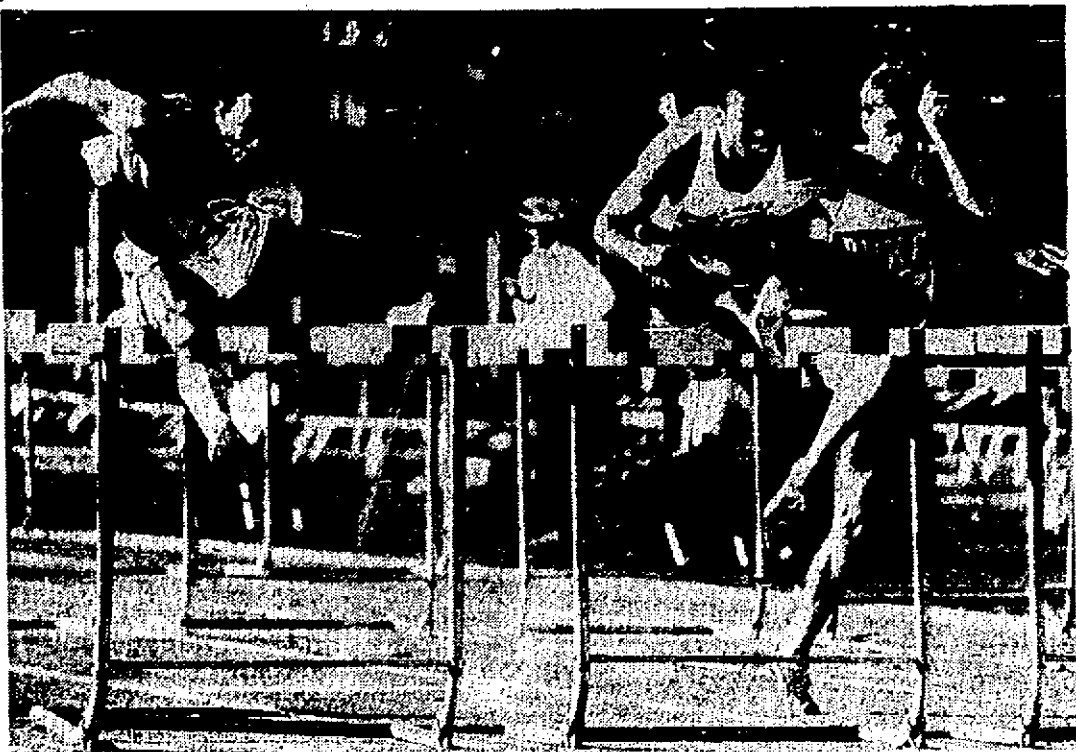

With Paul Casanova pinch-hitting for Knowles, Rigney called on Pattin to replace Weaver. "I told Pattin I didn't want any curves. Just 'smoke.'"

Pattin's fastballs were good enough to strike out Casanova and enable the rookie to pick up his first win after two defeats.

Sammy Ellis once again gave a good pitching performance without picking up a win. The ex-Cincinnati star yielded only four hits and one run (unearned) in the first five innings.

The Senators got a run in the third as Fregosi bobbled a ball hit by Frank Howard with two outs and Ed Brinkman raced home from third.

The Angels came back to go ahead 2-1 in the fourth as Reichardt, Ed Kirkpatrick and Tom Satriano

LINDGREN STEALS FANS' HEARTS IN 5,000 Trojans Stumble to NCAA Title

By BOB SCHMIDT
Staff Writer

BERKELEY — Washington State's diminutive Gerry Lindgren, whose heart is as big as his frame is small, reached deep down for strength he didn't know he had and blazed a 58.6 final lap Saturday to capture the 5,000-meter championship before 17,500 sun-drenched fans in Edwards Stadium.

Lindgren's victory, in a meet-record 13:57.2, highlighted a tremendous squad effort for Washington State, which lost the team championship to stumbling Southern California by a single point.

The defending champion Trojans got an expected victory in the day's first running event, the 440 relay, but that was their last win as Bob Seagran was upset in the pole vault by UCLA's Jon Vaughn, and Lennox Miller dropped an eyelash decision in the 200-meter dash to Ohio University's Emmett Taylor.

The Cougars, meanwhile, got 10 points from giant John Van Reenan in the discus, another 10 from surprising Carl O'Donnell in the javelin, and an unexpected eight in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles from second-place finisher Boyd Gittens.

Behind USC's 58 points and WSU's 57 was Villanova with 41, Brigham Young with 31, UCLA with 30, Oregon State with 26, and San Jose State with 24.

In what was billed as the feature race of the 47th annual collegiate championships, San Jose State's Lee Evans spotted Villanova's Larry James an early lead, then powered past him in the stretch to win easily in 45 seconds flat, a meet and stadium record.

James, who came back to run a 45.6 anchor lap as Villanova won the mile relay, barely hung on for second in the 400. Both he and Arizona State's Ron Freeman were timed in 45.4.

Sharing crowd favoritism with Lindgren was Oregon State's Dick Fosbury, whose backward flop over the high jump bar drew repeated "oohs" and "ahs" from the crowd. Fosbury didn't miss until he tried 7-3 3/4, an inch over his winning height. Tennessee's Karl Kemmerer leaped 7-1 for second as Cal's favored Clarence Johnson failed to clear 6-11 and finished out of the money entirely.

Dave Patrick of Villanova won as expected in the 1,500, muscling past Oregon's Dave Wilborn with 300 yards to go and finishing strongly in 3:39.9, a half-second under Morgan Groth's NCAA meet record. Wilborn was timed in 3:40.3, the same time as Manhattan's fast-closing Brian Kivlan.

England's Dave Hemery, a Boston University student, easily won the 400-meter hurdles in 49.8, a British record, with Washington State's Gittens closing fast to nab second from SC's Jeff Vanderstock and Cal's Paddy McCrary.

Oregon State's Terry Thompson battled with Wisconsin's Ray Arrington for 700 meters, and bested the Badger in the stretch drive. But New York University's Byron Dyce closed like a sprinter to win in 1:47.7 in second and third, Northwestern's Ralph Schultz each clocked in 1:47.7 in second and third, and Arrington fourth.

Ohio's Taylor was a surprise winner of the 440 in this meet last year. Saturday, he was a surprise winner in the 200. The field came off the curve in a line, with USC's 100-meter champion, Miller, slightly in front. The finish gave the judges their most difficult decision of the meet.

Taylor was placed first in a slowish 20.8. Miller, in second, and Notre Dame's Bill Hurd, in third, were also given 20.8 times. Kentucky's Jim Green and Georgia Tech's Ben Vaughn, in fourth and fifth, were clocked in 20.9. Colorado state's Dan Columbus was another tenth back in sixth, and Trinity's Clyde Glosson was seventh in 21.1.

Villanova's James made up something like 10 or 12 yards on Cal's Pat Weddle on anchor leg of the mile relay, but then hung slightly in the final 40 yards as Ohio's Taylor closed with a rush. James 45.6 gave the Wildcats a 3:08.6 clocking. Ohio was second in 3:09 flat and Cal third in 3:09.4.

For pure competition, the 5,000 was the day's top race, however.

Lindgren, who said later "I was dead after two laps, I was really hurting," nevertheless grabbed the lead after two laps, lost it briefly to Australia's Kerry Pearce, a student at the University of Texas, El Paso, then grabbed it back two laps later.

But with two laps to go Pearce, Oregon's Arne Kvalheim, and Georgetown's Steve Stageberg, who had been running with Lindgren in a tight little foursome right from the start, all blasted past the struggling little Cougar and appeared to be pulling away.

Into the gun lap it was Kvalheim, running strongly, in command. Stageberg, a Eugene, Oregon prepster who left his home state to study for the foreign ser-for a 54-hole score of 205, setting a mark for the first three rounds of this 73-year old tournament.

But the swarthy, swaggering Trevino, a $30-a-week assistant pro a year ago, rallied from five strokes back with eight to play, spun off three birdies in the space of four holes and finished with a one-under 69.

This gave him a three-quarter score of 206, one shot back.

The record for the first three rounds of the Open was 206, set by Tommy Jacobs at Congressional in Washington, D.C., in 1964.

Now both Yancey and Trevino are within shouting distance of the 72-hole open mark of 275, established by Jack Nicklaus at Baltusrol a year ago.

By the U.S. Golf Assn. formula, the two front-runners will be paired for the second successive time in today's dramatic climax.

Closest pursuers to the two leaders entering the final 18 over the 6,962-yard, par 70 Oak Hill course is the big, goldenhaired Nicklaus, rated the game's No. 1 tournament player, and Charles Coody, one of the barnstorming golfing gypsies.

They are tied at 212, seven strokes back of Yancey and six back of Trevino.

"I have a good chance — if I shot a 65," said Nicklaus wryly.

The Golden Bear said he didn't play well, three-putted two greens, saved pars with two desperate putts and sank a 25-footer for one of his two birdies.

Nicklaus shot a 70 and Coody, a tall Texan, had a 72.

The other member of golf's so-called big two, Arnold Palmer, had a more turbulent time.

"The golfing millionaire, winner of 51 tournaments, skied to a 79, one of the worst rounds he's ever shot as a pro, and afterward lamented that his game had suddenly gone to pot."

"I'm bad, awfully bad," Palmer said. "I don't seem to have any concentration any more. I miss a putt or make a bad shot, and I burn."

Palmer was at 226—21 strokes off the lead.

In a day marked by an early morning thunderstorm, a 25-minute suspension of play and periodic showers, Bobby Nichols hammered out the day's

KUEHNER HERO USC Wins With Pinch-Hit in 9th

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Pat Kuehner's two-run, 375-foot pinch triple with two outs and two strikes in the last of the ninth inning gave Southern California its fifth NCAA College World Series baseball championship, 4-3, over Southern Illinois, Saturday night.

Kuehner, a senior from Whittier, drafted by the Washington Senators, was hitless in 14 previous times at bat in the Series. With SIU lefty Skip Pitlock just one strike from victory, Kuehner smashed a drive off the fence in right center.

A moment earlier, USC received a bad break when a pinch single by Rich McCobs, headed for the hole in right field, hit the runner for automatic out, and Reid Braden had to return to third base.

SIU had taken a 3-2 lead in the eighth on Terry Brumfield's single after Pitlock stopped a USC rally in relief in the seventh.

Bill Seinoth, USC's big first baseman, who tied the game 2-2 with a two-run homer in the fourth, singled in the big ninth and hit .389 in the tourney, was voted most outstanding player of the Series. Left-hander Brent Strom, 12-4, was the winner in relief.

USC became the sixth team in 20 years of double elimination tourneys to go through the finals undefeated. The Trojans wound up with a 49-14-1 record.

Long Beach Second Sports Capital of World

INDEPENDENT PRESS-TELEGRAM—S-3
Long Beach, Calif., Sunday, June 16, 1968

By JOHN DIXON
Mexico City, host to the XIX Olympiad, is the world's sports capital of 1968, and Long Beach ranks right behind.

Nine Olympic Games Trials — more than in any other U.S. metropolis — will be conducted in Long Beach between June 29 and Sept. 3.

More than one thousand of America's most talented amateur athletes will face the strongest challenge of their lives. For each the goal is one: victory, and on to Mexico City. The 20-kilometer walk opens the Olympic show-downs on June 29 at Cal State Long Beach. A 49er student, Don DeNoon, is co-favored to win the 12-mile heel-and-toe race. The 1932 Olympic Games crew finals were conducted in Long Beach, and refurbished Marine Stadium, the famed "lanky lagoon," will host America's swiftest shells in July and August. Olympic Trials in men's and women's diving, men's swimming and water polo will be held in the $3.6 million Belmont Plaza Pool, which will be completed Aug. 1, publicly dedicated Aug. 15.

Ticket information for all Long Beach Olympic events may be obtained by telephoning HEMlock 7-2255 or writing U.S. Olympic Trials, Long Beach Arena, Long Beach, Calif. 90802.

Checks for tickets should be made out to Olympic Trials. Self-addressed envelopes must be enclosed.

Over-the-counter ticket requests will not be accepted until sometime in July.

'RETIREMENT' IS FINE... FOR OLD PEOPLE

Papa Bear: A Man for Father's Day

"I enjoy every minute of it, every day. I hate to use the cliché, but it's a great challenge. You dare not stay out of football one year, or you're lost." —George Halas.

In several million households today the master of the clan will sit himself down to a Father's Day feast and receive all the courtesies of the occasion.

Mothers will admonish, "Now, kids, be still or you'll make grandpa nervous," but in at least one household grandpa will be raising more hell than anybody.

And after wearing out his son, daughter and 13 grandchildren, will George Halas flop into a chair for a grandfatherly nap? Hardly. Tonight is party time, for he is to receive a special award from the National Football League players.

It's appropriate that the players' annual banquet falls on Father's Day, because in a lot of ways George is a father to them, too.

Perhaps without this vibrant septuagenarian, pro football might be where it is today. But it wouldn't have been nearly as much fun getting there.

"I didn't mind the controversies at all," says George. "They were always for a good cause. If nothing else, controversies on the field taught the officials to be on their toes, and I think that our officiating is improving every year."

AT LEAST the officials are getting faster on their feet. The only concession Halas ever made to his years, now 73, was a few weeks ago when he retired (again) as coach of the Chicago Bears.

The way he told it, he knew the time had come last season when he was "sitting on official down the side line" and I realized I wasn't gaining on him. And if the officials refuse to slow down and argue with him, it's just no fun coaching anymore.

Papa Bear has never been shy about making a point. When the Rams hired his best assistant, George Allen, a shocked and chagrined Halas hauled Dan Reeves into court, then abruptly dropped his lawsuit — after the Rams' moral wrong had received due publicity.

More recently, George went too far in denouncing NFL officiating and was called before commissioner Pete Rozelle in New York.

"That did a lot of good, too," Halas insists. "That stirred up attention to the lack of topnotch officiating."

Nor did it perturb George that he, one of the founding fathers of pro football, was compelled to answer to a relatively young pup of a commissioner.

"That I didn't mind one iota. It was his job, regardless of who was involved. You need a strong commissioner, and we've got a good one."

"We always did have rather strict rules, which always paid off. We always insisted on good conduct of the players on and off the field, even back in the 20s and 30s, and that helped make the game."

THE FIRST SIGN of old age is when a person starts dwelling on the "good old days." Halas relishes those early years when pro football was drawing its first uncertain breaths, but he draws no lines between past or present. Nothing has really changed that much.

The stars back in the 20s and 30s and 40s would have made the teams today, but today there are more of them and they're bigger, and some of them are faster. Even then, in the old days, they all graduated from college, even more so than today.

"But all the great players — fellas like George McAfee, who played in the 40s, and Gale Sayers, who is playing now — they're still wonderful boys."

And then there was Harold (Red) Grange, the Gallatin Ghost from Illinois.

"There's one of the greatest of them all," Halas says, warning to the memory, "not only as a player but in his personality. He had character."

More than any other player, Halas feels, Grange brought pro football from the sandlots to the stadiums.

"We knew we were playing a good game," George says, "but we were groping around for attendance. When Red Grange joined the Bears immediately after his last college game, he suddenly focused the spotlight of America on professional football."

HALAS HAD HIS OWN days as a player, too. Look up the record for returning a fumble in the National Football League — 98 yards.

"It fires me out just thinking about that," says the former right end of the Bears. "We played at Wrigley Field and we were playing in a downpour. The Thorpe Indians were on our 2-yard line and Jim Thorpe was carrying the ball. Hugh Blacklock, our right tackle, jarred him and knocked the ball out of his hands."

"I picked up the ball and started for the other goal line—with Jim Thorpe after me. Well did I know that Jim had great speed. He wouldn't tackle you, but he'd whip his legs around your legs and really cut you down."

"So anytime I thought he was about to throw his legs I would zig . . . and then I would zag after another 10 yards . . . and then zig again. I must have run 140 yards in that rain and mud.

"Finally, about the 10-yard line, Jim did throw his legs and — boom! — I hit the ground and slid over the goal line . . . floated over, in fact!"

HALAS HAS BEEN in pro football for 48 years, including 40 years as a coach in which he won seven league titles. It won't be easy learning how to watch. Just watch, that is.

Penn Sweeps Collegiate Row Titles

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (UPI)

—The powerful University of Pennsylvania swept all three heavyweight events of the Intercollegiate Rowing Assn. championships Saturday and headed for a showdown with Harvard in next month's Olympic trials at Long Beach, Calif.

The Quaker varsity, under coach Joe Burke, fought off a stiff headwind to finish more than a length ahead of Washington in the main event of the IRA. Earlier, the Quaker frosh and junior varsity crews, both undefeated this year, posted easy victories. Orange Coast College finished second in the TV finals.

In the only event in which Penn didn't compete, Cornell University won the first four-man varsity boat race in the 66-year history of the IRA.

For the third consecutive year, Pennsylvania won the James A. Ten Eyck Trophy for compiling the most points in the IRA. Penn totaled 20 points.

Perfect cool rowing weather greeted the 500 oarsmen from 20 schools competing on Onondaga Lake.

Penn's three victories marked the first sweep of the IRA since Navy turned the trick in 1965.

HALAS TO RECEIVE PLAYERS' HONOR

CHICAGO (AP) — George S. Halas, 73, who recently retired as coach of the Chicago Bears, will receive a special honor from the National Football League Players Assn. today.

The nature of the award to the Bear owner was not disclosed by John Gordy of the Detroit Lions, NFLPA president, who said Tuesday the players wanted it to be a "complete surprise" to Halas at a $100-a-plate dinner.

The second annual player awards event is a benefit for The Better Boys Foundation.

ANCHOR LEG FOR TROY

O. J. Simpson hands off to Lennox Miller for anchor leg as USC's sprinters rush to victory in 440-yard relay Saturday at NCAA championships at Berkeley. Trojans were timed in 39.5.

ERNIE'S ATTITUDE

Fountain of Youth Found

CHICAGO (UPI) — Juan Ponce de Leon searched in vain for the fountain of youth. Ernie Banks found it.

That is as good an explanation as any of how the Chicago Cubs' first baseman-coach, an "old man" of 37, keeps playing baseball with the passion of a rookie and the power of a young Stan Musial, Ernie's hero.

In his 15th year as a big leaguer, with more than 2,100 games behind him, traveling is getting tougher for "Mr. Cub." The days away from Elyse Banks and their three children are getting longer and more painful.

But Ernie says he will not surrender his bat and glove until he no longer can help the team. Right now, that day seems far, far away.

After Ernie hit two homers this spring against the San Francisco Giants — the 449 and 450th of his career — Cub captain Ron Santo tried to explain the Banks secret:

"He's got the ideal attitude for this game. He just loves baseball and nothing ever worries him. Nothing makes him happier than being able to do something to help us win."

Sawdust Wins on One-Hitter

Larry Smith and Charles Mosely allowed the Long Beach Colts only one hit to lead the Johnson's Sawdust to a 8-0 win in the Connie Mack opener Saturday at Blair Field. Johnson's capitalized on 10 hits and six errors for their runs.

Spencer Rodriguez doubled, and after allowing three runs in the first inning, settled down to pitch Hawaiian Gardens to a 9-3 win over Kiwanis Indians in the nightcap.

Johnson's Sawdust . . . 312 181-3 10-1
L.B. Colts . . . 1800 400-0 1-1
Smith, Mosley (4) and Maxson Nutt (1); Neely, Osborne (4) and Clements, Taylor (5)
Kiwanis Indians . . . 200 000 0-3 7-1
Hawaiian Gardens . . . 400 000 2-4 1-1
Heini Baker (3) and Edwards; Rodriguez and Goddard.

And there were these others:

Outfielder Billy Williams, after Ernie's two-run homer highlighted a recent 5-1 victory over the Dodgers: "His attitude about the game is just perfect. He loves baseball and gives 100 per cent every day. He's an optimist. I just wish I had that same wonderful attitude."

vice, then moved past Pearce into second.

Down the backstretch it was Kvalheim and Stageberg, then Pearce, then the struggling Lindgren.

"I don't know where I got it," the weary Lindgren said after the race. But he got it, and shunted past Pearce, Stageberg, and Kvalheim. Only the Georgetown sophomore tried to go with him, but little Gerry's momentum lasted to the tape.

Kvalheim, utterly smashed, almost stopped running and Pearce passed him easily for third. The Norwegian-born Oregon student who had defeated Lindgren earlier in the year in a two-mile, said afterward "I've never did like that before."

For Lindgren, the victory was his sixth outdoor championship and concluded his track career at Washington State. Only Ohio State's Jesse Owens had more NCAA track and field titles, eight.

WEIGHTMEN TO TOSS IT AROUND

An all-comers weight event meet, featuring many of the nation's outstanding athletes, will be conducted at Cal State Long Beach today commencing at 1.

Qualifying standards are 58 feet in the shotput, 240 in the javelin, 180 in the discus and hammer throw.

ARTHUR DALEY

Clubhouse Chat on U.S. Open

New York Times Service

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Arnold Palmer was whipping shots down the practice fairway in mid-morning when the gray, sullen clouds stopped threatening and acted. The rains came and even the remnants of Arnie's army headed for cover.

So did their general, although in typical Palmer fashion he paused obligingly to sign autographs before completing his escape to the clubhouse.

Bursting through the locker room doorway in somewhat cyclonic fashion, Sam Snead bore so broad a grin that he lit up the room. The first person he spotted was Peter Thompson, five-time British Open champion but a non-qualifier for this moisture-laden United States Open tournament. The Australian is disguised as a golf writer here, covering the event for the newspapers down under.

"THIS IS MY WEATHER, Peter," sang out Snead. "Why?" said Thompson, puzzled but almost ready to believe anything of the volatile Sam.

"I hate it," said Sammy, crossing him up. "Funny thing, though, I'll bet I won more tournaments in swamps than in sunshine."

The Slammer then spotted Palmer, making phantom puts of a phantom ball.

"Hiya, buddy," said Snead. "Let me give you tips on putting." Snead is a notoriously bad putter.

"Scream," said Arnie good-naturedly. "You wouldn't give anything away, including pointers."

"You a good mudder?" said Sammy.

"I'm not good at anything the way I'm playing," said Arnie dejectedly.

PALMER STRETCHED OUT ON A BENCH, a roll of towels under his head and arms crossed over his chest. The incongruity of his corpse-like pose suddenly struck him and he sat up, laughing.

"I'm really not dead," he said, "although that was a nice eulogy of me that the guy had in a local paper today. If I'm dead, I hope they cremate me."

He looked up at the clock. The hands showed 11:30, one minute after his supposed starting time. The rain and accompanying flashes of lightning had caused a 25-minute delay in the competition.

"Now I'm playing," said Arnie. "I've just split the fairway with a gorgeous drive and taken my second shot."

"Right alongside the pin, I'll bet," said a bystander.

"Nope," said Arnie. "You weren't watching closely. The ball went in the cup for an eagle and I'm back in the tournament."

He smiled brightly. Yet when he got to that hole some time later he proved to be still in the grip of his disastrous slump. He shot a bogey 5 and was tumbling ever further out of contention.

Across the locker room aisle from Palmer were his two playing partners over the first two days, Dave Marr and Dan Sikes, a couple of whimsical guys. Today they would be paired together without a distraction from Arnie's Army.

"I guess we'll lose our gallery today, Davey," said Sikes.

"It will be a true test of our drawing power," said the twinkle-eyed Dave. "But the signs are ominous. Even my wife went home."

"We gotta stay out of the rough today," said Sikes. "It will be real juicy."

"If you get in the rough today," said Marr, "You'll need a sand wedge to get out."

"What happens to you in the rain?" Someone asked Jack Nicklaus.

"I GET WET JUST LIKE everyone else," said Big Nick.

"A day like this," said Gary Player musingly, "figures to move up chaps like Lee Trevino and Bob Dickson. They love it in the mud."

"I consider myself a good mudder," said Trevino, the newest personality kid of the links set.

"I got the wet track I like, even if I do wind up scoring 100. When I was a kid in Texas the only time they would let me on the course was at 6 a.m. when the dew was heavy on the grass. I use no backspin and hit the ball low, so it has a chance to run on soggy turf. It won't do that for the guys who hit high. It stops dead on them."

The happy ex-Marine, already labelled "The People's Choice," by the press corps, fished into his locker for matching socks.

"I used to wear different colored socks," he said with a mocking grin, "and everyone thought I was superstitious. That isn't it at all."

"I'm colorblind and my wife has to number my clothes so that I'll know what goes with what. Hey, they say that the pressures of the Open will get me. I just hope I have the opportunity to find out."

Before he and Bert Yancey reached the course, the last two starters in the field, the sun broke through the clouds and chased away the rain. But it was so soggy underfoot that playing conditions remained wretched throughout the moist afternoon. It hardly was a day for spectacular scoring.

Rojas' Loss Was Lesson for Mando

Mando Ramos, the world's richest teenage prize fighter, learned a valuable lesson June 6 at the expense of a stablemate Raul Rojas.

Ramos, who tangles with world junior lightweight champion Hiroshi Kobayashi Thursday night at the Olympic Auditorium, saw Rojas enter the ring against Japan's Sho Saijyo in poor condition and proceed to get his ears pinned back.

"It's a good thing Raul's featherweight title wasn't on the line," says 19-year-old Mando.

"I'm not going to make the same mistake Raul did. Partying it up and boxing don't mix. Raul knows that now, and I'm not going to try it myself."

Last year Ramos earned over $50,000 in the ring — not too bad for a high school dropout who'd been boxing for only two years.

"This year I'm going to make over $100,000," Ramos says with the confidence that's made him Los Angeles' No. 1 box office attraction the past 2½ years.

"The way I'm going I think I can win the lightweight championship before I'm 21. If I beat Kobayashi on Thursday — and I expect to knock him out — he says he'll give me a return shot for his title."

"So I can guarantee I'll be the world Junior lightweight champ by the end of summer. Then it's up to Carlos Ortiz as to whether or not he wants to risk his lightweight belt."

Ramos expects to come into the fight at 133 pounds. Being a nontitle fight, the junior lightweight limit of 130 will not be observed.

Kobayashi, 49-4, won the crown by stopping ex-champion Yoshaki Numata last November in Tokyo. His last appearance in Los Angeles two years ago saw him knock out highly rated featherweight contender Bobby Valdez in seven rounds at the Olympic.

Ramos, third in his division, is 22-2.

Blumenthal New Mgr. at Anaheim

Dick Blumenthal has been appointed manager of the Anaheim Stars of the Western Softball Congress.

The veteran Clint Herron has been forced to the sidelines by the press of work. At 51 a nine-time all-America infielder, Herron said, "I'll be back. I know that I can help win a lot more games."

The Stars host the Hawthorne Hustlers tonight at Pearson Park.

British Wrest Cup From U.S.

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Britain's tennis sisters, Mrs. Christine Truman Jones and Nell Truman, won a nerve-rattling doubles match Saturday and wrested the Wightman cup back from the United States after eight years.

They edged two new girls on the U.S. team, Kathy Harter of Seal Beach and Stephanie DeFina of Hollywood, Fla., 6-3, 2-6, 6-3, in one of the most emotional matches ever played on Wimbledon's center court.

That gave Britain a 4-3 overall victory.

It was a sentimental occasion for Mrs. Jones, the 27-year-old darling of British tennis fans. Ten years ago, as a bright-eyed schoolgirl of 17, she vanquished the mighty Althea Gibson and led Britain to one of its rare Wightman Cup triumphs.

The tall, English girl teamed with Shirley Bloomer to win the decisive doubles match in 1958 for a 4-3 victory. And in 1960, the last time Britain won until this time, she and Shirley won the deciding match in doubles for another 4-3 fingle.

Stolle Surprises Emerson

Combined News Services

Fred Stolle and Mrs. Margaret Smith Court, a pair of Australians, won the men's and women's singles titles Saturday at the Kent Lawn Tennis Championships, the world's first open meet played on grass.

Stolle, a pro, grabbed a quick 3-0 lead over Roy Emerson in the first set and went on from there for a surprising 6-3, 6-1 triumph.

Mrs. Court, an amateur who is making a comeback after a year away from the sport following her marriage, downed Mrs. Ann Haydon Jones, a British pro, 11-9, 6-2.

Emerson and Stolle whipped John Barrett and Bob Howe, 6-2, 6-4. The women's doubles final was won by Maria Bueno and Mrs. Court over Mrs. Jones and Francoise Durr, 6-3, 6-2.

Arthur Ashe gained the West of England singles title by defeating Clark Graebner, 6-4, 6-3, in a match involving two U.S. Davis Cup players.

Cliff Richey, who was disqualified Friday after a row with the umpire in a semifinal match with Ashe, served as a linesman Saturday.

Bob Delgado of Los Angeles State downed Jim Powers of Fresno State to win the NCAA college division singles tournament, 6-4, 6-2.

Powers gained a small measure of revenge by coming back with Gary Ogden to defeat Delgado and Niesi Sie in doubles, 6-3, 6-2.

Young Tony Roche ousted Aussie countryman Ken Rosewall in a stunning upset, 4-6, 10-8, 6-3, 7-5, and Rod Laver continued his drive for a fourth U.S. pro title at Longwood. Laver beat Mal Anderson, 10-8, 6-4, 6-1.

Dennis Ralston and Earl Buchholz also advanced.

Spain's Davis Cup doubles team of Manuel Santana and Manuel Granados defeated Bobby Wilson and Mark Cox of England, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3, and took an unbeatable 2-0 lead in their European Zone Class A competition.

Italy won the doubles with the Soviet Union and took a 2-1 lead in a Group A semifinal. Nicola Pietrangeli and Adriano Panatta beat Alexander Metreveli and Sergei Likhachyov, 6-3, 4-6, 6-2, 6-4.

It was the 19th Davis Cup appearance for the Soviet-born Pietrangeli.

Australian Judy Terman proved much too strong and experienced for young American Vicki Rosta and scored a 6-3 win to take the women's singles title in the Nottingham Open.

The men's crown went to Keith West, a Brit who survived six match points and won on the second rally. Brits' Stanley Matthews, 6-4, 6-2, 7-5.

Young Tony Roche ousted Aussie countryman Ken Rosewall in a stunning upset, 4-6, 10-8, 6-3, 7-5, and Rod Laver continued his drive for a fourth U.S. pro title at Longwood. Laver beat Mal Anderson, 10-8, 6-4, 6-1.

Dennis Ralston and Earl Buchholz also advanced.

Spain's Davis Cup doubles team of Manuel Santana and Manuel Granados defeated Bobby Wilson and Mark Cox of England, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3, and took an unbeatable 2-0 lead in their European Zone Class A competition.

Italy won the doubles with the Soviet Union and took a 2-1 lead in a Group A semifinal. Nicola Pietrangeli and Adriano Panatta beat Alexander Metreveli and Sergei Likhachyov, 6-3, 4-6, 6-2, 6-4.

It was the 19th Davis Cup appearance for the Soviet-born Pietrangeli.

Australian Judy Terman proved much too strong and experienced for young American Vicki Rosta and scored a 6-3 win to take the women's singles title in the Nottingham Open.

The men's crown went to Keith West, a Brit who survived six match points and won on the second rally. Brits' Stanley Matthews, 6-4, 6-2, 7-5.

Go North, You'll See Green Empire

KELOWNA, B.C., Canada — Looking for a country of enormous qualities? Go north, friends, and look at British Columbia's enormous mountains, expansive green forests and grassy fields that stretch for many miles, its gigantic lakes, its roaring rivers, some clear and beautiful, others dirty and polluted by man's greed.

Even British Columbia's clouds seem larger and the highways longer, though perhaps not as wide as California's freeways. And even when earth slides are triggered by too much snow or a slight earth tremor, those are larger than you find elsewhere.

Our travel tour ended here principally because there were too many miles of that greatness back of us and far too many others in front of us to continue by air-conditioned coach, in which we had traveled mostly from Victoria, on Vancouver Island, to Vancouver, a city of one million persons now, to the east. So we flew from here.

If you really want an idea of British Columbia's greatness, just consider some of these facts:

It could swallow Oregon, Washington and California and still have room left for a few lakes and rivers, many farms and even some of those mountain ranges of which there are several.

MOST OF BRITISH COLUMBIA is green the year 'round, but there are portions — its midsection bread basket such as the Okanagan Valley — where rainfall is scarce (as little as 14 inches a year), and those areas turn brown in the summer just as do our hot valleys. Please note that Canada's Okanagan Valley is spelled differently than that of the State of Washington, where it's officially listed as Okanogan.

Officially, the 30-plus writers and television people and the B.C. staff members of the Department of Travel Industry, making up a total of 41 persons in the beginning, were members of the 1958 Kootenay Caravan International Press Tour and, as such, each was wearing a big label of that name with his own at times.

There were four women travel writers in the group and that kept some off-color story tellers in their seats and their mouths closed. The emphasis was on travel, not fishing, but the outdoors being my kettle of stew, don't think for one moment that I didn't keep my eyes and ears tuned for anything that suggested fishing, hunting, camping, boating, skiing, hiking and all the other sports that go to make up my regular beat.

At this point, however, I'd like to inject one opinion of one writer from a rather arid area, who said: "I never thought I'd tire of seeing so much green, but the sight of other colors is refreshing." He was referring, of course, to those farms, forests and mountains.

COLUMNS DESCRIBING THE OUTDOORS will appear later this week, but now I'd like to tell you of the itinerary that took us over 1,200 miles of Canada's highways. There were what the travel executives call "outdoor trips" — junkies by small aircraft, helicopters and automobiles — and I took all that I could possibly get on.

First of all, there was the trip through the Bulchart Gardens — nobody ever goes to Vancouver Island without seeing those gardens — and it, as always, was far too short, less than two hours for a tour and a wine and cheese party.

Then we went to the Empress for dinner. That night the Canadians showed their concern over the death of Sen. Robert Kennedy by having a silent prayer before dinner. Just as we all prayed, the chimes of the famous clock outside pealed out. It was a touching scene and enough to make a swelling in the throats of all in the room.

At that dinner, Ronald B. Worley, deputy minister of the Department of Travel Industry, let it be known that the relationship between his department and the press of the United States was about as close as any could be, and to that I fully concur.

SOME OTHER HIGHLIGHTS: A magnificent trip to Nanaimo, where we took the two-hour ferry to the mainland; a splendid lunch at Frank Baker's Restaurant in West Vancouver, where, for a gag, each member of the party received an umbrella as a gift; then to the famed Lotus Gardens in downtown Chinatown for dinner, with Western Airlines as the sponsor. The Capilano Suspension Bridge and the Grouse Mountain Skyride were parts of that first full day.

Along Highway No. 3 in a misty rain where we saw the famous Hope Slide, then to Manning Provincial Park for lunch, the Okanagan Game Farm (an outdoor trip that I'll never forget), an outdoor barbecue at Osoyoos, and a concert by the town's choir of 80 children, a terrific exhibition.

Then on Day No. 4 came what I consider the highlight of the trip, lunch at Grand Forks after touring the famous old Doukhobour areas that received such a bad name years ago when a small breakoff of the Russian Group (the Sons of Freedom) did so much damage. We had a full-course Russian lunch there, then listened to the famous Doukhobour Choir — singing that brought tears to many eyes. Even a devout Catholic sitting next to me admitted that it made up for her missing mass that Sunday morning.

Then quickly through a famous abandoned mine near Rossland, a tour around the Cominco plant at Kinross, Nelson (more about fishing there later), Castlegar, Kootenay River, Creston, Cranbrook, Fairmont Hot Springs, Radium Hot Springs, Golden, Revelstoke and finally Kelowna.

Albacore Are on Their Way, But . . .

There is a definite rumor that the albacore, prized fish of the Pacific, are well on their way to the fishing banks of Southern California, but don't count your longfins before they are in the sacks.

And, as in the past when albacore rumors start, the fish are roughly situated anywhere from the vicinity of the Point Loma Light in San Diego to the Seamount to the Cortes Bank, etc., etc.

True enough, some fish have been taken on research vessels far, far out, and there were some overly ambitious anglers at Thursday's Southern California Tuna Club luncheon who didn't want to wait for dessert to start their vessels running in the general direction of Japan.

OCEAN FISHING continued in its rather lethargic manner, with San Diego leading the parade of big fish, with slightly more than one yellowtail as the average catch for half a thousand anglers.

Up this way, Newport Beach, Long Beach and San Pedro landings were fortunate enough to scrape up a catch of about 60 yellowtail for about 250 fishermen. The bonito catch continued for most boats and barges at a fair clip, but the barracuda catch was disappointing — D.C.

MEET TORONTO

Wolves Play at Rose Bowl Today

The Wolves return home to the Rose Bowl today against the Toronto Falcons to launch a busy home schedule calling for four North American Soccer League matches in 10 days.

Today's meeting with Toronto, scheduled for a 2 p.m. kickoff, is the first official encounter this year, although the two tied 2-2 in a practice match last month in Toronto.

The Wolves are trying to snap a winless streak at home that has produced two losses and three ties since they clipped the Baltimore Bays on Easter Sunday, 2-1.

Following the Falcons into the Rose Bowl will be the Oakland Clippers next Wednesday night at 8, the Kansas City Spurs Sunday, June 23 at 2, and the Dallas Tornados Wednesday night, June 26, at 8.

Rams' Film at Office of I, P-T

The Rams' new hit film, "The Year of the Ram," is available for showing to Long Beach area service clubs, church, fraternal and youth groups at The Independent, Press-Telegram offices, 630 Pine Ave.

The I, P-T has obtained a print of the 16mm sound film to loan to groups free of charge on a first-come basis. The 30-minute, all-color motion picture is narrated by the Rams' radio voice, Dick Enberg.

Reservations will be taken by the Promotion Dept. on the second floor. Phone HE 5-1161, Ext. 347.

DRILLS IN RING 'SECRET' LIKE Will Jones Abandon Rams and Turn to Ring Career?

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

To help fill the void between football seasons: David Jones may turn to boxing.

The Rams' defensive end admitted he's been working out "sort of secret like" in recent months trying to determine if he has the skills to enter the ring game.

Jones, who will be 30 on Dec. 9, said, "I don't know just when I'll have my first fight, but I'm definitely going to give it a try . . . whether it's now or in six months."

Asked if there was any chance he might abandon football after seven years with the Rams, Deacon tugged a verbal haymaker: "Who knows?" The Rams are hoping he's swinging at thin air.

Jones, who has remained a trim 245 pounds during the off-season, will be honored tonight in Chicago at the NFL Players' Assn. banquet as the best defensive lineman.

Could Ram coach George Allen be negotiating another trade? San Francisco's outstanding receiver Dave Parks still is at odds with the 49ers and has not signed. Parks, who lives in Texas, played out his option and became a free agent May 1.

Ex-Ram tight end Marlin McKeever, dealt to Minnesota last year for Tommy Mason, also played out his option and has not hooked on with any club.

They Talk About Gloria

NEW YORK — The girl Gloria Loring came into the Sign of the Dove restaurant on a rainy afternoon, blonde, beautiful, blue-eyed — and a little wet — and promptly revealed why everybody's talking about her.

At 22, she has made 27 appearances on the Merv Griffin TV show besides doing her own special — and is at the stage where youngsters ask her whether they should go into show business.

"I tell them what a lady named Gretchen Wyler once told me," Gloria said. "Gretchen told me she tells them: 'If you have to ask, the answer is no, because if you don't have confidence in yourself you can't be long in it.'" Gloria added, "I never had any doubts."

"When did you make it as a singer?" the interviewer asked.

"I haven't made it as a singer yet," she said, with a modesty that seemed believable. Born a New Yorker, she went with her family to Minneapolis, then to Miami Beach High, and then she worked the tough saloon circuit getting a little toughened, but never tough, from all the jolts.

"I've had many opportunities slip by me," she mentioned.

"I MET YOU once," she recalled, "at the reopening of the Balinese Room in Galveston. Art Linkletter was there."

"I thought I had it made. He was going to discover me on the spot and I was going to get national publicity from you."

"But the program went on so late that by the time I got on, you had both left."

"I cried . . ."

"But now I know I was lucky. I wasn't ready, and if you'd have heard me that night, you wouldn't have been impressed."

"I believe," she said, looking into a vodka, "in being ready. My first audition for Merv Griffin, I wasn't ready, I flopped."

"But I'm an optimist. I can't do any songs about self-pity. There's one fairly popular female country western singer who drives me nuts with songs about 'Oh, this happened to me,' and 'Oh, pity me.'"

"If you're going to wallow in your own self-pity, you deserve it. I believe in self-determination and if you want something enough you can make it happen."

"So for me to do 'That Was a Very Good Year' or 'As I Approach the Prime of My Life,' would be just silly."

GLORIA'S TOUR of the Saloon Circuit after high school led her eventually to the London Playboy Club and there she got a call to do a second audition for the Merv Griffin show.

WISH I'D SAID THAT: Someone described a hammy actor as a reverse astronaut: "He sits still and thinks the world revolves around him."

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "Genius is one per cent inspiration 99 per cent perspiration." — Thomas A. Edison.

EARL'S PEARLS: A hen-pecked fellow wanted to try the new fad of jogging a mile a day. "Good," his wife said, "but don't leave the house."

A TV actor complained that the neighbor in his two family house listened to everything he says: "I think I'll move into an apartment house, and go network."

... That's earl, brother

Mathis and Owens at Disneyland

Recording singers Johnny Mathis and country music favorite Buck Owens will headline shows this week, opening Disneyland's $1.5-million summer of nighttime entertainment spectacles.

At the same time, the "Magic Kingdom" will inroduce "Disneyland on Parade," scheduled each week night at 7:30.

More than 200 guest performers, Disneyland musical stars and world-famous Disney characters will participate in the half-hour procession of colorful floats and vehicles down Main Street U.S.A. and through Fantasyland.

Mathis headlines the first five nights of "On Stage U.S.A.," a variety show starring America's top entertainers on the Tomorrowland stage.

Buck Owens brings rural American music to Disneyland tonight in the first of Disneyland's weekly "Country Music Jubilee" series. Showtimes are 3, 5 and 7 p.m. on Tomorrowland stage.

A runaway slave, played by Ossie Davis, flatters Kate (Shelley Winters), girl friend of the desperado who hunts Indians for a bounty, on their scaps in "The Scalphunters," opening Wednesday at theaters in this area.

HB 'Forest' Revival Rewards, Stimulates

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Drama Critic

A well-staged, well-performed revival of a minor theatrical classic can be both rewarding and stimulating. I was reminded again while viewing Huntington Beach Playhouse's redoing of Robert Sherwood's Petrified Forest.

In a sense director Ron Albertsen's mounting is "campy" in its extreme fidelity to the mood and manner of 1934 America. Yet it is this near-photographic quality that makes his show not only entertaining, but meaningful to a contemporary audience. It was 1938 or '39 when last I ventured into this symbolic "forest." Perched high in the peanut gallery of a rickety middlewestern theater I watched with fascination as Duke Mantee, "last of the oldtime desperadoes," held captive a strangely assorted band of strangers in an Arizona gas station-cave.

REFERENCES to casual sex then went over my head. I may even have dropped a tear or two at the Sidney Cartonish death of a ne'er-do-well writer.

These are things people no longer do. Laughs replace gasps, and who is so comball these days to believe a man will sacrifice himself for a girl he hardly knows?

What I'm saying is this: the hardboiled realism of yesteryear now is melodrama, solidly constructed, taut, but still melodrama. I, for one, like it as a refreshing change of pace from the tortured stuff so often given us.

The three principals are first-rate. Sixteen-year-old Valeree See transforms into a little girl trapped on the Arizona desert who so desperately wants life and love in the great big world.

Ron Lambert does the down-on-his-luck writer with a sensitive vigor completely believable. And Don Rhoades, as Killer Mantee, becomes something of a Robin Hood — quite satisfying, if not precisely what the playwright had in mind.

A SPECIAL mention for one of the very talented second bananas in this show is in order: James E. Smith as phony old blowhard Gramp Maple adds a special quality of humor to the mix.

Others in the cast: Alan Sandquist, Dennis Perrin, Gwilym Williams, Dale Hash, Ann Moreland, Bill Moreland, Grace Shaw, John Zimmerman, John Hensley, Ron Langseth, Alex Osorio, Paul Sullivan and George Ralph. Several doubled in grease paint.

Huntington Beach postponed a June 7 opening because of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy's assassination. As a result "Petrified Forest" will be extended, on a Friday-Saturday schedule, through July 6, at 2110 Main St.

Czech Movie Award
KARLOVY VARY, Czechoslovakia (UPI) — "Indian Summer," a Czechoslovak film directed by Jiri Manzel, Saturday won the top prize at the 16th International Film Festival here.

In the film, nearing completion in London, the Beatles will do battle against some cartoon weirdies called "blue meemies," which are anti-music. The Beatles win, of course.

The Beatles wrote the music and own a stake in the movie, but an assistant professor of classic at Yale, Erich Segal, collaborated on the script with the producer, Al Brodax of Westport, Conn.

Redondo's Patricia--- Pop, Opera and Back

By EARL WILSON

NEW YORK — A mother's concern for her talented daughter in Manhattan prompted me to seek out lovely Patricia Brooker.

She's the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Sietman, 2726 Ralston Lane, Redondo Beach.

"Patricia is a very deserving young artist," Mrs. Sietman wrote, "and she never has been married yet. I worry about her being alone in New York."

Mrs. Sietman is right. Her daughter is very talented. . . and can't make up her mind between opera and nightclubs.

"I've been doing both," Patricia told me at Kippy's, a theatrical steak house.

She has performed in Aida, Carmen, Faust and La Traviata for various opera companies in this country as well as Germany. She also played in "Showboat" at the Redondo Beach Civic Opera.

"WHEN I FIRST came here two years ago," she related, "I worked as a singer at a small night spot. But I wasn't asked to sing. I thought that was strange. I'd just sit around, and the owner would say if a customer invited me for a drink, I should accept."

"I called my agent, who came over and said the place was a B-joint. I left on the third day."

Patricia keeps up with her voice, dancing and acting lessons.

"I've been studying voice with Julia Drobner, and since then I've acquired a manager, done a couple of operas, and been assured I have a good future."

Patricia's mother was also a singer, having appeared with the Tommy Tucker orchestra in the '30s.

"Mother taught me to sing jazz," Patricia said. "My agent at Ashley-Famous said, 'You're the first singer I've seen who can make the transition from pop to opera and back. It's like two different voices.'"

Mrs. Sietman, you needn't worry. Patricia's future seems secure . . . even financially.

"When I was singing in Puerto Rico," she said, "I won $1,000 in craps. I invested it in the stock market and tripled it."

DANNY THOMAS TO BE HONORED BY DLBA

Famous dad sounds off on father's fading role

... 'he should be boss of house, not a guest in it'

By Mary Ellis Carlton, Director of Women's News

Is the American male losing his father image?

Not if he's a beloved, beak-nosed Lebanese named Amos Jacobs, born Mpyad Yaghoob and who, under the name of Danny Thomas, has been making audiences laugh for more than three decades.

Twice named national Father of the Year, Thomas emerged as TV's most famous dad during 11 seasons as star of "Make Room for Daddy," one of the most successful family comedy shows in video history.

But the veteran funnyman will tell you that, in real life, just "making room" for daddy isn't enough.

At home, Danny Thomas runs the show.

And it's a monumental success. He's been married to his one and only wife, Rosemarie, for 32 years. They have three children—Marlo, Terry and Tony.

"I'm an old-fashioned father—the type who's boss of his house, not a guest in it," he announced.

"As long as I'm the breadwinner for my family, I make the laws. And enforce them. A little discipline doesn't hurt anybody.

Despite what we read, 98 per cent of our teen-agers are decent. They want to be led. So what if they think you're preaching? Who has a better right? Go ahead and preach."

NOT THE KIND of lines you'd expect from Hollywood or Las Vegas?

But Danny Thomas—with his unashamed religiosity, extraordinary faith and humanitarian instincts—doesn't fit the show biz mold.

As LOOK magazine once said of him: "He is a comedian whose true believers cry that he is the most ridiculous fellow in the world, an obdurate wit, a mystic and an unembarrassed sentimentalist with a compulsion to preach sermons."

Each day, no matter where he is, Thomas, a Maronite Catholic, unfailingly says a prayer of thankfulness to St. Jude Thaddeus, the patron saint of the forgotten and hopeless to whose memory he has erected a $6,000,000 children's hospital in Memphis, Tenn.

It's for this type of charitable endeavor that Danny Thomas will receive five awards at Downtown Long Beach Associates' 14th annual Celebrity Awards testimonial dinner Tuesday, 7 p.m., at the Lafayette Hotel.

And it was because of his scheduled appearance here that I was in Las Vegas for an interview with the famed comedian.

WE WERE talking between shows in his dressing room at the Sands Hotel, where he's been doing a summer stint since 1952 to—as he laughingly puts it—"combat the nudes on the strip."

In black dressing gown, calf-high black socks and brown alligator shoes, he was pacing, smoking a cigar, ordering a steak, asking if I'd eaten—and then he was off on another sermon.

"My father was a great influence in my life," he said, still on the subject of a father's role in the family.

"He was the kind of man who made you aware of authority, of the officials

CAROL HUDDLESTON OF NEWPORT BEACH DEMONSTRATES HORSEMANSHIP

Horse show plans set under way by auxiliary

Eighth annual National Benefit Horse Show of Long Beach Community Hospital Auxiliary will be presented Thursday through next Sunday at Los Alamitos Race Course.

First-place trophies and ribbons will be awarded in 74 classes including hunters, jumpers, western pleasure horses, Tennessee walkers and Shetland ponies.

Harold Dakan is managing the event, a regular member of the American Horse Shows Association, Inc., rated as a 'B' point show by the Pacific Coast Horse Show Association.

Auxiliary co-chairmen are Mmes. F. B. Mosher, B. Wallace Neumaier and Carlton Peters. Other officials are Mrs. Helen Steinman, show secretary; Warren Underwood, AHSA steward; Malcom Rossoll, announcer; and Ralph Walker, ring master.

Classes are covered by rules and specifications of AHSA. Judges will be J. G. Kessler, hunters, jumpers and hunter seat equitation; O. L. (Red) Lott, western, stock seat equitation and regular quarter horses; and Morgan Smith, walking horses and Shetland ponies.

A SPECIAL Shetland pony roadster class will enter the ring Saturday and Sunday afternoons. Ponies will be shown with two-wheeled miniature carts, their drivers wearing stable colors.

TV star Virginia Grey will be on hand with Ward Bond's daughter, Mrs. John Gibbs, and Mrs. Frank McGrath to present the Ward Bond Challenge Trophy.

The trophy is given by the Calendar Quarter Horse Foundation to the winner of the Western Pleasure Horse Championship Stake. Riders must be 17 years and younger. Horses are shown at a walk, jog trot and lope on a reasonably loose rein. Judging will be based on performance, conformation and appointments.

Teen-age girls will be honored at a Saturday luncheon. They are Linda Coler, Wilson High School Ming Leadership Club; Donna Lauer, Wilson Delta Phi Kappa; Barbara Watkins, Millikan High School Sodalis; and Cathy Young, Millikan Socel.

AN EXHIBITORS' party will be staged Saturday night in the clubhouse for friends and members of the auxiliary.

Proceeds are earmarked for meeting the auxiliary's $50,000 pledge for purchase of equipment in use by the hospital's department of nuclear medicine. The auxiliary has donated nearly $2000,000 to the hospital in the past 11 years.

Tickets may be purchased at the gate at $1 for adults and 50 cents for children under 12. Food will be available on the grounds through courtesy of the hospital's Pink Ladies.

LOIS C. FANNIN'S 37-year career in Long Beach school libraries has earned her the title of "No. 1 Bookie" among coworkers.

—Staff Photo

Hers is a lifetime of instilling love for books in youth

By PAT McDONNELL
Staff Writer

"I firmly believe children should be exposed to classics and good literature at the earliest possible age."

These were the words of Lois C. Fannin, who for 14 years has been supervisor of library service, Long Beach Unified School District.

"This literary heritage is of intangible value which can't be measured by test scores or teachers' grades."

"I tell parents not to worry when their youngsters go through the love story-comic book reading phase. Often it's their way of testing their literary standards."

"In time, they tire of 'popular' writing and return to quality literature which offers new ideas and understanding."

THE WHITE-HAIRED librarian's dedication to her profession was evident in every recollection from her 37 years with Long Beach schools. She retires July 1.

"The strangest thing about facing retirement is I forget I am. I catch myself in the midst of projects like planning the library for the new Orange Avenue school."

"I've loved every minute of my work. That's why I've never anticipated what some consider the Utopian state of release from the work-a-day world. I haven't even made plans beyond July 1."

Under Miss Fannin's supervision, Long Beach has gained national recognition as a leader in developing a library system for elementary schools. It received further attention through her efforts while serving on national boards of the American Library Association and American Association of School Librarians.

"When I came to Long Beach in 1931 as Edison School librarian, there were 20 elementary schools, five junior highs and three high schools. Today, there are 54, 14 and 8, respectively — each has a library."

"In 1967, those 54 elementary libraries loaned nearly one-and-a-half million books and periodicals."

AS SUPERVISOR of a professional staff of 76, Miss Fannin conducts monthly conferences with elementary, junior high and high school librarians.

"We work closely with the public library, particularly in its summer reading program. Each year public and school librarians jointly compile a recommended list of available books for primary grade students."

WHEN ASKED about parental censorship of books, Miss Fannin said there have been few requests for removal of publications.

"In such instances, a committee reviews controversial or questioned books. I believe only one such book has been removed from circulation."

"The committee also re-evaluates books to judge educational qualities which change with time."

"We try to replace encyclopedias on a rotating basis every five years. Believe it or not, there's been criticism of this. I've heard complaints that it was unnecessary to replace a 1903 encyclopedia because it's covers still were intact."

MISS FANNIN'S pet project is the literature program she instituted in 1948 for top readers in the fifth and sixth grades.

"Children whose tested reading ability is equal or superior to seventh graders meet with the librarian for discussions of biographies, mythology, folk lore, poetry and Newbery Medal titles."

"The librarian's specialized training enables her to provide books which stimulate an interest in reading and history of literature."

"If the study topic is the classics, an exhibit of the works in their original language is on display. Maps are used to establish geographical setting of the 'Iliad' and 'Odyssey.' Charts are made to trace the deity in Greek, Roman and Norse mythology."

"Through discussion, the librarian can detect high points of reading interests and key the program to these areas. Formal book reports are avoided."

Recipe quest opens at tea honoring club leaders

Forty women, looking delectable as beautifully decorated petits fours, were entertained at tea this week in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herman H. Ridder to herald the 14th annual Independent, Press-Telegram Cookbook Contest opening today.

Representing prominent women's organizations throughout the city, tea guests — aided by their club members — will serve as judges for recipes submitted.

Impeccably groomed but unlike petits fours were the men representing Long Beach Food Sales Club and Marketing Executives who will cast their eyes on recipes a man might take over the kitchen (or backyard) to prepare.

Food Editor Mildred Flanary outlined rules (complete rules appear elsewhere in today's Independent, Press-Telegram), discussed categories and gave hints on easing the job that awaits the judging staff.

Based on previous contests, 4,500 entries in the 40 categories will be received prior to contest deadline on July 14. Among classifications are Cooking for Two, Appetizers, Foreign Recipes, Favorite Vegetables, Old Southern Dishes and Refrigerator Desserts.

New this year are Traditional Jewish Dishes and Teen Favorites. The latter category will be judged by students in the summer home economics program at DeMille Junior High School, under the experienced eye of the instructor.

Judging organizations will have ten days following close of the contest to determine the ten best recipes in each category. Final judging for cash awards in first, second and third places will be done by five graduate home economists. Grand prize winner will receive an O'Keefe and Merritt Gas Range.

AT WIT'S END

Lawn mowing not a housewife's talent

By ERMA BOMBECK

The other day I was summoned rather excitedly to the garage to see our new lawn mower.

"Isn't that precious?" I said. "What is it?"

"It's a lawn mower, you ninny," said my husband. "I want to show you how it works. First, you stand on the right-hand side of it . . ."

"Right hand," I interrupted, "let's see, the right hand is the one I write with, isn't it? Okay, I think I follow you."

"Then you lift this handle and give it a twist clockwise. What could be simpler?"

"Of course, sometimes I write with my left-hand. It isn't too easy to read, but . . ."

"WILL YOU quit clowning-around," he snarled. "I'm only trying to help you so when you cut your grass you won't cut your stupid foot off."

"Since when did I get custody of the grass?" I shouted.

"Let's not go into that. Now here's the deal on the oil. All you do is give this handle a little twist and voila, your oil is mixed with your gas. Got it?"

"That is cute," I giggled. "Would you mind going over that again? When you say 'voila' your Adam's apple jiggles up and down."

"I said you give this handle a little twist and your oil is mixed with your gas. Now remember the bag that I bought for your other mower?"

"I'LL NEVER forget it," I said. "It was my Mother's Day present last year."

"Right. Well, this one comes with a bag of its own. You just fit it over this opening here and then you won't have to spend all your time raking up the clippings and ruining our lawn."

"How come it's 'my' grass, but 'our' lawn?"

"Look, you're making too much of this. I thought one of these new mowers would thrill you half to death. You've always complained about the old one. How the carburetor leaked oil and the blades needed sharpening every two weeks and how you had to set the wheels up and down and tear down the gas lines and clean the gasket. Why, you ran that mower like a pit mechanic from the Indianapolis 500."

"Stand to the right of the mower," I mumbled. "Actually, sometimes I don't use either hand to write. I call on the phone instead."

"I can't figure you out sometimes," he snarled starting the mower and beginning to cut the grass.

And when he does, friends, we're back to MY grass.

Geiger-Linsley in marriage rite

A gala reception at Petroleum Club followed the afternoon wedding Saturday of Frederica Susan Linsley and Richard George Geiger in Westminster Presbyterian Church.

Witnessing the 2:30 p.m. exchange of vows were 250 guests. The bride, who wore a formal floor length linen gown accented with lace trim, is the daughter of Mrs. Edward G. Linsley of Long Beach and the late Mr. Linsley. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George L. Geiger, also of Long Beach.

Miss Virginia Wright was maid of honor and best.

man was Larry Taut. Giving the bride in marriage was her oldest brother, Austin Linsley. Ushering guests were the bride's other brothers, Scott and Bruce Linsley, and the bridegroom's brother, Ronald Geiger.

The new Mrs. Geiger is a graduate of Polytechnic High School and Pomona College. Her husband is also a graduate of Poly and currently is completing his education at UC, Santa Barbara.

Following a honeymoon, the newlyweds will be at home in Santa Barbara after June 21.

Boys' Town Choir due

Father Flanagan's Boys' Town Choir will appear in concert at Long Beach Arena Saturday.

Members of the choir, boys 11 to 18 years of age, will return Thursday from Japan where they have been touring as official guests of the Emperor.

Celebrities and dignitaries are expected to be on stage Saturday to introduce the choir to the audience. Orange County's Fire-Station-Inn Music Makers with special guest artists Little Red and Marlow Hendrix will provide a pre-concert show featuring singer Tricia Macial and other entertainment. This will begin at 7:30 p.m. The Boys' Town Concert will start at 8:30 p.m.

Proceeds will help provide funds for work with children and young adults at the Cerritos Pool for the Handicapped, 6801 Long Beach Blvd.

Tickets are on sale at the box office and Mutual Agencies, priced at $5.50, $4.50, and $3.50.

Stars shine in Bolshoi highlights

So great has been public response to the forthcoming engagement of "The Stars of the Bolshoi Ballet" in Shrine Auditorium, Los Angeles, June 27 through 30 that a sixth performance has been added the evening of June 30.

This scene is from "Giselle" Act II which will be seen twice in Los Angeles. Two of the greatest stars of the Bolshoi, Maya Plisetskaya and Nicolai Fadeychev, head the company of 50 dancers.

Repertoire for the added performance will include "Chopiniana" (Fokine/Chopin, orchestrated by Glazounov), "Ballet School" (Messner/Liadov - Liapunov - Glazounov-Shostakovitch), and as yet undetermined selections from "Highlights" programs.

Tickets are on sale at all offices of the Automobile Club of Southern California, Mutual Agencies and Wallich's Music City stores.

Clothesline Sale is summer art airing

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

Saturday, Seal Beach Artists League will open its annual summer-long Clothesline Sale in its Art Center, 322 Main St., Seal Beach.

"Every four weeks, we will hang work by different artists," explained Pat Jones, president and managing director of the center. "In all, about 100 artists will exhibit."

Oils, watercolors, acrylics, ceramics and drawings are included in the huge display in the gallery and patio. Reduced summer rates will be an inducement to visitors.

During the first week, a 10 per cent reduction of the already reduced students prices will apply to frames and art supplies.

Mrs. Jones predicts a special week of fanfare and fun June 29 through July 6 when Seal Beach Chamber of Commerce sponsors Open House for many areas of the city.

The Artists League will arrange an open air exhibit to entice viewers and for that week only, the center will be open on Sunday. Regular hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays, noon to 5 p.m. Saturdays.

Art classes are scheduled throughout the summer, Mrs. Jones noted.

TUESDAY, Long Beach Art Association will meet at Welch's Restaurant for dinner and to install Fred Koenig as new president, succeeding Walton McNulty who becomes first vice president. Other new officers: Kenneth Eschmann, Frances Jordan, Ed St. Rickler, Dorothy Wells.

LBAA will receive entries for its summer sale June 24 from 1 to 7 p.m. in the gallery, 800 E. Ocean Blvd.

AN OPEN-TO-THE-PUBLIC reception will honor approximately 100 artists whose work has been selected for Section I of the 18th annual Los Angeles All-City Outdoor Art Festival. Hosted by Municipal Art Gallery Associates, the reception will be held from 7:30 to 10 p.m. at the Municipal Art Gallery in Bardsall Park, 4800 Hollywood Blvd.

Limousines will transport attendees from the Hollywood Boulevard entrance to the gallery.

The exhibition will continue daily from 1 to 5 p.m. through July 14. The gallery will be open until 10 p.m. on Fridays.

In the new pattern for this year's festival, Section I was allocated $8,000 in purchase prizes by Home Savings and Loan Association. This is the 14th year that this institution has supplied prize money.

Prizes were chosen by the same judge who juried the many entries down to 100—Gerald Nordland, director of San Francisco Art Museum. Both contemporary and traditional works are included.

Section II of the festival, following the format of past years, will be held in July.

Artists studios to be visited include those of Ron Davis, Douglas Edge, Judy Gerowitz, Lloyd Hamrol, June Harwood, Inez Johnston, Terrence O'Shea, Stephan Von Huene and Emerson Woelffer.

THE ALREADY significant UCLA Ethnic Arts Museum collection has been further enriched by the gift of George G. Freinhuysen of his personal collection of African and Oceanic artifacts.

More than 200 objects from this exceptional collection will be on display in the museum through June 30.

The collection includes elegant batiks and rare Japanese textiles, a fine Dayak "hodo-apha" mask, Bushmen's shell beads, necklaces of African pods, Tibetan amber, Indonesian baskets, fantastic boxes of pandanus appliqued and embroidered with small, white cowrie shells.

Hours are noon to 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays, 1 to 5 p.m. Sundays, closed Saturdays.

Southern California choir, Utah Symphony due at Bowl

The Utah Symphony, conducted by Maurice Abravanel, will give its first Los Angeles concert Saturday at 8:30 p.m. in Hollywood Bowl.

Guest artists for the debut appearance will be the 135-voice Southern California Mormon Choir under direction of Frederick Davis.

The program will consist of Gustav Mahler's monumental "Symphony No. 2" (Resurrection) and the colorful "Lions" by American composer Ned Rorem.

Rated by the New York Times as one of the top 15 orchestras in the United States, the 84-piece Utah Symphony has performed internationally. Recently it debuted at Carnegie Hall and was invited to perform at the Athens Music Festival and in many European cities.

LBAA artists rate 'excellent' in annual show

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

The more than three dozen paintings selected for the 44th annual Long Beach Art Association Show at Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd., sparkle with excitement. This would imagine, equal the work of any similar group in the country. There is originality, inventiveness and excellent craftsmanship.

Dorrie Stogner's collages are eminently successful. Her tri-part, "Journey," and "Dialogue" exploit to the full the possibility of pasted papers. Actually, almost anyone can get a good effect from the collage technique when it is combined, without restriction, with painting and drawing. Stogner restricts her colors and is a purist with the medium with glorious results.

IT IS interesting to find several of the members of established ability who have courageously rejected proven techniques to explore new areas. Among these are Robert Adams and Grace Dimmick.

Sensational use of color marks work by Betty Ann Kirkpatrick, Loyce Carhart, and Bartley Gurrey. Mrs. Kirkpatrick shows a verdant backyard scene in colors with the impact of neon; her strong composition of space reinforces and holds the dynamic color. Carhart's "Color It Mexico" could be a text for how one uses color blends to make greys. Gurrey focuses in on a looming black lava rock in "Hawaiian Shore" and surrounds it with the myriad hues of pebbles and shells.

AN UNUSUAL approach by Dorothy Wells produces two transparent orange boxes on a white ground with rolled wash of pigment. The enigmatic "Magic Circle," three combined female nudes by Cheryl West, is arresting. Elizabeth Nador captures the tired, rich splendor of reds in "Colonial Church in Quito."

Fred Campbell's "Hypocrisy Unfolds" has the wild, orgiastic expressionism of a Nolde. Fine texturing and splattering in olive, magenta, and coral are put together with fine penline texturing by Alice Thorne in "Three Sunflowers" with marvelous results.

Viewing hours are from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesdays through Fridays, and from 1 to 5 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays. The show will continue through July 7.

Season opening at Greek Theater

Ravi Shankar who introduced the Western World to the sound of the sitar, will bring his "Festival From India" to Greek Theater June 24 through 30.

Special guest artists will alternate appearances on the outdoor stage at 2700 N. Vermont Ave.

Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday nights of that week, the featured performer will be Ali Akbar Khan, billed as the Horowitz of the sarod. The sarod is a lute of Northern India. Tuesday and Thursday nights, India's foremost classical dancer, Indrani, and her company will perform. Shankar will appear as host and performer each night.

THE GREEK'S summer season will open Monday, June 17, with "Brasiliana," spectacular song and dance troupe from Rio de Janeiro. The company of 50 offers an extravaganza of pulsating rhythms of samba, bossa nova, and other authentic dances of Brazil performed by many of the same dancers who appeared in the Oscar-winning film "Black Orpheus."

RAVI SHANKAR, MASTER SITARIST

Pacific Opera Theater to do English 'Figaro'

Paul Johnson will sing the title role in Pacific Opera Theater's English translation production of Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro."

The opera will open June 28 in Community Playhouse Studio Theater, 3021 E. Anaheim St. and will run through Aug. 3. Curtain time is 8:15 p.m. Friday and Saturday evenings except for the July 4 holiday week-end when performance dates are Saturday and Sunday evenings, July 6 and 7.

Alternating in the role of Susanna Figaro's betrothed, will be Marlene Silvers, Audrey Leonard and Paula Swornay. Dolores Ferracioli and Caroline Ognibene will share the role of Countess Almaviva. Count Almaviva will be sung by Barney Spencer and James Kichham.

OTHERS in the cast are Vanessa Brittan, Myra Dennis, Charlotte Hanna, Barbara Procter, Lucille Anderson, Gloria Johnson, Carol Barkhurst, Carl Robertson, Wayne Kuhop, Richard Gower, Michael Beene and James Cowell.

Music director is Edward Schick; staging is by Rick Davis, assisted by Miss Leonard and Sherry Tyler. Gregory Petzold designed and executed sets. Costumes are by Josephine Lott, production coordinator for Pacific Opera Theater, and Mary Decker.

PAUL JOHNSON

Concerts to augment tour fund

Wayne Gard will direct and Jean Kuhns will accompany Long Beach Collegiate Chorale in two identical programs before the group leaves for a concert tour of Europe.

Each concert will begin at 8:30 p.m. Today, the performance will be in Covenant Presbyterian Church, 607 E. Third St. Next Sunday, the chorale will sing in First Baptist Church, 10th Street and Pine Avenue.

The program will consist of sacred compositions, spirituals, traditional airs, show tunes, "Geographical Fugue" for speaking chorus by Tock and selections from "Alice Through the Looking Glass" by Morris Rager.

'Music' is next by CLO

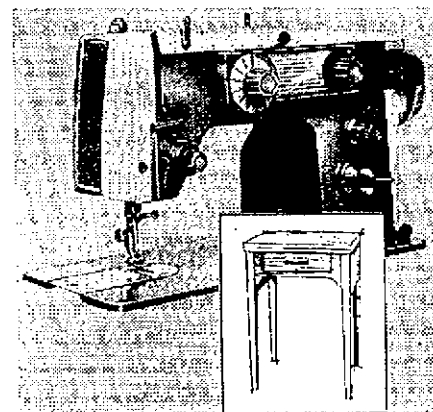

Long Beach Civic Light Opera will stage "Sound of Music" July 11 through 21 in the Concert Hall of Municipal Auditorium.

Performances will begin at 8:30 p.m. July 11, 12, 13, 18, 19 and 20. Matinees are scheduled at 2:30 p.m. July 13, 14, 20 and 21. Saturday matinees are an innovation in this fourth and last production of CLO's 20th season.

Glenellen Cooper of Los Angeles will play the part of Maria, created on Broadway by Mary Martin and in motion pictures by Julie Andrews. Marvin Cloyd is cast as Captain von Trapp.

Ancient art of humor

"A circus without a clown would be like a bullfight without the bull—unthinkable!" is an old adage in the world of the big top. Al Ross, king of clowns, will be featured with more than a dozen colleagues in the James Hetzer Intercontinental Circus which will open a four-week run at Melodyland Wednesday.

'We should elect ourselves Americans again, says Thomas who make and enforce our laws. A real disciplinarian, he was.

"He would say, 'you are so lucky, my son, to be born to this great heritage. Take care of it, defend it, don't dishonor it. He who denies his heritage HAS no heritage.'"

"And he didn't just talk about respect for country and authority. He loved this country."

Danny Thomas smiled. Took a bite of steak—then went on:

"He had nine sons and one daughter—and not one of us even so much as ran a red light. If we HAD run afoul of the law, it would have been a pleasure to go to jail rather than face father."

TWO YOUNG men burst into the room. One said, "Hi, Dad."

The comedian introduced his son, Tony, a good-looking young man of 19 with a healthy mane of black hair.

"Son, we're in the middle of an interview," Thomas pointed out.

That's all it took. "Oh, excuse us," said Tony. With a polite, "very pleased to meet you," he retreated through the door.

"He's a good boy," Thomas reflected. "He just came down from Southern Cal. ... he's studying theater arts. He's interested in the other side of the camera."

That brought up the subject of "That Girl," Mario Thomas.

"You know what?" Thomas beamed. "I'm getting to be known as Mario Thomas' father."

"Isn't she something?" I never dreamed she could be the actress she is. She took English at Southern Cal and got a degree to teach. But the only teaching she did was the practice kind."

I couldn't help but notice how much better looking Danny Thomas is in real life than on video screens ("people are always telling me that").

Except for his marvelous proboscis, he suggests the handsomeness of Cary Grant.

Has he ever considered a nose job?

"No—never" ... even though movie stardom was delayed because studio moguls pleaded with him to have it redone.

BUT DANNY THOMAS, devoted husband and father, humanitarian and patriot, had more important things to talk about. Like patriotism.

"I believe sincerely in my heart that never before in the history of our country has an outward sign of patriotism been needed like it is needed now ... particularly for our teenagers."

"Whenever you and I sit back and let the flag be defamed, we are denying our heritage."

And he said as much in his dinner club performance—so crowded that every diner rubbed elbows with other diners.

In Las Vegas, a community not particularly known for its saintly outlook, Danny performs annually at the gambling casino.

Because he is such a masterful entertainer, he then—as always—was greeted with loud and lusty rounds of applause. He answered the audience not with jokes alone (there were plenty of those, too) ... but with small speeches on subjects like "people who need people are the happiest."

Or: "Wouldn't it be wonderful if all 50 states got together and renewed their pride in their country?"

Or: "I'm worried ... democracy is taking a beating these days. Let's get rid of the imperfections, make it work. It's still the greatest form of government in the world."

Or: "We should elect ourselves Americans again. That's the greatest thing that could happen, come November. Amen!"

College couples marry

Montgomery-Babich

A home in Seattle, Wash., awaits the William Michael Montgomerys (nee Karen Joyce Babich) who exchanged marriage vows Saturday in St. Anthony's Catholic Church.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nick J. Chicoratchi, 1530 Park Ave., wore a gown of silk organza and Alencon lace with Kabuki sleeves and a wedding ring collar.

Joan, Ciccone was maid of honor; Sandra Fore and Susan Johnston were bridesmaids.

Robert Montgomery was best man for the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Montgomery of Mt. Vernon, Wash. Felix Harke and Robin Gaukroger were ushers.

Following a reception in the Lafayette Hotel, the newlyweds departed on a trip to Lake Tahoe and San Francisco. She is a senior at University of Washington, where she is a member of Phi Beta-Phi sorority. He is an alumnus of the university and affiliated with Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

Lewelling-Lewis

Sequia and Las Vegas are destinations of a wedding trip which followed the Saturday nuptials of Jane E. Lewis and Fred Steven Lewelling, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lewelling, 5101 Pageantry St.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. K. R. Lewis, 325 E. 65th St., wore a gown of French re-embroidered lace and organza with a shawl collar and cathedral train.

Janet Lewis was her sister's honor attendant. Bridesmaids were Pamela Lambine, Marsha Miller, Mrs. Larry Nunez and Cindy Lambine. Linda Lambine was flower girl.

John Donatoni was best man. Ushers were Rick Hayes, Kenneth Whitmer, Tony Guggiana and Robert Atkins.

A church reception followed. The couple will live in Lynwood. Mrs. Lewelling is an alumna of Jordan High School and attended California State College, Long Beach. Her husband is a member of the February graduating class at CSLB where he was captain of the varsity baseball team.

Flower fete gets going at Lompoc

Lompoc will hold its 16th annual Flower Festival next Saturday and Sunday, with thousands of visitors expected to visit 2,000 acres of garden posies in full bloom on the surrounding Rainbow Farms.

The Saturday parade will include 30 floats, designed along the "Sing a Song of Flowers" theme with millions of hand-applied fresh petals.

Also scheduled next Saturday and Sunday is a Water Ski Tournament at Long Beach Marine Stadium. Saturday hours will be from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Sunday, noon to 5 p.m. Events will include trick skiing, slalom and jumping.

Compton's Community Fair will open Wednesday and continue through June 23.

Oriana sails on July 5

A passport, a route plan and a phone call now to P&O Lines can get short-term vacation planners aboard the superliner Oriana, sailing from the West Coast for Europe in less than a month.

The liner will embark from the Port of Los Angeles on July 5. Her itinerary will allow those booking now to take a brief four day voyage to Acapulco, a 10-day trip into the West Indies to visit Curacao or Trinidad, or sail all the way to Lisbon or England, arriving there July 22.

Accommodations are available in both classes at a wide range of fares. Cost of a tourist cabin from the West Coast to England, for example, is $467. First class fares start at $837. The big liner, which carries over 1,200 in tourist class and 500 in first class, has three swimming pools, a cinema, dance bands and other amenities to make shipboard life relaxing and pleasant.

Rockefeller to build new Hawaii hotel

HONOLULU — Mauna Kea, the luxury resort developed by Laurence S. Rockefeller on the Big Island of Hawaii, will have a sister hotel—the Hapuna Beach, at Hapuna Bay, just south of it on the 12,000 acres leased by Rockefeller from the Parker Ranch and other owners.

The new 400 to 500 room hotel will be the second step in a total planned resort development which will include more hotels, condominiums, luxury retirement and vacation housing, a cultural center, marina, golf courses.

JOINING in the long-range development plan with Rockefeller's Olohana Corporation and Hawaii's Dillingham Corporation interests, is Eastern Air Lines. The resulting combination is called the Dillrock-Eastern Company.

Three airlines—Pan Am, United and Northwest—now serve the Big Island's jetport at Hilo directly from the mainland. This airport is becoming more and more popular with travelers who want to tour the islands, since the island of Hawaii is a convenient point either to begin or end such a tour. Aloha and Hawaiian airlines both have convenient daily jet schedules connecting the other islands with Hilo and with Kamuela airport—the latter being a short drive from the Mauna Kea and upcoming Hapuna Beach properties.

Travel and RESORTS

888,000 Europeans spend $300 million on visits to United States

BRUSSELS — A total of 888,000 Europeans visited the United States last year and spent a total of approximately $300 million in that country, according to a report issued here by the European Airlines Research Bureau (EARB).

The report revealed that the number of European visitors to America has increased 152 per cent since 1962 and jumped by a record 35 per cent in 1967 alone. American traffic to Europe increased less than 10 per cent last year and averaged 14 per cent for the five preceding years.

Noting that European transatlantic traffic is growing at a much faster rate than American, EARB said the actual numerical increase in Europeans visiting America in 1967 was 230,000, while the increase in estimated numbers of Americans going to Europe was less than half that amount.

EUROPEAN tourist expenditures in the United States increased by $75 million in 1967 over 1966, while American expenditures in Europe went up only $55 million.

The report, entitled "Recent Developments in North Atlantic Trade and Travel," updates an earlier study on "North Atlantic Trade and Commerce" issued last June, and covers developments in transatlantic tourism between 1962 and 1967 and explores the impact of tourism on the international balance of payments.

EARB is a research organization maintained jointly by 16 European airlines.

Reviewing the balance of the European airlines' own transactions with America, EARB reported that its 16 members have given the United States a net favorable balance of $2.455 billion since 1946, having spent $4.948 billion there, as against earnings in America of only $2.491 billion.

THE EARB carriers have purchased $3.065 billion worth of American aircraft, engines, spares and electronic equipment since 1946, and have an additional $1.323 billion worth on order, not including super-sonic transports.

The report noted that while these aircraft purchases have been financed in part through loans in the United States, on which they have paid $89,000,000 in interest since 1946, "repayment of these 'rented' funds has been made continuously throughout the period from the earnings and other resources of the carriers outside the United States."

The member airlines of EARB are Aer Lingus, Air France, Alitalia, Austrian Airlines, British European Airways, British Overseas Airways Corporation, KLM Royal Dutch Airlines, Olympic Airways, SABENA Belgian World Airlines, Scandinavian Airlines — SAS, Swissair, Transportes Aereos Portugueses and Turkish Airlines.

DEAR ABBY

Eating out is cheaper than divorce

DEAR ABBY: Beth and I have been married about 10 years and have a very good marriage and two adorable children.

I have been traveling quite a bit lately in my business and it has created a slight problem. Yesterday when I came off the road, after having driven from 7 a.m. until 6 p.m. Beth says, "It's a lovely evening, let's go for a little ride."

When I am out of town I eat in restaurants all the time, which gets pretty tiresome, so when I come home I look forward to a good, home-cooked meal. Well, Beth greets me at the door with, "I've been cooped up in the house all week, let's eat out."

Tell me, Dear Abby, what is the penalty for wife beating in the state of Nebraska?

DEAR RON: I don't know, but I would guess that you'd be ahead to "take a little ride" and eat out occasionally.

DEAR ABBY: The other day a letter came addressed to my husband. Thinking it was an advertisement, I opened it and found several pictures of nude women with a letter saying, "If you want more, send money."

I suppose I am naive, but I was shocked. I don't know whether my husband sent for these pictures or not. If he didn't, shouldn't these people be reported for sending this kind of stuff thru the mails?

My problem is this: I'm afraid if I show this stuff to my husband and question him, he'll start having all his mail sent to his office and I won't see any of it. He is sometimes a little careless with money, and charges things he doesn't want me to know about. I recently quit working, and now I see all the mail before he does, and I like it this way. What do you suggest?

—HIS WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Your biggest problem, as I see it, is that of the girlie gallery. (He may be innocent.) Then the obvious lack of communication and mutual trust between you two.

For openers, ask him how he came to be recaptured the material (in its original envelope) to your postmaster, who will add it to his bulging file on pornographic abuse of the United States mails. If your husband sent for the stuff, you have still another problem.

DEAR ABBY: How many chances do you think a person is entitled to? My wife was a nice, clean-cut girl from a good Christian home when I married her. (In fact, her Daddy was a minister.)

When our first child was 10 months old I came home from work one day and found the baby wet and screaming and all alone. My wife came home in a taxi at eleven o'clock that night, dead drunk.

This has been going on for 6 years, and it's always the same story. I can't count the "one more chance" I've given her.

We have two kiddies now, and my mother says she will take care of them for me if I decide to leave my wife. Abby, I love her. When she's sober, she's a wonderful, sweet person, but I can't go on like this. She's begging for "one more chance." What should I do?

BIG PROBLEM

DEAR BIG: Tell her you will give her one more chance if she agrees to give "Alcoholics Anonymous" a chance. A. A. has succeeded when every other formula for lasting sobriety has failed. They are listed in your telephone directory. But the one who needs the help has to do the calling.

Red Cross makes special call for new volunteers

Special call: American Red Cross, 310 W. Broadway, needs volunteers to visit families of new inductees into the Armed Services.

Volunteers will be assigned to Service to Military Families of the Long Beach chapter. For this emergency service, women of substantial education and a special understanding of people (perhaps gained through prior voluntary work) may serve without the usual required training given to case aides, according to Mrs. Charles Hart, director of Red Cross services to military families.

Those wishing to volunteer should telephone or call at chapter headquarters before June 28 at which time a day's orientation will be given. VOLUNTEERS must be able to provide their own transportation for home visits. The home visitation program is designed to provide families of men being drafted with information of services available to them and how to reach them in time of need, said Ross E. Lopez, chairman of the military families service.

Currently, Mrs. Hart said, they have received 150 new inductee cards with information for home visits. These are provided by induction centers and more are coming in daily.

Bleaches

Chlorine bleach in liquid, powder or crystal is particularly effective for sheets, pillowcases, towels, etc. Oxygen-type bleaches are safe for all fibers, blends of fibers and finishes, such as silks, acetate, wool,

A Beauty Hint

Margaret Merrill advises that it is quite simple for every woman to promote an English countryside complexion. Her hint to gain a peach-and-cream loveliness is to damp a cloth with cold water from your refrigerator and press it over your face for a few minutes once or twice a day. Then, to hold the good of the complexion-beautifying cold water, smooth on tropical oil of Olay. This oil is rather scarce and expensive, but your drug store should be able to get you a supply.

Don't get old!

Any woman in good health who gets old is just plain lazy. Now before you quarrel with that statement, take a look at some of our famous movie stars who acknowledge to be in their sixties.

One of the things you don't have to tolerate is age spots, those ugly, brown blotches that ruin the smooth color of your skin. Thanks to extensive research over the last five years, Ultra Nadinola is here to help keep your skin even-colored and smooth. And it's all because of the new miracle ingredient called Dimatron™. Dimatron™ actually seeks out the cells that are producing the excess pigment, and suppresses their action. Ultra Nadinola has a beneficial vanishing cream moisturizing base that results in a creamier, dreamier you.

If you don't like what you see in the mirror, get to work! And that goes for those of you with freckles and "liver spots" too. Three weeks of faithful use and Ultra Nadinola will start to show you a fresh clear complexion you had forgotten you could have. Let Ultra Nadinola bring out the hidden beauty that is naturally you.

KITCHEN REMODELING

MODERNIZE WITH FRIGIDAIRE!

Fifty years ago the American homemaker considered herself "well off" with this Frigidaire kitchen. Of course, drain water from the icebox frequently spilled onto the floor, the firewood box for the stove always seemed to be empty, and the hand pump required priming each morning.

LET A-1 HOME APPLIANCE HELP YOU WITH YOUR KITCHEN REMODELING

We won't recommend a Frigidaire kitchen as shown above, unless you want one, but we will help you with planning, financing and choosing new Frigidaire Appliances for your new kitchen. If you're thinking of remodeling your present kitchen, see us first. We have complete built-in kitchens on display to help you visualize your plans.

What Your Name Means

By LA REINA RULE

Send your name to La
Reina Rule, Post Office
Box 64151, Los Angeles, Calif. 90064 for origin, meaning and brief genealogy, for reply only in this column.

MISS RULE: Please give the background on WALKER. — R.W., Westminster; H.W., Huntington Beach; M.W., Bellflower.

WALKER, English, means "cloth maker." It was customary in the 13th century for "walkers" to tread or walk on wool fibres during the processing of yardage. One expert "Walkere" took his trade name as a family surname.
The Walker armorial shield is silver, with three black crescents surrounding a black chevron as emblems on it. Robert Walker and his wife, of Manchester, England, settled at Salem,
Mass., in 1630.

MISS RULE: Kindly explain JASIEN. — H.B., Anaheim.

JASIEN, Polish, is shortened from the surname Jasiensky, meaning "descendant of young John." The Jasienski armorial shield is red, centered with an arm in armor holding aloft a scimilar or curved oriental sword.

MISS RULE: Please explain WOLAND. — J.W., Long Beach.

WOLAND, German, was formed from "Walld-Land," portraying the fore-father as the owner of "forest-land." Woland may also be from the Slavic-east German "volj-land," meaning "property of the man with the strong will."

MISS RULE: Would like to know about KOLK. — J.G., Lomita.

KOLK, German, began as a north German dialect term. The ancestor's farm home was landmarked by a "koik" on a nearby stream, indicative of a "water hole."

MISS RULE: Please analyze PUCKETT. — M.A.
L.P., Long Beach.

PUCKETT, English, originated as a medieval nickname for the remote ancestor. The source, "Pock-et," was an endearing term bestowed on a beloved child by adoring parents, for "Pock-et" meant "little elf."

MISS RULE: Please indicate the origin of KILEEN.
— K.M., Long Beach.

KILEEN, Irish, traces to the Gaelic clan O'Cillín, meaning "descendants of the young warrior." The Ki-leens, whose name is also spelled Killane, Killan and Killian, are recorded in many parts of Ireland in past centuries.

MISS RULE: What is the story on INGALLS? — J.M., Santa Ana.

INGALLS began in the 12th century as the English
"Ingall" meaning "hero's tribute," an early given-name. Geoffrey Ingall was a Huntingdonshire land owner in the 1200's. The Ingalls armorial shield is blue, decorated with a silver rampant lion placed below three silver stars. Ipswich, Mass., records of 1678 list Samuel Ingols (Ingalls).

MISS RULE: Will you inform us on POEHLEIN? —
M.P., Long Beach.

POEHLEIN originated as the German surname Pohlein, with an unlaut accent (two dots) over the letter
"O." Pohlein described a land mark on ancestral property, as "little pool."

MISS RULE: What have you on WARTER? — H.W., Long Beach.

WARTER, German, developed from "Wart-Heri" in the early Middle Ages.
This double hero-name decipherers as "guardian warrior."

ANYTIME, INCL. SUNDAY

THROUGH the low, angry overcast the dawn seeped slowly. In the milk-blue light the sea was the color of lead. It sighed and moved gently like a dreamer stirring. I sat in the boat and stared at it. It did not stare back. It could care less.

Gray sky, gray sea. Black boat on the gray sea near the black and gray breakwater and the silhouette of a black pelican flapping awkwardly against the gray sky.

I slowly removed my trousers and shirt, stripping down to my bathing trunks and shivering in the cold dawn. I put on my short wet suit and it warmed me, but the foam felt heavy and stiff against my skin. A swell surged against and through the breakwater and the little boat bobbed at the end of its anchor line.

Shoreward the Long Beach skyline began to show dimly through the haze. Just about now, I thought, the television antennas on all those buildings would begin to suck in the first pictures from New York — the gray and black of St. Patrick's Cathedral, the somber crowds watching outside in the gray streets, the policemen, the dark interior of the church, the coffin, the widow in her black veil.

I put on my fins. I hung my mask over the side of the boat and wet both sides of the faceplate. Then I drew it back and spit on the inside of the wet faceplate and slowly rubbed the saliva on it until it squeaked. Then I rinsed it out again. That would keep it from fogging.

I could see only dimly beyond the surface to where I knew another world existed — an alien world of violence and beauty. It is foolish to dive alone, but sometimes you have to do foolish things alone, like being born, or dying.

I stood up, grasped my mask firmly with both hands and fell forward. The sea closed around me. The cold water poured into the millions of tiny cells of my foam suit and the chill shock made me gasp into my snorkel. I lay face down on the surface and waited for my body heat to warm my wet suit.

And as I waited for my life's heat to return, I thought about the other world of violence and beauty that I had left behind.

I met and spoke with Robert Kennedy a number of times. Most of those times I was after information, answers to questions. It occurs to me now that Bobby Kennedy spent most of his life and practically all of his dealings with people in attempting to answer questions. Everything from "Where are you going from here?" to "How do we get out of Vietnam and end poverty at home?"

He was impatient with oft-repeated questions, and he sometimes expected his interviewers to be familiar with every speech he had made in his career, no matter how obscure. But his reaction to a good, well-phrased question was thoughtful and candid. He would start talking to his questioner, and then as he pondered the full implications, end up talking to himself.

Most of the times I talked to him, he was moving. Bobby Kennedy always knew where he was going, and he knew that the shortest distance between two points is a straight line. He walked rapidly, and in straight lines. Wherever he went he pulled a vast crowd of people with him. If Hitler was saluted with an upraised palm and Churchill with the V-for-victory sign, then the salute to Kennedy was the outstretched microphone as reporters frantically sought to keep up with him.

I was about 15 feet down, on the great reef-edge of the breakwater. The gray light of the surface had become a gold-green. Here was no black and gray world, but a world of violent color. Orange starfish, mother-of-pearl abalone shells. Chartreuse moss-banks were interrupted by purple and white carpets of sea urchins and brightly colored tiny fish played cautiously over beautiful but dangerous flower beds of anemones.

There has been much denunciation of violence in American life and calls for stricter gun-control laws. There probably should be stricter gun-control laws. They can't harm anything, but anyone who expects gun-control laws to control violence is fooling himself. The reason we need gun controls is that we are a violent society. The controls won't change the violence, just the expression of it.

In other violent societies where firearms were nonexistent or scarce, assassination has been performed by other means. We cannot outlaw carving knives, ice picks, nylon stockings, fire tongs and scissors just because they may be instruments of homicide. We cannot fence our oceans and rivers and ban weed killers in order to create the Safe Society.

I surfaced for air, then thrust myself down again, swimming to deeper water. An ugly moray eel thrust himself from his hole, his mouth open and needle teeth bared. Morays have a bad reputation, but I have never seen them bother humans under water. On the other hand, they dearly love abalone. If I found myself with a nice pink abalone and a moray that looked like he wanted it, I would give it to him.

We have a violent society because we have created one. In occupying this land, we conducted a war of genocide against its original owners, the American Indians. We coined the slogan, "The only good Indian is a dead Indian," and we elected our best Indian killers president.

We have had race riots and racial violence for years. Everybody said "too bad," but nobody did anything about it as long as it was Negroes who were getting killed. Between 1890 and 1940 some 3,000 Negroes were lynched. Nobody would even have known about them if Tuskegee Institute hadn't collected statistics. Few newspapers reported the violent deaths of Negroes in those days and fewer still editorialized about doing anything to stop it.

Some people say the cause of recent violence is Supreme Court decisions restricting police interrogation of prisoners. Yet, the Supreme Court was trying to hold down violence. It quoted from police manuals to demonstrate the type of intimidation that was being used in some police interrogations.

No, no one complained about violence as long as it was directed against Indians, Negroes and no-account people. It was only when the no-account people began getting guns that the rest of us got scared.

Perhaps that's a good thing. Perhaps we are learning that we can't institutionalize violence to protect our peace and security. Perhaps we will realize that building a sense of community is more than deciding who can have guns and who can't.

When I came up from the sea, the world was more gray and less black. Somewhere 3,000 miles to the east, a gray and black train was winding its way along a black iron road to a sooty gray station in Washington. But here the sun was beginning to break through.

Bill and Melva Townsend show their beautiful bows, scientific masterpieces of a craft almost as old as the race of man.

Robin Hood Was a Piker

Melva displays perfect form for bull's-eye shot.

Story and Photos by Mark Clutter

TO THIS DAY, WHEN AN ARCHER puts an arrow dead center in the bull's-eye, then breaks it with another arrow, it is called a "Robin Hood."

The merry bandit of Sherwood Forest earned his fame. He was, if legend tells the story aright, one of the greatest archers of all time.

There are hundreds, perhaps thousands, of archers in the Southland alone who regularly outshoot Robin Hood.

It is one of the ironies of history that the bow and arrow became a truly efficient weapon hundreds of years after it became obsolete.

The bow and arrow, not the wheel, may be man's greatest invention. Without it the race of man, weak of tooth and claw, might not have survived. With it men put steak on their tables. And with it men built mighty empires and tore them down again.

Freedom owes much to archery. The bow and arrow, like the six-gun, was an "equalizer." In medieval England it made the skilled peasant the peer of the heavily armed noble.

Today the bow and arrow is used by hunters who want to take their game the hard way. It is used once in a while in war. Many a tall German gasped and died, an arrow in his heart, during British Commando raids. It is used by both sides in Vietnam.

But archery is obsolete — "an Indian game for kids."

It is also a highly sophisticated sport, requiring at once the skill of modern engineering and the most amazing personal self-discipline.

The modern bow and arrow in the hands of an expert is the equivalent of the handgun fired by a champion. (The modern handgun too is a highly sophisticated weapon.)

Go someplace where the expert bowmen compete — for example, the Downey Archery Lanes, 9528 E. Imperial Highway at Bellflower Boulevard, Downey — and you will see men and women put arrow after arrow into groups the size of a silver dollar.

They are all kinds of people — teen-agers and people with gray hair. They come from all occupations. The majority are likable people with a zest for living.

Why do they do it? Why do they spend considerable money and time to excel in a romantic art? Perhaps the romance has something to do with it, but the need for archery runs deeper than that. It involves the collecting of beautiful tackle. The finest bows and arrows are masterpieces. But most important of all is what the bullfighters call "the moment of truth." Mind and eye and nerves and muscles are perfectly poised. Three fingers move ever so slightly and the arrow strikes the bull's-eye.

Bill and Melva Townsend, 22502 Shadycroft Ave., Torrance, are rather typical of the expert archers. Bill is an experimental machinist for National Cash Register, a job he finds much to his liking. His skill is useful in archery. He makes accessories, but so far he hasn't tackled the complicated job of bow-making.

Both Melva and Bill graduated from firearms to archery. They have good guns, especially handguns, and they still enjoy them. Many archers are also marksmen. Guns are often neglected after the archery enthusiasm takes hold. The Townsends don't limit themselves to shooting at targets. Melva plays the organ, paints, draws and does mosaics. Both of them like skin-diving. They have two children, Monica, 11, and Ronnie, 7. Both children are archers and Monica recently won a trophy.

As sports go, archery isn't expensive. But it isn't cheap, the way the Townsends do it. Melva's pride and joy is her new bow, a construction of aluminum, fiberglass and wood which cost $200. Archery is one of the most progressive scientific fields. A good bow of 15 years ago would cause pitying smiles on the range today. Melva's bow is said to be among the best because it has set records never approached before. But better bows will be made.

Bill's bow, more conventional in design, cost $130.

"Counting the children's, we had nine bows but we sold two of them," Melva said. "We also have nine dozen arrows."

Melva's arrows cost $40 a dozen. "If I paid $40 for a dress, my husband would think I was extravagant," she smiled.

It isn't necessary to spend so much. An archer could equip himself with good tackle at little more than $100. But there is a joy in owning the best.

The shooting of arrows becomes a passion. The Townsends have a target in the back yard. They are officers in the Bowhawks, a South Bay area club. They belong to another club. They shoot at the Downey indoor range, which has automatic targets that bring the arrows back to the shooter. And they go to meets.

"We went to a meet at Las Vegas, and didn't go near a show or a club," Bill said. "We went to bed at 8:30 so we would be fresh in the morning."

The Townsends are not champions. They are just quite good, capable of shooting with other experts and taking a trophy now and then.

"We have been at it for about three years," Melva said. "We go into slumps and get discouraged. Then there comes a time when we are shooting better than ever."

"It is a wonderful family sport. We can take the children with us, and we have fun together."

People are always asking archers, "Does it take a lot

ARCHERY IS SIMPLE

SHOOTING THE BOW is a simple art. Like so many things that are simple, it isn't easy to learn.

John McPhelan, owner of the Downey Archery Lanes, has broken archery down into eight movements.

1. Addressing the target. Stand sideways, toes on a line with the bull's-eye.

2. The stance. Assume a comfortable position with your feet slightly apart. Place equal weight on both feet.

3. Holding the arrow. Place the arrow in the bow. Grasp the arrow with three fingers around the string. The arrow nock should be between the index and the second fingers. Hold the string in the curve of the first joint of the fingers. The thumb and the little finger are turned into the palm of the hand.

4. Draw. Turn your head toward the target. Extend your bow arm with the bow. Draw the arrow back to its full length, placing your hand along your jawbone with the tip of your index finger at the corner of your mouth. Do not move your head. It remains in a natural "looking at the target" position.

5. Anchor. The position of the hand on the jawbone with the tip of the index finger at the corner of the mouth is called "anchor." The anchor must be the same for each shot.

6. Aiming. Point the tip of the arrow directly below the aiming spot of the target. If the bow sight is used, set the sight so the bull's-eye is seen through the loop on the sight.

7. Releasing. When the arrow has been aimed, it is released by simply relaxing and straightening the three fingers holding the arrow and string.

8. Follow through. Archery, like bowling and golf, has its "follow through." The bow arm stays extended and stationary until the arrow strikes the target. The release hand stays on the jawbone or moves slightly to the rear along the jawbone.

That's all there is to being an archer.

OPENING CEREMONIES NEXT SUNDAY

A 'Home' for Long Beach Writers

Story and Photos by Star Bohl

WHEN SENIOR STUDENTS at Rolling Hills High School checked into the class financial situation a few weeks ago they discovered a surplus. They were delighted. What did they do with the "windfall"? Have a party? Split the money to reduce senior expenses? Not this group. Instead, they formed a committee and looked into the possibilities of contributing to the community.

For this particular group of young people, that was not unusual. As juniors they contributed both money and their time and effort to making badly needed furniture for the Frederick Douglass Child Development Center in Watts.

This year their concern is the Douglass House Foundation (Watts Writers' Workshop) and affiliated branches — specifically the new Long Beach Writers' Workshop. And, again this year, they did more than just write a check and call it "contributing." On the contrary, a representative group of the 550 Rolling Hills seniors gathered in Long Beach under the direction of class president John Papadakis and senior class adviser Frederick Koch. The group met with Talmadge Spratt, Douglass House director of branches, at the home of the Long Beach Writers' Workshop — a 50-year-old, run-down house at 1021 Lime Ave., in the central district of Long Beach. There the seniors pitched in and devoted many hours of hard work. Not content to be observers, the seniors demanded total involvement in their contribution to the community and to, it is hoped, better racial communication.

"We know we're socially isolated in Rolling Hills," said Papadakis, "and that's why we're so insistent on total involvement. This is our chance to meet situations which exist within the community. This is our chance to understand."

"This is a unique project in community involvement for these young people," said Spratt. "For them, it's a whole new concept of contributing. This is a new trend for young people which we hope will spread to their peers and extend into their adult lives."

Originally, the Writers' Workshop was set up for the benefit of the Watts community. Following the Watts riots in 1965 prominent writer Budd Schulberg initiated the idea of encouraging writing within the Watts black community. He said at the time, "I feel this is the one field where I'm an expert. I'm a writer; I know writing. And I believe I can help others to write. Therefore," he concluded, "this is my personal contribution from what I know I can do."

Schulberg then spent five weeks in the Watts Happening Coffee Shop waiting for the right opening. During the sixth week he was approached by the first curious (and suspicious) young man. After a lengthy, searching talk it appeared Schulberg passed inspection. By afternoon of the same day he met his first Watts poet. In two weeks the group had grown to 7, then to 15. By December of 1965 the group was so large it had to move to bigger quarters.

From funds contributed by Schulberg and others in the writing and movie-television fields a house was rented to provide a place to meet. The house also served as a dormitory for many of the men in order to give them an address and forestall police arrests for vagrancy.

In 1966, with a membership of 70, the Watts Writers' Workshop began to attract national attention in the literary world. The works of the writers were solicited by local and national publications. They were subjects of an NBC Experiment in Television series. Because of the positive response from within the Watts ghetto the National Endowment for the Arts and Humanities, a federal group, gave financial aid.

In 1967 a book, "From the Ashes," containing various literary contributions from the Watts group, was published to wide acclaim. The Antioch Review devoted one whole issue to the group and its poetry and prose.

By the end of 1967 the Douglass House Foundation Writers' Workshops had established branches in San Bernardino, Altadena, East Los Angeles and West Los Angeles. And the original Watts group rented an unused supermarket for use as a theater, classrooms and administrative offices. The 1967 television special "Voices of Watts" became the 1968 "New Voices of Watts."

The whole concept of ghetto area workshops is expanding under the direction and guidance of the Douglass House Foundation. New units are being established in Detroit, Washington, D.C., and Seattle.

And this year the Long Beach Writers' Workshop was started under the impetus of James Bell and Eleanor Shibley, both Long Beach residents.

Said Bell: "As a writer, I felt a need to meet with other writers to discuss common problems, successes and goals."

When the Long Beach group, after several weeks, began to overflow its meeting room in a church, the board of directors of Douglass House Foundation decided to take over a house within the central area of Long Beach as Workshop headquarters. To retain its original goal — providing opportunity for the black community — it was necessary that the workshop be located within that area.

That was where the Rolling Hills seniors came in. With snap and water, brooms and brushes, paint and paneling they proceeded to convert a dim, sagging, dirty and neglected old house into a trim, neat and clean meeting place for black and white writers.

They didn't work alone. Members of the Long Beach Workshop, students from California State College at Long Beach and Long Beach Poly worked along with them. Spotted and stained walls were painted in bright tones of "pumpkin" and "orange ice." Jim Bell installed paneling and built bookcases and seating. The seniors mowed and edged the yard, pulled weeds and trimmed shrubbery. They planted roses, groundcovers and blooming plants.

In the kitchen, a group of girls scrubbed down walls, scraped the grease-encrusted stove and killed cockroaches.

"It wasn't pleasant — all those bugs," one girl remarked. "But I'm not just sitting at home talking about how awful things are. I'm here doing something about it."

Others agreed. "I'm not so good on painting and things like that," said Papadakis. "But I know I can really contribute something outside." And he proceeded to clear flower beds.

The communication worked both ways. A workshop member, bearded and beaded, said, "I never would have believed these kids from affluent homes would actually get down and dig in all this dirt." Then, he added, "They're just like the rest of us — they see something to be done and they do it. They don't just sit around talking about it."

Koch is very proud of his seniors. "On their own, with no hinting, suggesting or pushing from faculty or advisers these kids decided to do this." He rested on his shovel for a reflective moment. "One of their guidelines is 'Open the doors of communication.'" He gestured to where two teen-agers, one black and one white, were trying to decide on the exact placement of a rosebush. "They're doing it."

What's next? Beginning immediately, the Long Beach Workshop for the Arts and Humanities (the official title) will be open seven days a week, at various hours, for the benefit of the members. The house will provide a place for writing, supplies, reference books and other writers with whom to discuss current projects. Instruction will be available.

At present, the bi-racial membership of approximately 70 ranges from a young journalist of 17 to a senior novelist in his 70s. Backgrounds of the individual, range from students, office workers and teachers to senior citizens, iron workers, housewives, carpenters and drop-outs.

"This workshop is open to everyone," notes Eleanor Shibley. "We want anyone who wants to write. There are no dues or fees; only the obligation to write."

Workshop administration and instruction, soon to be under the direction of CSELB instructor Lance Jeffers, includes the whole field of writing. Says Jeffers: "We want poets, short story writers, novelists, essayists, playwrights and journalists. And eventually we hope to expand to include a dramatic workshop and a film workshop."

Spratt explained what happens at a typical workshop meeting. "After a casual business meeting," he said, "individuals within the group read their writing aloud. The other members of the group then offer constructive criticism and suggest possible markets if the reader is interested in selling. In this way the writers hope to improve their writing to a professional level."

Next Sunday (June 23) the Long Beach Writers' Workshop will show its new home, the Douglass House Center, to the public. An open house, including a poetry reading, will be attended by many interested persons. Schulberg and his wife, actress Geraldine Brooks; Judge Harry Schaffer; and members of Friends of the Long Beach Library and the Long Beach Regional Arts Council are among those expected to be in attendance. A dinner, featuring "soul food" (genuine old South cooking) will be available.

The center, at 1021 Lime Ave., will be open from 3 until 8 p.m. All interested persons and prospective members are invited to attend. Further information may be obtained by calling the Douglass House Center at 432-2819.

The Writers' Workshop is a community endeavor for community benefit; and the support of the community is vital.

"Our best function," summed up Spratt, "is to help break the 'Sound Barrier.' And by building communication and involvement through this workshop we also build for ourselves — pride, character and unity."

TOP-RATED SANDWICHES

Over 200 million sandwiches are consumed by Americans away from home every day. This concept of eating meat between two slices of bread is now two centuries old.

Which are the sandwiches American's most frequently order when "eating out?"

In a recent survey 22 varieties of sandwiches were listed. Each person questioned was asked which of these 22 sandwiches he or she would be most likely to order.

The top-rated sandwiches were hot roast beef, bacon and lettuce, hamburgers, ham and cheese.

Tot Making Progress by 'Brain Patterning'

By Louise Meter

Mmes. Leon Crawford, Dennis Toohey and Walter Harvie help Mrs. E. C. Offer (right) in working with her brain-damaged child, Kathy.

A YOUNG Cypress mother has holes in the knees of her denim stretch pants.

They were worn there through persistent, daily floor crawling beside her 4-year-old daughter, Kathy.

Mrs. E. C. Offer, Kathy's mother, has trouble keeping her weight above 100 pounds. The grueling regimen of each day leaves no time for simple "girl talk" with other young mothers; for the coffee-break, club-meeting-matinee schedule enjoyed by many of her peers.

Who cares? Kathy can talk! Kathy can run, and play and ride her tricycle! For Mrs. Offer, these are the sweetest sounds and sights this side of heaven.

The little girl, who was left with brain damage at birth, whose I.Q. was estimated only a year ago at 70, is making strides as the result of "brain patterning" known as Doman-Delacato Therapy.

Her story is one of untiring, loving service of friends and neighbors, including 24 Cypress Woman's Club Juniors. They have worked with Kathy five days a week for several minutes a day since last June under chairmanship of Mrs. Walter Harvie, head of the club's health committee.

Also assisting far beyond the call of duty are 10 devoted neighbors headed by Mrs. Sue Crawford, a tireless, loyal woman who is scheduling chairman for their group.

The women assist with the most difficult part of the therapy — the patterning which simulates creeping, crawling, sitting and walking. Five people are required four times a day for eight-minute periods. They work Kathy's arms, legs and head in a rhythmic, almost staccato movement, in a tireless, relentless effort.

Sometimes, Kathy herself takes over, chortling with joy, making her own movements. Again she may dissolve in momentary tears, frustrated because she cannot get down off the big counter to play.

This, then, is the Doman-Delacato system, named after the team of Glenn Doman, a physiotherapist; his brother, Robert J. Doman, M.D.; and Carl H. Delacato, Ed. D., psychologist and educator specializing in remedial reading.

To simplify an explanation of their method of "treating" retarded children — they seek to bypass or remove barriers to learning which exist in the brains of some children. They "treat the brain, not the symptoms," they say, with highly formalized, concentrated patterns of exercise, including creeping and crawling. These exercises are designed to build up a child's "neurological organization," that is, the step-by-step development of his central nervous system.

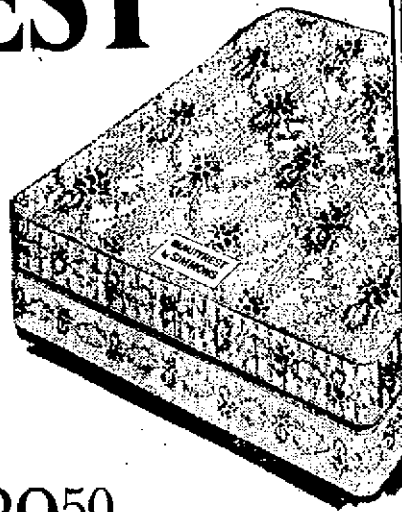

Normal babies are known to "organize themselves," from wiggling to crawling

The Konraths' 'True Home'

By Ellen Krec

DESCRIBED as a "true home" by a neighbor, the single-level, Salem model residence in Rossmoor is happily filled by the Gerald D. Konrath family of five plus poodle, two Siamese cats, a rabbit and two goldfish.

As a drilling engineer, Konrath started his own business two years ago. After eight years of living in Rossmoor, interior changes came slightly to a halt while the new business flourished.

Location wasn't particularly important to the Hawthorne-based Konraths when they decided to purchase a home, since drilling is a move-about business. Rossmoor was the happy choice; it suited the budget as well as the family size.

"We started to do our own decorating and discovered our first three purchases, three tables, cost about $1,000 and we hurriedly called for help!" says Mrs. Konrath. Ruth Gallo-way was their selection for assistance with the interior decorating.

Initially, striped carpeting had been installed and the decorator incorporated accents that would be handsome with the original carpeting; but when the budget permitted a change of carpeting to moss green, the result would be stunning.

The living room has shown a complete change from provincial to elegant, the choice of the Konraths who felt this would better represent their growth.

A single piece of the former living room furniture remains . . . the 12-year-old, in-perfect-condition French provincial curved sofa. The subtle blending of the beige and orange print in the predominantly green and white room shows how easily change can be made by careful planning.

Dropped ceiling tops formal living room.
 —Staff Photos by CURT JOHNSON

A clip ceiling above the white-painted brick fireplace also drops over two window seats.

Short off-white draperies with moss green swags meet with green cushions and bolsters in a complete window treatment.

A conventional white with gold table serves the sofa and two green velvet swivel chairs, forming a comfortable conversational unit.

BACKING THE curve of the sofa is a drop chain lamp in a gold leaf and prism design. The identical design forms a tall white shaded lamp on the antique green credenza. The credenza was custom fitted with a music system, then highlighted by a massive gold framed mirror and orange silk high back chair.

The birch buffet divides the living room and dining areas.

The dining room still retains the "leftover maple furniture" including a shuttered hutch, oval table and Windsor chairs. Giving the table a "new" look is the gold felt to-the-floor tablecloth.

At one end of the dining area the room changes to a family section with woven orange, green and pink sofa under a window draped with antique white satin and boxed with a companion striped valance.

Great for small snacks is the Mediterranean, formica topped low coffee table.

Green marble wallpaper covers a full wall incorporating both rooms. All-birch cabinets surround the wide open kitchen and an island stove in soft green is the color cue for the wall and ceiling floral wallpaper.

The window above the sink has a "most practical" vinyl shade with applied flowers matching the wallpaper. The same trim tops the valance and Mrs. Konrath added a low natural shutter to the base of the window for further privacy.

The kitchen accessories are mostly children-made. The Konraths chose to make this truly a family home by using spice shelves, recipe book holders and ceramic gifts from all the children.

The cherry carpeted white painted master bedroom has a single panel of red and gold wallpaper backing the colonial maple bed.

A Boston rocker serves comfortably for seating and a corner was cleared to make room for a desk. Without a home office, this is a must and both Konraths find the space ideally quiet for the necessary book work.

A large casement window may be opened to enjoy the L-shaped swimming pool enclosed by a grapestake fence, bordered by a curved red brick succulent-filled planter.

Konrath admits he loves working in the yard but his business demands allow little time, so 14-year-old Dan inherited the responsibility.

"Our favorite pleasure is swimming, although water-skiing is a close second," says Mrs. Konrath.

Dan has his own hand, they practice in the garage and his particular instrument is the guitar.

Debbie, 12, is "always busy." She likes all family things, is very partial to horses at the present time but finds most of her activities involve visiting and friends.

Lori, at 7, still plays house and follows her big brother and sister.

An adjoining master bath reflects the color scheme of the bedroom with red fringed shades at the high windows in the white-walled dressing area.

Bi-fold doors, white painted, cover the washer and dryer in the hall leading to the children's bedrooms.

The ideally situated children's bath opens to the patio and does double duty from the pool.

Vinyl "child-proof" wall-cover combines irregular plaid with bouquets of nasturtiums on the walls of the cheerful room. Shades were again used, this time with the vinyl paper appliques on stock vinyl shades and finally trimmed with pink fringe.

The hall corner was put to excellent use as storage. As the wall curved, shelves were added top to bottom and the girls find it the perfect display storage for dolls, books and music — all the overflow from the room they share.

Little girl nursery figures in pink and blue dot the walls of the room shared by the girls.

Twin beds are capped with tiers of blue ruffles and cottage curtains, ink-trimmed, fill the double window above a window seat.

Blue with white French provincial is the furniture design and the Konraths feel the choice will grow with the girls making only color and fabric changes as the need arises.

Dan's room is strictly his own design. Everything he enjoys, uses or requires has been put to use. With a typical boy's humor he topped his plaid-covered bed with a three-foot straw hat. He does drafting for fun, so the drafting board rests under the plaid cafe-curtained window.

His air, land and sea wallpaper is highlighted by his personal collection of psychedelic cards and Charlie Brown pennants.

Much to the family's dismay, a store owner made Dan a present of a four-foot whiskey bottle which he proudly displays.

A red desk and chair, several goldfish on the maple chest, a pinball machine and his music give this room its color.

The exterior of the home reflects the same warm personality as its inhabitants.

Cozy low shake roofs drop above blue scalloped windows in the white brick and stucco provincial facade.

Planting gives a curving privacy from neighbors with tall juniper, bottle brush and podocarpus growing closely together in a hedge-like treatment. Low geraniums border the windows with plantings of flax, ivy and Natal plum outlining the driveway.

Dan's den has useful, funny collections.

A Light, Bright Luncheon

By Mildred K. Flanary

Southland Magazine Home Economics Editor

A LONG ABOUT this time of year, a light, bright luncheon for a few friends is almost as refreshing as the first daffodil.

The delectable heart of the menu is California Avocado Escabeche — a just-ripe avocado half, filled with a zesty, colorful fish mixture which can be quickly made ahead and chilled. The velvety California avocado, with its melting green and yellow interior, is guaranteed to bring a touch of zest to even the most weary appetite.

How do you know when the avocado is eating-ripe? Hold the fruit gently in your hands. If it yields to firm pressure, it is ready to eat. Or stick a toothpick into the stem end of the fruit. If it slides in and out easily, the avocado is just right for the table.

With California Avocado Escabeche, you might serve a light, hot dish such as Cheese Souffle. Incidentally, an extremely easy and dependable way to produce an elegant cheese souffle is by thawing several packages of frozen souffle and baking the contents in your own souffle dish.

CALIFORNIA AVOCADO ESCABECHE

- 2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
- 1/2 cup olive oil
- 2 packages (10 ounces each) frozen fillet of sole
- 1 large onion, sliced
- 1/4 tsp. crumbled oregano
- 1/4 cup lime juice
- 1 small tomato, chopped
- 1/4 cup chopped green pepper
- Salt and Tabasco
- 4 California avocados
- Lemon juice

Saute garlic in olive oil until golden. Cut frozen fish into half-inch-thick crosswise slices. Add fish, onion, oregano and lime juice to skillet. Cover and simmer over low heat for 5 minutes or until fish just turns white. Do not overcook. Cool in broth. Add tomato, green pepper, salt and Tabasco to taste. Chill. When ready to serve, halve avocados lengthwise and twist to separate halves. Remove seed and brush cut surfaces with lemon juice. Do not peel halves. Place avocado halves in individual serving dishes and fill with fish mixture. Garnish with lemon wedges. May be served as an appetizer. Serves eight.

COFFEE MOUSSE

- 2 cups whipping cream
- 1-3 cup ground coffee

- 1/2 cup extra-fine sugar
- Few grains salt
- 1 tsp. vanilla

Combine 1/2 cup cream and ground coffee in top of double boiler. Heat over boiling water about 12 minutes or until coffee flavor has permeated cream. Strain through fine sieve. Whip remaining cream until it mounds softly. Fold in sugar, salt, vanilla and coffee mixture. Freeze in refrigerator trays until firm without stirring. Serves eight.

"SHORT ORDER" TIPS

Have a nice ripe California avocado on hand?

Here's a good way to enjoy it. Peel and mash it well. Add half a teaspoon of salt, a pinch of oregano, two teaspoons of vinegar and a tablespoon of chopped green onions. Mix well and chill. Makes a little less than a cup of dip to spread on crisp crackers.

A favored way to use California avocados is to cut them in half and use them as a cup or base for curries or spicy seafood mixtures or even chili con carne. They are delectable also mashed and mixed with seasoned chopped chicken and mayonnaise, for example. Try it.

Recipe of the Week

MRS. FLORENCE LAMB, 2059 Cedar Ave., Apt. 5, Long Beach, is the winner of the $5 weekly prize.

BAKED AVOCADOS

- 3 ripe avocados
- 1 lb. can red salmon
- 1 cup mayonnaise
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 2 tbsps. chopped green pepper
- 2 tbsps. lemon juice
- 2 tbsps. margarine or butter
- Sour cream

Split avocados and discard seed. Remove all skin and bone from salmon and flake it. Saute onion and green pepper in margarine until soft. Add to salmon and mayonnaise. Divide and fill cavities in avocados. Bake at 350 for 20 to 25 minutes. Remove from oven and top each avocado with a dollop of sour cream.

Crabmeat, shrimp or lobster can be used instead of salmon. Serves 6.

What's your favorite recipe? For each recipe published in this space, Southland will pay $5. Men are urged to submit their recipes along with the ladies. Send yours, with name and address, to Recipe Contest Editor, Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90801.

DON'T JUST pot it, plan it!

Environmental pottery scaled to size, textured, brightly colored, glazed and unglazed has taken the small step after the giant step.

Architectural Pottery is a trend as well as the name of a fine firm of ceramic and fiberglass designers with headquarters in Los Angeles.

The giant step has been the use of massive, or grouped, sculptured and molded flower or tree containers used to complete the look of landscaping in the architectural scheme of today.

You have no doubt been aware of the changes in season of pots surrounding civic buildings... bright flowers appear to grow overnight, making museum trips an exterior pleasure, too.

Garden sculpture gives a soft link between the thoroughfare and building.

The sudden shrinkage of land, condominium dwellers and mini-patio owners all have created a need for dime-size gardens.

The gap between the geranium plant on the window sill and the beautifully designed small garden is as wide as the individual growth and education allows. Money helps!

Consider the poll that tells us a family moves every seven years except in California where it narrows to six, and you can see the value of pots and plants!

HOW TO bring this down to family size has been the research project of Architectural Pottery which, with unusual practicality, even geared the designs to nursery pot size for quick change.

For instance, if you wanted a massive pot for the patio or entry to hold a striking shrub or tree, there are exquisite containers that will hold one-gallon or five-gallon plants just as they come from the nursery.

For the rotating blooms in season, the containers hold the little plastic pots used by most nurseries. So, for under 50 cents a pot, you can fill a beautiful container with several pots each time the season changes.

High-low applications of grouping pots come with the use of 3x3 redwood posts cemented into the earth then topped with a flange-bottom bowl. Several heights are used and usually groups of three or more are a good balance.

The flange is applied to the bowl bottom with epoxy. A hole is bored in the top of the post in the same size. Drop the flange stem in the hole, plant your pot and you have an immediate garden.

The same treatment is possible with pots on matching pedestals. Naturally, this would be better indoors, although it is most attractive on a deck or patio.

According to the president of the firm, Rita Lawrence, the crisp shape of architectural pottery allows it to be used in many ways.

Wide ceramic bowls in clear primary colors change from punch containers to chilling food over shaved ice and, inevitably, to flowerers.

Containers for instant flower arrangements come from just a rooted daisy plant, giving, according to Miss Lawrence, "a pin cushion arrangement."

IF YOU LIKE "mad" arrangements, there is always a handful of spaghetti in a narrow topped bowl waving in a wheat-like way.

For dried flowers in a free design, egg-shaped containers with narrow openings provide the natural look most appealing.

Matt finish or unglazed pottery are the two most common, but an old craft rapidly is returning to favor in reproduction fired stoneware.

According to William Hertel, the man in command of the Los Angeles showroom, this is a university-pioneered ancient method of making pottery. Each piece becomes one of a kind because of hand design.

Warm earth tones with sophisticated-primitive designs make this particular pottery valuable as well as decorative.

It isn't important to Californians, but there is pottery for the cold-cold climates. It's called Duraclay and it won't crack with the first freeze. So they may not have our wonderful weather in the East, but they can have our pots!

There is no formula for size of plant in pot. I know there are many schools of flower design that give a wide variety of flower inches per pot size, but then they usually say "eye appeal is the ultimate answer." So if you like it — it looks good in the space and the container — why worry?

Tall containers are best in narrow spaces, although a small container could give the same effect if you used a pedestal or table.

THE INDOOR pots do not need a hole for drainage. Actually this isn't necessary out of doors either, but it is more practical with a hole in the container bottom. Without a hole, just add a layer of gravel or charcoal and drop in the nursery pot. Keep two or three plants in the same size to rotate as needed. Most house plants need some time out of doors for rejuvenation; don't let them get too tired before you move them.

We have done this for years with Christmas trees. It distresses me to see a tree cut and then thrown away, so we buy a four-foot evergreen and put it in a pretty white pot. The tree moves inside in December, no problems with drying out... we decorate it and move it outside after the holidays. They usually last about five years before we plant them in the yard and start over.

Drooping-leaf plants seem to be most dramatic in containers with height. Inexpensive and easy-to-grow succulents lend themselves to flat bowls.

In the tall field there are cylinders, trumpet shapes, inverted hourglass and even the egg.

One of the most practical uses for pots is in a watch-your-step area, a not-noticeable step or glass expanse. Prettier and much better than a broken leg!

Don't just fill up a pot with a mass of growth. Skeletal shapes can be delightful and create a sculpture within a sculpture or, as Miss Lawrence says, "not just a plant in a pot but a total sculpture!"

Mix your planters with natural elements along with garden sculpture. Combining pools or fountains with planters interspersed with pots of needed color or size can be fun and fairly easy to do. Remember, the best part is you can move the pots according to garden requirements and add anything you think will balance the area. You don't have to wait and hope it will grow. Best of all, you can take it with you.

What's Your Question on Decorating?

By Elizabeth Hodgkin

Do you have a question on decorating? For an answer (only in this column) by a member of the American Institute of Interior Designers, send it to Interior Design Editor, Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90801.

Q. Is it wrong to hang framed family photographs in the living room?

A. If hung with imagination, family photographs can be hung in the living room. For the most part, they are more at home in rogues' gallery arrangement in the hall, hung floor to ceiling. Family rooms, studies and bedrooms which are more intimate rooms are normally the best for family photographs — family record photographs of the children growing up, pets, records of travel, etc.

If used in the living room, the framing of your family photographs is most important. First, the photographs themselves must be framed in natural, white or pastel fabric mats and simple gold frames to give them dignity. Toothless Susan, aged 5 on the photographer's pony, should be relegated to the study or hall, along with the photo of yourself with your day's catch of fish.

Q. I am learning to upholster and gradually will do each piece in my living room. How do I go about choosing fabrics?

A. First, before you buy any fabric, work out your basic color scheme; then, as you finish one piece you will know what texture and color the next piece of furniture will require.

Remember, let one or two colors dominate. Any colors you add to these will be your accents. Beware of the confusion of too many colors.

Watch out for too much pattern; let one dominate and the others be subtle or plain fabrics.

For wear, choose firmly woven fabrics. Cats, dogs, and shoe buckles call for fabric treated with latex backing to insure anchored threads.

LITTLE KATHY IS MAKING STRIDES

to creeping to walking. It is believed by proponents of the Doman-Delacato method that the stimulation could impose the patterns on the undamaged parts of the brain, awaken its levels in proper sequence.

In addition to the patterning, Kathy is on a six-hour-a-day schedule of specialized care which her mother executes with painstaking regularity, seven days a week. Because sensitivity to different textures, to the "feel" of things, is important, Kathy's little body must be rubbed with damp salt several times a day. Sand box play adds to this experience. Hours are spent crawling through a rocking contraption, and in speech effort.

It was June 1967 when Cypress Juniors began helping with Kathy. Her mental age then was 2 years, 2 months; her chronological age 3 years. She had a vocabulary of two words. By September, her mental age had advanced to 3 years and 2 months. Her vocabulary was estimated at 60 words, and was understandable if not spontaneous.

Today the words sometimes tumble from her lips. She converses with her little friends, makes her needs known at home. A recent visit to the Doman-Delacato Institute at San Diego indicated great progress. The patterning was increased from five to eight minutes each time.

Kathy rides tricycle.

The way is long, hard and tiring. There are no holidays. Undeviating discipline for mother, child and helpers must be sternly kept.

Kathy must wear a little plastic face mask for periods of breathing to increase her intake of carbon dioxide and send an additional supply of blood to her brain.

At the end of each patterning period friends return to their own homes, their own children, the task accomplished. There is only Mrs. Offer and Kathy, and, with late afternoon, the return of Daddy to help with final rituals of bath and exercise.

In hundreds of homes up and down Orange County, young mothers sigh, weary with normal child care. They may turn to husbands, recounting the difficulties of their days.

But in the Offer home in Cypress a slim slip of a woman, may put fingers ruefully into the holes at her knees, then lift her face to her man with shining eyes.

"Know what?" she asks. "Kathy said a brand new word today."

COIN ROUNDUP

$2.50 Coin Worth $25,000 at Sale

By Maurice M. Gould

COINS WORTH a great deal of money excite all of us and I want to tell you about one which is being auctioned in Encino.

It is the 1841 quarter eagle or $2.50 gold piece. It is called "The Little Princess," an appropriate nickname for this great royal rarity.

In 60 years this coin has appeared at auction approximately six times and the opinion of the experts is that possibly only six specimens are in existence.
This coin is much rarer than the 1804 silver dollar and other rarities which have been highly publicized. According to the standard catalog, this date was made in proof only.

In 1963, in the famed Wolfson sale, a proof brought $15,000 and with the big demand for the rare gold today it is expected that this piece will bring in excess of $25,000.

Remember: it is the Philadelphia Mint which is the extremely rare piece. The $2.50 gold pieces of the same year were also minted in Dahlonega, Ga., which bear the "D" mint mark, and in Charlotte, N.C., which bear the "C" mint mark. While these items are scarce, they are not in the royal category of "The Little Princess." Both the Dahlonega and Charlotte mints produced gold coins only.

"The Little Princess" reminds me of a note I have in my collection called "The Indian Princess."
This note is a rare Confederate piece of paper money in the $5 denomination, issued on Sept. 2, 1861.
The Indian Princess is on the right, with a scene de-

With the great interest in all the paper money, Confederate paper is also one of the fields that has attracted many new collectors.

COINS produced more than 2,000 years ago are considered among the finest examples of artistic work since minting began. The workmanship of the Greek artists, for example, is legendary, and their beautiful silver coinage is eagerly sought after by collectors.

The Greek gods and goddesses are pictured on the beautiful coinage, among the most famous being Zeus, who ruled over gods and men; animals were frequently used, and the Athenian owl is a symbol known to all numismatists.

Even in this early period of recorded history, the Greek victory at the famous battle of Marathon was the occasion for the issuing of a commemorative coin with Athens on the obverse and an owl on the reverse. History is permanently recorded for coin collectors in this manner.

THE WHITMAN Hobby Division of the Western Publishing Co., Inc., the world's largest manufacturer of coin holders and accessories and publishers of various coin books, expresses a great deal of optimism for coin and stamp sales in 1968. It states that hundreds of newcomers have had their collecting appetite whetted by such events as the restoration of mint marks on U.S. coins and the availability of 1968 proof sets, as well as the new sizes and metals which will be used for Canadian coins.

Q—I have a Washington Carver half-dollar dated 1952. What is its value?

A—This is a commemorative coin. More than 2 million of this date were issued, and it is the most common, worth approximately $3.

Q—Has the new Olympic coin of Mexico been released for collectors?

A—The Mexican Olympic coin with a 25-peso denomination, which is equivalent to $2 in the United States, has been released. Three million pieces have been struck.

Soup From Nuts

SURVIVAL ARTS OF THE PRIMITIVE PAUTES. By Margaret M. Wheat. University of Nevada Press, $10.

Margaret Wheat has worked 20 years with the northern Paiutes, and by her understanding, her sense of humor, and a curiosity that would not be stilled, won the acceptance from that proud and reserved people which they gave to few outsiders. Geologist by profession, archeological field worker for the Nevada State Museum, and amateur anthropologist, author Wheat, her camera and her recorder have produced a remarkable study of the techniques by which the people around the shores of lakes that are now extinct managed to survive against a Nature which was not always kind.

Her book is one to which no professional anthropologist would be ashamed to sign his name; her manner of telling what she found out is lively, but not to the point of "talking down" to the reader.

Here is the year-round life-cycle of the desert and marsh Indians on the eastern side of the Sierra Nevadas, from spring, through summers of abundance, and into the winters when awesome snowstorms raged.

She describes, among many matters, the pine-nut time of the fall, the Paiutes' big time of the year, when "religion was combined with play, work with happiness." The Paiutes observed a set ritual for the gathering of the pine nuts.

The author gives a memorable description of the pine-nut prayer dance, which began at sundown and lasted all night. "The Paiute Indians believed that great power lay in songs and dancing, so this was one of their ways of praying." The complicated hand game was an important part of pine-nut time. "This was a gambling sport in which they often bet everything they owned — their blankets, baskets and their beads." The hand games often went on for five days without a stop.

The harvesting of the pine nuts; the making of boats out of cattail and tule; the making of duck decoys; cordage (the Paiutes lacked nails and bolts, and "tied their world together" with cords. They "tied the tules to make boats, and cattails to make houses . . ."); ingenious ways of fishing and harpooning; building houses; making of articles from soft fibers; these and many other matters vital to the Paiutes' survival are described.

From soup to nuts? The Paiutes reversed the process and made soup from pine nuts. They prepared gruel from cattail seeds. Sagebrush was the textile for their clothes. These are among the many fascinating techniques of the Paiutes described by author Wheat. — N.H.

And Try Not to Miss...

A MONOTONOUS LANDSCAPE. Seven stories by Gunter Herburger. Harcourt, Brace and World, $4.95.

Herburger, a member of West Germany's dominant writing Group 47, to which such authors as Gunter Grass and Eusebius Johnson belong, portrays the cruelty in the German psyche beneath the facade of cozy prosperity. Underlying the decent, average citizen-ness of his skiing champions, actors, dentists, real estate agents, office workers, is a sinister undercurrent in stories which are sometimes funny, sometimes macabre, sometimes both.

CULTURE AND SOCIETY. By George Peter Murdock. University of Pittsburgh Press, $7.

Twenty-four essays covering a wide range in the field of cultural anthropology, including a fascinating account of how the natives of the Caroline island of Truk, once under Japanese, now under American control, substituted baseball for the war that was once their favorite pastime. It was the Japanese, after they took over Truk from the Germans, who first introduced the Trukese to baseball.

A CROCODILE HAS ME BY THE LEG. Edited by Leonard W. Doob. Illustrated by Simon Irén Wangboje. Walker, $2.95.

These are poems handed down from generation to generation in Africa; poems about mother and child; about a child losing his first tooth; about laziness and hunger; about love and hunting; about animals, about the maiden who cannot find a husband. They are simple and direct, and uniformly beautiful.

ARCTIC BIOLOGY. Edited by Henry P. Hansen. Oregon State University Press, $6.50.

Scientists with many years of experience in the Arctic write in this book of the Far North's biological resources — the plant life, the solid productivity, the wildlife. Maps, charts and photographs illustrate the book.

Two Squirrels Will Do

THE MAIN INGREDIENTS in Mrs. Durant's Brunswick stew (nine quarts) are 1 hen and 2 pounds of stew beef. But, we are parenthetically told, 2 squirrels and 2 pounds of veal are excellent additions.

Mrs. R. F. Durant herself, of Burlington, N.C., furnishes her Brunswick stew recipe for Marion Brown's "Southern Cook Book" (University of North Carolina Press, $6.95).

This is a unique cook book in a number of ways, and one of them is that it's published by a university press outstanding for both books that are scholarly and others that are folksy, in that they deal with the folkways of North Carolina and adjacent areas. The "Southern Cook Book" often falls into the folksy category.

There are recipes fancy, and recipes plain. There is a French toast, for example, called Lost Bread, which is an old Creole dish, made in New Orleans, and sprinkled with sugar and cinnamon or served as hot toast to be garnished with bacon, chicken livers, etc. A St. Petersburg, Fla., woman is responsible for that one.

Cheese and rice fondue, also from Louisiana; French fried asparagus, Louisiana Asparagus Shortcake; baked grits Sherry; zucchini pancakes, and a seeming myriad of chicken dishes are to be found here. And you just have to try Cinnamon Baked Tomatoes!

Boy of Canton, S.D.

AN AMERICAN GENIUS: The Life of Ernest O. Lawrence. By Herbert Childs. Dutton, $12.95.

The man who invented the cyclotron was born in 1901 in a small town in South Dakota, Canton, a shipping point for corn and poultry, whose population today is only 2,518. Ernest Orlando Lawrence, winner of the 1939 Nobel Prize in physics for his studies of atomic structure and radiation in biology and medicine, received his early education in country schools. (After studying at St. Olaf College in Northfield, Minn., he was to receive his B.A. from the University of South Dakota, his M.A. from the University of Minnesota and the University of Chicago, his Ph.D. from Yale, and honorary Sc.D. degrees from South Dakota, Princeton, Yale and Stevens Institute of Technology.)

Herbert Childs has immersed himself in Lawrence's correspondence and his papers, and has interviewed some 800 people in many walks of life who knew the physicist. Without oozing hero worship, he has written a dramatic account of one of the greatest scientists of all time, a founding father of the nuclear age, who in 1931 invented the cyclotron for smashing atoms by hurling high voltages of electricity into their nuclei and freeing the atomic energy.

Coming from Yale, where he had been an assistant professor of physics, Lawrence became an associate professor at UC Berkeley in 1928. The names of UC and Lawrence became, from then on, inseparable. It was here that he supervised the building of the university's first (80-ton) cyclotron in 1933, its second, 225-ton cyclotron in 1938, and its third in 1942, as well as numerous other cyclotrons for the government in World War II.

His was a vital role in the development of the atomic bomb. His work in radiation, in biology and medicine has led to the prolongation of life for many.

Under his directorship of the UC Radiation Laboratory, it drew many of the world's finest scientific brains. At his death in 1958 it had a staff of over 5,000.

The new Lawrence Hall of Science, at which methods of scientific education are ever being improved, honors his memory. So does the new chemical element, Lawrencium, discovered by younger scientists at the "Rad Lab."

"Thus," concludes author Childs, "in education, in men, in the ever-greater accelerators, even in the Table of Elements, some indestructible entity of Ernest Lawrence continues." — N.H.

MEDICINE AND YOU

Foods May Cause Allergic Shock

By Ben Zinser

Southland Magazine Medical-Science Editor

LIFE-THREATENING allergic reactions to common foods have been reported by physicians at Northwestern University.

Among the foods causing serious, sudden shock were halibut, rice, potato, shrimp, milk, a cereal mix, a tangerine, Brazil nuts, the pinto bean and garbanzo, or chick pea.

Explosive allergic shock occurred in 13 patients admitted to the university's hospitals last year. And in all but two, the cause of the shock was traced to a certain food.

Patients were between 17 and 52 years old except for a five-month-old child found allergic to milk. Reactions, described as acute and potentially fatal, occurred after a meal, sometimes while the victim was still at the table.

The report is in Medical World News, newsmagazine for physicians.

FEARS THAT the so-called "cold knife" may cause tissue damage in cataract operations are unfounded, a well-known eye surgeon says. In fact, use of the cold probe, or cryoextractor, is safer than other methods of lens removal, says Dr. John G. Bellows of Chicago in a report in Pacific Medicine and Surgery.

A DOCTOR SUGGESTS that smallpox vaccinations may sometimes play a role in the onset of cancer.

Dr. Willard L. Marmelzat of Beverly Hills, in a report in Archives of Dermatology, describes 24 patients with malignant tumors originating in smallpox vaccination scars.

Dr. Marmelzat says the period of time between vaccination and appearance of the tumor varied greatly among the patients.

The possible role of vaccinia virus — that found in the smallpox vaccine — is unknown, he says. But he suggests that there's a possible causative association between vaccinations and malignant disease in vaccination scars.

DOCTORS NOW HAVE added proof that obesity places a heavy work load on the heart. Autopsies of nine patients who weighed over 300 pounds showed that all had increased heart weight and enlargement of the heart's main pumping muscle.

The research was done at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Houston.

FOLLOWING is the position on marijuana held by the Council on Mental Health and the Committee on Alcoholism and Drug Dependence of the American Medical Association:

1. Marijuana is a dangerous drug. Persons who prepare, distribute or sell this drug should be prosecuted.
2. Current legal penalties for possession for personal use are harsh and unrealistic.
3. Medical treatment is indicated for persons who become seriously involved with the use of this drug.

WITH THE EXCEPTION of defective vision, illness is not a major contributor to automobile accidents, according to a report in British Medical Journal. A number of studies show that the incidence of illness, whether sudden or chronic, is low as a cause of road accidents.

QUESTION in British Medical Journal: How long may penicillin tablets be stored at ordinary room temperature without losing their potency?

Replies a journal consultant: Benzyl penicillin will keep for about three years if stored in a cool place (not a refrigerator) and if tightly sealed. If a room is warm, it would not be advisable to keep them longer than a year.

Penicillin V tablets are more stable and thus should keep for about three years at ordinary room temperature.

A MEDICATION widely used in the treatment of peptic ulcers has been found able to inhibit strontium absorption in humans.

The substance is an antacid, aluminum phosphate gel.

Strontium-90, a radioactive substance in nuclear fallout, can cause bone cancer.

Experiments with tracer doses of radiostrotrium show that strontium absorption is inhibited by an average of 87 per cent by the antacid.

James G. Terrill Jr., director of the National Center for Radiological Health, says that aluminum phosphate would prove most useful in protecting human health against a rise in strontium-90 levels.

FEVER DOESN'T always subside right away in tuberculosis patients who begin anti-TB drugs, two New York doctors report.

Fever may last for weeks, even months, in patients who are taking these drugs, according to a report in the American Review of Respiratory Diseases.

A PATIENT cured of oral cancer and who continues to smoke may develop a second cancer, a health official warns.

Dr. Naham C. Cons of the Bureau of Dental Health of the New York State Health Department reports that 21 of 65 patients who continued to smoke developed a second case of oral cancer within six years.

Included will be 10 Terrier clubs, and among breeds will be Airedale, Bedlington, Fox Terrier, Kerry Blue, Lakeland, Miniature Schnauzer, Scottish Terrier, Skye, Welsh Terrier, and West Highland White.

The West Highland White Terrier-puppy pictured is "Dennis the Menace" around home, but actually Merryhart Special Edition owned by Jim and Neoma Eberhardt, Merryhart Kennels, Santa Ana. He is the 5th Westie owned by Merryhart to take a Best Puppy in Match at an all-breed match of 400 or more dogs.

The Westie is one of our most popular Terriers, a merry, rugged, small dog with an appealing baby face. He may be an offshoot of old-fashioned Cairns, but he has a charm all of his own.

Mrs. Eberhardt was the first person to inform me of Orange County Kennel Association, an organization to aid and protect kennels, provide assistance to governmental agencies in establishing proper standards relating to dogs. Anyone interested in attending a meeting, and perhaps joining the association, may contact Sandra Tetzlaff, 7162 Kermore Lane, Stanton.

Here are a few statistics of Orange County which prove just how popular dogs are in one area. Multiply them by all counties, and you will see that pet keeping is the most popular hobby in the nation.

So far in 1968, the Orange County Pound has sold 70,000 dog tags, an increase of 5,000 over 1967. At $4 each, this income amounts to $280,000. Since the pound is only able to cover, through door-to-door canvassing, about 65 per cent of all areas in the county, the total dog population there is more around 108,000.

The cost of feeding an average sized dog, according to information from leading dog food manufacturers, is slightly over 24c per day. Based on this figure, dog owners alone in Orange County spend $25,920 each day on pet food! Annually, there is well over $9,125,000.

At last reading, the Orange County yellow pages listed 85 veterinary hospitals, an increase in the past five years of over 200 per cent. There are 95 Doctors of Veterinary Medicine listed.

All totaled, it is estimated that the pet business brings to Orange County an industrial worth of at least 20 million dollars.

L.B. Plans Archery Range

The Long Beach Recreation Department is blueprinting a 20-target range to be ready by the summer of 1969 at El Dorado Park East north of Spring Street and east of the San Gabriel River.

At present 3,500 trees are being planted in the area, said Carl Bartlett of the planning division.

Plans are also being developed for an eventual night field archery range.

Melva smiles a bit ruefully. Her target is not bad, but she usually places her arrows in a tighter group.

An historic event has occurred that will effect all men who are sincerely interested in footwear style. Flagg Bros. Shoe Store has moved! They are no longer in a department of Holiday Shoes but have ventured forth to open their own place in Lakewood Shopping Center. Truly, this new Flagg Bros. Store has some unusual items that every style-conscious man should see!

of strength?" It does not. Melva's bow has a draw of 29 pounds, Bill's a draw of 38 pounds. Hunting bows usually pull from 45 to 60 pounds although some tremendously strong men shoot even heavier bows for big game. For targets the draw could be much less than the Townsends'. Many men, proud of their muscles, buy bows too heavy for them.

Good shooting is not so much strength as complete muscular control. Muscles tremble and disobey until a person learns to command them. That isn't easy.

Archers say that their sport gives them a measure of physical and mental peace. After a session they feel calm and relaxed, and problems that were troubling them no longer seem beyond solution.

The bow and arrow is a deadly weapon, as dangerous as a gun under certain circumstances. Perhaps the responsible use of weapons frees some men of fear and anger. Whatever the psychological reason, archers agree that their archaic sport is good for them.

Return to Wistful Vista

Q. I collect pictures of old radio stars. Where can I get one of Fibber McGee and Molly? P.M., Long Beach.

A. We tuned in on your question and located two pictures of Fibber McGee and Molly played by Jim and Marian Jordan. The Jordans' radio home on Wistful Vista became a byword among listeners in network radio's heyday. Marian Jordan, besides playing Molly, Fibber's long-suffering wife, also did several other roles on the show, including the little girl next door. The husband and wife team introduced Fibber McGee and Molly to radio in 1935. Before that, they had a show called "Smackout." Marian Jordan died of cancer in 1981, but Jim Jordan still is living and divides his time between Hawaii and Los Angeles, explains a spokesman for NBC.

Blind Man's Best Friend

Q. My brother is in Vietnam, and one of his friends in his company was blinded. The guys want to get together to buy him a guide dog. Who should they contact to locate one? L.J., Long Beach.

A. With the help of James B. Garfield, a blind member of the State Board of Guide Dogs for the Blind, TEEN ACTION LINE learned there are 10 recognized guide dog schools in the United States and most of them do not charge the blind person for the guide dog. Garfield says that California is the only state licensing the guide dog schools to insure that both the dogs and their owners are adequately trained. Before a blind person can get a dog in California, he must spend four weeks at the training school, at no cost to him, learning how to care for and handle the dog. The two schools in this area are Eye Dog Foundation, 257 S. Spring St., Los Angeles, 628-3379, and International Guiding Eyes, 5431 Denny Ave., North Hollywood, 763-4786. They provide guide dogs to blind people throughout the nation. We will send you a list of the other schools together with a booklet, "State Services for the Blind in California." You might tell your brother that while there is no need to purchase a guide dog, his outfit may want to make donations to one of the guide dog schools which are non-profit, charitable organizations.

The Fugitives

Q. Who are the 10 most wanted criminals in the United States? And what are their crimes? R.B., Long Beach.

A. A spokesman for the Federal Bureau of Investigation — which issues the list of the 10 most wanted men — says only eight men are on the list now, since two were recently captured. One of these was James Earl Ray, wanted for conspiring to interfere with the constitutional rights of a citizen and unlawful flight to avoid confinement for robbery. Still listed are George Benjamin Williams, wanted for bank robbery, and Charles Lee Harrow, wanted for unlawful flight to avoid prosecution for murder. We'll send you the other six names on the list, and you can see pictures of the fugitives at the U.S. Post Office, Third Street and Long Beach Boulevard. Ray is the prime suspect in the slaying of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. on April 4.

TEENS IN ACTION

WHEN Cathy Rigby spent part of each day swinging nimbly on the monkey bars at her school's playground, she didn't think much about the World Olympic Games.

But that was six or seven years ago. In the next several months, 15-year-old Cathy, who lives with her parents at 11362 Cherry St., Los Alamitos, will have a hard time keeping her mind on anything else.

Cathy is one of 25 female gymnasts who qualified for the Olympic trials, and is ranked fifth in the nation in over-all gymnastic skill by the Amateur Athletics Union. Participating in four events — single bar, beam, uneven bars, free exercise and the vault — Cathy placed second in a recent national meet in Pennsylvania.

As she prepares for the trials in August, Cathy reflects on her skill, and what it means to her:

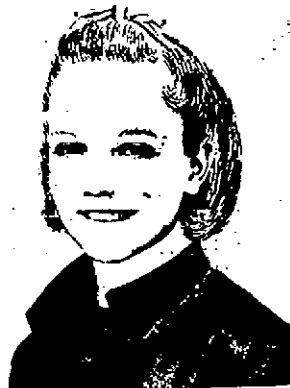

— I got started in this whole thing by just doing what I liked to do — goofing around on parallel bars and other gymnastic equipment. I got pretty good and decided to try joining SCATS (Southern California Acro Team). That's where I learned that I really didn't know much.

— Vaulting and the uneven bars are my favorite events, because they're the fastest moving and probably the most difficult for me. Perfecting a certain event takes all the training you can squeeze in. — I practice five days a week at a gym, and my dad built me some equipment in the back yard to help me on weekends.

— You have to be kind of skinny to be a gymnast. My coach would be pretty horrified if he knew some of the things I'd like to eat.

— Gymnastics is both an individual and a team sport. When SCATS participates in a meet, we all encourage each other. But you're on your own when you're doing your tricks. Competition with athletes who are just a little better than you acts as a spur, a drive to perfect your own particular form.

— Winning is a big thing to me, and accounts for a lot of the reasons I like to participate. If you get into a slump for several meets in a row, it's really discouraging. Then you get even more nervous than usual when waiting on deck, and you're likely to hotch up your trick. The Olympic trials will be exciting. I think if I don't get too excited about it, though, I'll do better.

— Each contestant in a gymnastics meet starts out with 10 points, and is dinged so many points for each mistake he makes. Sometimes a big name will influence a judge too much, I think. Also, older girls tend to look more poised even if they don't have better tricks.

— Czechoslovakian gymnast Vera Caslovskia is the idol of many young participants, myself included. She has tremendous control and develops good, personal trick routines. It seems funny that I'll be competing against her if I make the Olympics.

— I think there should be more stress placed on gymnastics in U.S. schools. In fact, I think the government should actively encourage more sports of all kinds. I'd favor a school system which allowed interested students to spend half their day working out — like they do in Czechoslovakia and Russia. Gymnastics is sort of a neglected sport, but I don't think it would be if kids had more time to find out what it's all about.

WORKSHOP

Smooth Sailing

By Steve Ellingson

A Boat to Build.

WITH THE big boom in boating, both experienced hands and beginning sailors are finding ways to enjoy America's waterways. The pleasures of boating, of course, are no longer the private property of wealthy yachtsmen in large cruisers. Now everybody can go afloat and share the inexpensive pleasures of this happy pastime.

If you haven't taken up sailing, you're missing a lot. It makes no difference whether you're off for an afternoon at the beach, or an extended vacation tour. Your sailboard should be riding along on your car-top carrier, ready for launching. Since it's only ten feet long and four feet wide, it's light and easily transported.

If you're one of those who enjoy skimming along only inches above the water on a slim, speedy sailboard, then this type of water sport is bound to arouse your enthusiasm. You can build the plywood hull in a couple of weeks of your spare time at a low cost. The sails are made from a polyethylene film material because it is very inexpensive and easy to work. All fabrication and repair is done with pressure-sensitive tape of the same plastic.

The plan for building this sailer lists the needed materials along with easy-to-understand, step-by-step directions. It's a comparatively easy project that can be undertaken with success by practically all inexperienced home carpenters who have a few tools.

To obtain the easy-to-follow plan for building the Father and Sons

By Tom Harvill

THE BATTLE is over for today, boys, and you see, I've won again (at least I think I've won) for here I am standing watching you as you lie in your beds asleep. The sun has gone down, finally, but the twilight lingers, for it is summer. You have been sent to bed early, all of you, as I said you would be if you continued on your hopeless course, designed — I felt sure at the time — to aggravate your already overly aggravated old man.

Why do you persist day after day in demanding and expecting my attention and adding such guilt and weariness to my habitually tired and guilt-ridden disposition? When will you learn? How long will you keep it up? Can't you see it's hopeless?

For instance, this afternoon, when I came home and climbed from the car. You knew how I felt — how I feel every evening after fighting the freeway for an endless hour or so — and yet you were waiting on the porch for me and you had the gall to remind me of the promise I'd made to take you somewhere, or do something for you. I don't remember which, but you made me mad. I couldn't think of a single excuse except that I was tired.

Of course, you'd heard that before, hadn't you? I always say I'm tired when you want me to do something. You should have realized from past experience that promises made by me in my moments of rare benevolence are never to be taken seriously. I am a procrastinator, boys, especially where you are concerned, and you should ignore my promises completely. When will you learn?

Yet, somehow, I think you know what you're doing. I suspect you'll never give up hoping that someday, somehow, I'll change. Don't bet on it, boys; I've been this way for as long as you can remember, haven't I?

Still, I think you are all so much wiser than I give you credit for being. Strangely, I think you love me in spite of my shortcomings and inefficiencies as a father and, as I am thinking this, I have a strong compulsion to touch your sleeping faces and rustle your hair. Maybe you will awaken and listen, sleepy-eyed, as I say I'm sorry and ask you to forgive me. Maybe, it would ease my shame and soften this hard knot in my throat.

But, no, I won't do it — you're sleeping so peacefully now — and I suppose you know only too well that tomorrow will soon be here. The sun will rise, as it has always risen, and climb across the sky and descend into twilight and darkness tomorrow evening. I will come home, as I always do and, chances are, the same old thing will happen again.

As I stand here, thinking not only of our battle this afternoon, but of so many battles on so many afternoons, I am aware of this sick feeling of remorse for the slappings and whippings you have received, not because you had particularly done anything wrong, but because you had approached me at a moment when my personal frustration level was high and my patience was low. I regret having to punish you at any time, for I am, at best, a poor disciplinarian; but for the innumerable occasions you've suffered, however slightly, from my "spleen ventings," I am especially remorseful.

Perhaps, boys, since you have not been fathered by a saint, you will one day commit similar atrocities on your children. I wish you luck in avoiding such thoughtless stupidities. Maybe you have received the greater good from your more understanding mother and will be better fathers one day for her contribution.

You know, only too well, I am not the patient, calm, long-suffering tower of strength the books say a good father should be (I wonder if any father ever is), but I love you, boys, whatever I may say or do. I have great faith in you. You are my one sure hope of immortality. You will survive my stormy, sullen moods — and you will climb your trees, skin your elbows, fight amongst yourselves and shed your countless tears, but you will endure and grow and someday you will reach your long-awaited, dubious emancipation — manhood.

And as I bend to kiss each one of you goodnight, I stroke your damp foreheads and tuck your covers tight. If it were not against the rules, I'd shed a tear or two for the love I have for you.

Tomorrow, if I take you aside one by one, as I plan now to do, and tell you, in my gruffly guarded super- or way, that I am sorry for my anger this afternoon, I know even now how quickly you will hug me and kiss my cheek and say, "That's OK, Dad!"

And so, boys, I'm sorry for my many betrayals. Someday, when your greater height dwarfs me, perhaps you will have forgotten the battles we've had (even though I shall not forget them) and the slaps, the angry screams and the nights you were put to bed early, before the sun went down. Maybe by then you will laugh at my broken promises and forget that I was not the father I should have been. And perhaps, best of all, we will be friends. Sleep soundly, my sons.

SURE, I know the days are growing warmer. Soon the hot breath of summer will burst across the land.

I'm also aware that people are supposed to grow less fond of hot soup in June and July. I consider that a myth or at best an unattractive rumor. Obviously the people who believe in such nonsense have never tasted the wondrous soups at Francois' Manhattan, 1909 E. Fourth Street.

This good-looking brick structure, long one of Long Beach's most beloved restaurants, serves its soups in tureen, enabling the guests to have second and third helpings. The policy is obviously a necessity, because the Manhattan's puree Mongol, French onion or cream of tomato are a kind of nectar, so delicious that one cannot stop after savoring a single bowlful.

Jim Haggard, recently promoted to No. 1 chef following the retirement of Johnny Rossi, uses an old-fashioned stock pot to create his aromatic soups. The pot is a gigantic utensil, kept simmering and bubbling night and day. It contains the base from which Jim and his assistants create their soups. The Manhattan features a different soup every day, served with its famed table d'hôte dinner, which has entrees priced from $2.95 and $3.25 to $5.95.

That dinner, emphasizing French, Italian and American specialties, has made the Manhattan a renowned restaurant, not merely in Long Beach, but also in cities as far away as London, Paris and Copenhagen. Many of its guests are foreign shipping officials who visit Long Beach's port, then return to England, France or Denmark with stirring tales of the cuisine they discovered here. Among the entrees are rich, scrumptious lobster thermidor, beef Stroganoff, baked shrimp en shell Manhattan, frog legs saute Meunier, boned squab chicken, roast duckling with orange sauce, stuffed fresh mushrooms, veal piccata, broiled swordfish with lemon butter, plus luscious prime rib and thick chops and steaks.

Jim's continental sauces, made from the Manhattan's prized recipes, add superlative flavor to the dinners, which include tray of hors d'oeuvres, tossed salad or spaghetti, potato or rice, beverage and dessert. The restaurant's staff, directed by manager Van Gasaway, includes a squad of outstandingly efficient waiters.

The Great Migration

A rare look at some 500,000 animals on the move in Africa will be featured in "The Great Migration," launching NBC's new action-adventure series, "Animal Kingdom," at 6:30 p.m. Sunday, Ch. 4.

Bill Burrud is host-narrator for the weekly color-cast series, being filmed both here and abroad.

The premiere opens with a breathtaking view of the hundreds of thousands of animals gathering in the Ngorongoro Crater on the Serengeti Plain of Tanzania, East Africa. The scene has been described as a landlocked Noah's Ark.

EACH YEAR the animals heed an inner call and leave their home in the crater to join others on the plain in a 500-mile mass movement to areas where rains have brought new foliage. Scenes cover all four seasons, and there are unusual closeups of many of the animals with their newborn.

Burrud went out on a limb to get where he is today—also up desert cliffs, through jungles and forests and deep under the oceans.

He owns almost 700 half-hour films, the equivalent of 125 full-length feature pictures. And he has traveled well over a million miles to capture the world on film.

HIS "Animal Kingdom" series was 10 years in the making. Burrud and his camera crews took more than a year to document the great migration on the Serengeti Plains of Tanzania. And just about every rare and unusual animal in the world will be featured in "Animal Kingdom."

Burrud began his show business career as a child actor, but for the past 17 years he has been traveling around the world gathering material on color film for travelogues.

It was in 1951—after serving in the Navy in World War II and earning a degree in business administration at USC in post-war days—that he hit on the idea of producing travel-adventure shows. He came up with the first travel-adventure show to hit the Los Angeles area—"Open Road."

IN 1954 Bill Burrud Productions colorcast "Assignment America," followed in short order by "Vagabond." He presented "Wanderlust" in 1955, "Holiday" and "Treasure" in 1958, and "True Adventure" in 1962.

Burrud launched another series, "The American West," with TV star Jack Smith as host in 1964. In 1966 Burrud brought out his "The Wonderful World of Women."

The Bill Burrud Productions has been in syndication for several years and has been viewed in major markets, but the premiere of his "Animal Kingdom" marks the firm's first entry in a network series.

Martin's Goldiggers

"Dean Martin Presents the Goldiggers" — summer series starring Joey Heatherton and Frank Sinatra Jr. in replacement of NBC-TV's "The Dean Martin Show" — debuts on the NBC Television Network at 10 p.m. Thursday, Ch. 4.

Paul Lynde appears as special guest star in this, and seven more of the 10 shows in the series.

The series, based on the tunes and events of the 1930s, also features comedienne Barbara Heller, the Skiles and Henderson comedy team, comedian Stanley Myron Handelman, the Times Square Two, comedy singers, comedian Stu Gilliam and the Goldiggers, an all-girl singing and dancing group.

Greg Garrison, producer-director of the regular "Dean Martin Show," also heads the summer series.

JOEY and Frank Jr., who serve as hosts, open with "Anything Goes." Joey also sings, "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" and Frank presents "Exactly Like You" in solos.

A fast-paced variety format includes many comedy sketches as well as songs. Lynde performs in four sketches; a bank teller grateful for being robbed by Bonnie and Clyde, a husband on his anniversary with Miss Heller, as Superman with Miss Heller, and as a pianist who loses a

TV Violence

Networks to Cooperate in Study

By RICK DU BROW
United Press International
Television violence seems certain to be scrutinized carefully by a Presidential commission formed in the wake of the assassination of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

The 10-member commission, convened at the White House Monday by President Johnson, has been given a year to investigate causes and possible cures of violence in American life.

And among the questions Johnson suggested the commission explore was: "Are the seeds of violence nurtured through the public airwaves, the screens of neighborhood theaters, the news media and other forms of communications that reach the family and our young?"

THE PRESIDENT said he was asking the radio and television networks and the head of the Federal Communications Commission to cooperate in the study. And he posed the thoughts: Is violence a contagious phenomenon? And to the extent that it is, are there ways to reduce the contagion?

An immediate response came from CBS President Frank Stanton, who pledged cooperation "in every way possible" and added:

"As an initial step, although the integrity of the creative process will be fully respected, programming executives of the CBS Television Network will immediately undertake individual conferences with producers and writers to discuss specific measures to de-emphasize violence in programs now in production."

STANTON said: "CBS shares the president's concern as to the possible effect of the content of television entertainment programs upon the nature of our society."

"We believe, however, that it may take a considerable length of time to determine whether there is a causal relationship between the fictional portrayal of violence in the mass media and any increase of actual violence in American life. Nevertheless, we are examining our policies and practices in this entire area."

NBC also announced that it would continue to pursue its policy against depiction of violence for its own sake in entertainment "with responsibility and vigilance."

HOLLYWOOD trade reports also indicated some possible future production reactions to the Kennedy killings. The daily trade paper "Variety" said the producers of NBC-TV's "Get Smart" series "are stripping all scenes with violence from scripts for next season." It added that the producers "said in view of the murder of Senator Kennedy they feel they want to make a contribution toward a climate with less violence."

And movie director Jerry Paris, who formerly guided episodes of CBS-TV's "Dick Van Dyke" series, took out a full-page trade paper advertisement saying:

"In the name of John F. Kennedy, Martin Luther King and Robert F. Kennedy and my family, I make this solemn pledge:

"I will no longer lend my talents in any way to add to the creation of a climate for murder. I call upon all who read this to join me in refusing to write, direct, produce, act, or participate in any way in the shaping of any 'entertainment' that celebrates senseless brutality, aimless cruelty, point-less and violent death... If you agree with me, let me hear from you. None of us knows where this will stop. But we can make a beginning in the stopping. Together we can change the climate."

PARIS QUOTED from a Saturday Review article by Richard L. Tobin which suggested a growing relationship between television violence and the increase of violent acts in American life.

"In the course of an eight hour exposure to ABC, CBS and NBC, as well as half a dozen local outlets," wrote Tobin, "we marked down 93 specific incidents involving sadistic brutality, murder, cold-blooded killing, sexual cruelty and related sadism..."

NBC-TV, meanwhile, Monday night offered a new weekly British series, "The Champions," an hour of amateurish drivel about superhuman secret agents, quite violent, and pointless, so.

PAN AND FAN MAIL

WE WISH to congratulate you on your editorial page...

Today, George Eres used the word "cogent." His article was not only cogent but most timely, and his reference to C. P. Snow shows a mind that is not satisfied with the emptiness of most of TV's programs and strives for better. After reading this article, I think Eres could also contribute to your editorial page.

W. D. Gilkey
Long Beach

"GOD IS DEAD!" These words came booming out of our little transistor radio the other evening, and it was followed by considerable double talk by one Stan Freeburg. It turned out to be a thing sponsored by the United Presbyterian Church.

Freeburg is the "noted" TV commercial producer whose many production numbers are given credit for peddling a lot of Chinese food products.

We hardly believe that radio commercials of the Freeburg technique are the way to "sell" religion. We still have churches, preachers, and other conventional procedures that have come down through the ages. Somehow these things seem sane to us.

Okla. TV Under Fire

Broadcasters Return Volley From FTC

A Federal Communications Commission study condemning programming by Oklahoma radio and television stations for lack of local service programs is under fire from the president of the National Association of Broadcasters.

NAB President Vincent T. Wasilewski of Falls Church, Va., told the Florida Association of Broadcasters in convention that the Oklahoma stations are "really doing quite a lot" in local service broadcasting.

The FCC report by Commissioners Kenneth A. Cox and Nicholas Johnson said a study of 101 Oklahoma stations showed they were not providing enough local programs, entertainment or news.

WASILEWSKI quoted the report as saying, "there is not in the state a single station which carries as much as one hour per week of locally-originated programming in prime viewing hours, other than news, weather and sports."

The NAB president said the news and weather programs "comprise a significant and expensive portion of our local programming effort in broadcasting."

"To exclude them arbitrarily," Wasilewski said, "is to prejudice the case at the outset. No broadcasting stations devote a considerable amount of time and planning, money and staff to these areas."

COMMISSIONERS Cox and Johnson said the current system of 7,500 radio and television stations was built on a foundation of local service, including "local news, enlightened presentation of local, controversial issues, local talent and a community dialogue."

"We must report this foundation is shaky indeed," the report said.

The commissioners said their Oklahoma study showed most of the programming consisted of "television entertainment from New York and Los Angeles, nationally-distributed recorded music entertainment for radio and nationally-distributed news for radio and television from networks and wire services."

Criticizing the commissioners for omitting broadcast editorializing from the report, Wasilewski said his figures indicate more than 60 per cent of AM stations and 45 per cent of television stations and more than 45 per cent of FM stations are now editorializing on occasion.

TV Notes on Next Season

By JACK GAVER

United Press International

For the fourth season, CBS will have a series of four National Geographic Society specials, starting Oct. 23 with "America's Wonderlands — The National Parks." The other three will be seen in December, February and April.

JACK BENNY is going to expand his own video shows to three for the 1968-69 season. He has been doing only one special a season for NBC for the past three years. The new agreement is for two new specials and one repeat.

FOUR episodes of "The Beverly Hillbillies" CBS series for the coming season are being filmed in England this summer.

BOB HOPE is set for nine comedy specials on NBC for 1968-69. Eight will be one hour long and the ninth will be a 90-minute affair filmed during the comedian's annual Christmas tour of U.S. overseas bases.

VETERAN character actress Lurene Tuttle will be one of the regular characters on the new "Julia" series starring Diahann Carroll on NBC in the fall.

TV NOTEBOOK

A glittering array of guest hosts have been named for ABC's "The Hollywood Palace" Saturday nights next season.

Signed for three appearances in the 1968-69 season are Bing Crosby, Milton Berle, Jimmy Durante, and Sid Caesar with Imogene Coca. Crosby hosted the first "Palace" show in 1964, and has been a familiar figure on the program over the years.

Scheduled for single hosting appearances are Don Adams, Don Knotts and Robert Goulet. Other headliners, said network programming Vice President Leonard Goldberg, will be Ella Fitzgerald, Burl Ives, the Mills Brothers, Liza Minnelli, Martha Raye, Mel Tormé, Polly Bergen, Gene Barry, the Lennon Sisters, Diabann Carroll, Guy Marks, Edie Adams, Ethel Merman, Bobby Gentry, Vikki Carr, Steve Allen and Jack E. Leonard. The show originates from ABC's Hollywood Palace Theater at Hollywood and Vine.

A TWO-YEAR pact giving the ABC network the biggest golf package in TV history has been signed with officials of the PGA. It was announced jointly by Roone Arledge, president of ABC Sports, and Max Elbin, president of the Professional Golfers Association of America.

The contract gives ABC the rights to televise 10 top PGA events in 1969 and 10 or 11 tournaments in 1970.

With the PGA Championship set for another two years, ABC again will be televising three of golf's "big four" events — the PGA championship, the U.S. Open and British Open. In all, ABC will cover 14 tournaments in 1969 (the same number as in 1967 and one more than in 1968), and 14 or 15 tourneys in 1970.

The 10-tournament pact consists of the following events in 1969: the Bing Crosby National Pro-Amateur Tournament, the Andy Williams San Diego Open, the Phoenix Open, the Tournament of Champions, the Byron Nelson Classic, the Colonial Invitational from Fort Worth, the Westchester Golf Classic, the PGA Championship from Dayton, and two more to be determined.

THE "LASSIE" television program has launched production in Alaska at the first of several distant locations planned for the series for the 1968-69 season on CBS.

Cast and crew of 43 departed from Los Angeles by air over last weekend for Juneau, Alaska, where a production base has been established for filming on and around the area's waterways and on the Mendenhall Glacier.

The company will return to its Paramount-Culver City stages for interior filming, before further locations planned for Oregon, Idaho, Northern California and Arizona.

The "Lassie" program will begin its 15th consecutive year on Sept. 29, 7 p.m., Ch. 2.

A PORTABLE, wireless microphone and a hand-held, wireless color TV camera are two technical innovations to be used by ABC News in its television coverage of the national political conventions this summer.

The radio frequency microphone will operate in tandem with the 50-pound camera, permitting ABC's newsmen "complete and free access to the usually chaotic and crowded convention floors," said Julius Barnathan, engineering vice president.

The transmitter and receiver, each smaller than a half-carton of cigarettes and weighing 1½ and 1¾ pounds respectively, are carried on a belt. Both feed into a single antenna, carried on the set.

THE $3 million estate of the late industrialist Henry J. Kaiser, offering a beautifully landscaped view of Diamond Head and Waikiki, was the locale of key scenes filmed on location for an episode of "Hawaii Five-O," new adventure series starring Jack Lord which will have its premiere on the CBS network in September. By contrast, the center of activity in another episode was a Skid Row room in downtown Honolulu and a hippie's shack in Waikiki.

UNDER a protective security lid, Universal Television filmed the "Shell Game" segment of "Ironside," starring Raymond Burr, using jewels worth over $7 million. "Ironside" begins its second season Sept. 19, Ch. 4. . . . Barbara Rush, Ed Nelson and Christopher Connelly, who star in the twice-weekly "Peyton Place" series on Ch. 7, have been set to tape radio spots for the Heart Fund in conjunction with the national fund-raising campaign scheduled later in the year. . . . Steven Innat has been signed to guest-star in the "Five Graves at Socorro Creek" episode of "The Virginian." The series begins its seventh season Sept. 18, Ch. 4.

SCHEDULED FOR THREE HOSTING APPEARANCES ON "HOLLYWOOD PALACE" Jimmy Durante; Sid Caesar With Imogene Coca; and Bing Crosby battle to upstage his singing star, Miss Heatherton.

Skiles and Henderson offer a comedy number with sound effects. The Times Square Two present a humorous rendition of "I've Got a Feeling for Ophelia." Gilliam and Handelman deliver comedy monologues.

THE Goldiggers, 12 girls picked from over 400 applicants for the group specially formed for the show, sing "Let Yourself Go" and a baseball medley.

In a series of humorous vignettes, the cast performs a "Where Were They Then?" segment showing famous people of today as children in the 1930s.

The finale pays tribute to Shirley Temple and her movie songs as a little girl. The finale in each program of the 10 shows will honor a popular singer of the 1930s. The cast sings such Shirley Temple songs as "You've Gotta Eat Your Spinach Baby," "Animal Crackers in My Soup," "Baby Take a Bow," and "On the Good Ship Lollipop."

Music is by Les Brown and His Band of Renown and writers are Rich Eustis, Al Rogers, Peggy Elliott and Ed Scharlach.

Queen Pageant 50 State Finalists to Vie

Host Mike Douglas, popular TV personality, and the hit recording group, Gary Puckett and the Union Gap, will offer musical salutes as 50 state finalists vie for the title during NBC Television Network's exclusive live colorcast of the 14th annual "National College Queen Pageant" at 9 p.m. Monday, Ch. 4.

Douglas will sing "My Kind of Girl" following his introduction of the finalists, representing every state, at the opening of the program originating from the Municipal Auditorium in West Palm Beach, Fla.

Gary Puckett and the Union Gap, five young men who play their own musical accompaniment, will sing their latest recording, "Lady Willpower," which is on the way toward the million mark following the group's previous million-sellers, "Woman, Woman" and "Young Girl."

DOUGLAS will be joined by the current National College Queen, Judy Hill, of the University of Washington, in an introduction of the winners of the various point-scoring events including "Home Economics Competition," "Current Events and General Knowledge Forum," "Fashion Creativity," and "Safe Driving Competition."

The most important question to ask before you buy insurance.

Ask the man, "How many insurance companies do you represent?" If he says just one—slow down. He doesn't have much choice to offer you.

Stands to reason you're better off if you buy home, car or business insurance from an agent who represents several companies. An independent agent. He has a choice.

That's why he can give you sound, impartial advice about which policy is best for you. And help speed a fair, fast settlement whenever you have a loss.

So you see buying insurance is really very simple. You pick the agent. Let him pick the company.

This symbol is your assurance that we are professional independent agents.

The Independent Insurance Agents Association of Long Beach includes 80 agencies with 130 licensed agents to serve you. For a list of members, see the Yellow Pages of your telephone directory under the heading "Independent Insurance Agents Association of Long Beach," under the "Insurance" classification.

REPUBLICAN Governors — Two shows today originate from the just-completed conference at Tulsa, Okla., as "favorite sons" are interviewed. California's Gov. Ronald Reagan will "Face the Nation" (2) at 11:30 a.m., in color, while "Meet the Press" (4) expands to a full hour at 1 p.m. to talk with Govs. George Romney (Mich.), Raymond P. Shafer (Pa.), Spiro T. Agnew (Md.) and Dewey Bartlett (Okla.).

HUNGER IN AMERICA (2), 5 p.m. (C) — Charles Kuralt studies the reactions—both official and private—since this shocking "CBS Reports" hour aired May 21. Original show is repeated, with David Culhane viewing the ten million Americans not getting proper food, with spotlight on tenant farmers, Mexican-Americans, Navajo Indians and Negro sharecroppers.

ANIMAL KINGDOM (4), 6:30 p.m. (C) — Premiere. It's a long-overdue "big time" for multi-talented Bill Burrud, who has been ubiquitous on KCOP — with a score of travel shows over the past decade, plus assignments as host for parades and premieres. Network opener looks at the thousands of animals in a land-locked Noah's Ark of Tanzania, who each year migrate 500 miles to a plain where rains have brought new foliage.

Evelyn Wood READING DYNAMICS ♦ Institute ♦

Having completed our Duly Prescribed Course and having thusly achieved a superior ability in the Art of Reading Dynamics, the Director of the Institute at the nomination of the Instructors and by virtue of the authority in them vested by the Board of Directors make it hereby known that: is an honored Graduate of our Institute with all the rights, privileges and opportunities derived therefrom.

John W. Smith

Given at Los Angeles in the State of California on this 9th day of June in the year 1968

Richard Summers Kenneth R. Ruff
 Institute Director Director of Instruction

Evelyn Nielson Wood

THIS MONTH WE GRADUATE HOUSEWIVES... STUDENTS...ACTORS...DOCTORS and BABYSITTERS. WHAT'S YOUR OCCUPATION?

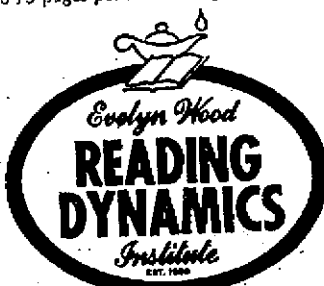

Reading Dynamics GRADUATES have a variety of occupations. They all had one thing in common... a desire to read dynamically. Our graduates are not limited by educational level, age group or occupation. Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics can help everyone.

Right now you're reading approximately 100-350 words per minute, when you can be reading at least 3 times faster. Picture yourself reading a newspaper page in under 2 minutes, an average novel in less than 2 hours, textbooks and technical journals at 50-75 pages per hour. We guarantee we will triple your reading efficiency... or your tuition will be refunded. That's fair enough, isn't it?

After only 8 weekly lessons, the average Reading Dynamics GRADUATE reads 1,500 words per minute without sacrificing comprehension or pleasure. There are over 400,000 successful graduates.

Whatever your occupation... you should be an Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics graduate. Be our guest at a free demonstration lecture this week. Class enrollment is limited to 30 students. Summer enrollment is heavy. ACT NOW!

Over 400,000 Successful Graduates
ACHIEVEMENT WARRANTY

We guarantee to refund the entire tuition of any graduate who, after completing minimum class and study requirements, does not at least triple his reading efficiency as measured by our beginning and ending tests. Reading efficiency includes both speed and comprehension.

The New American Catholic

Program Guests Comment on Changes

The significant changes sweeping through the Catholic Church will be examined by NBC News in a one hour special colorcast "The New American Catholic," to be presented at 10 p.m. Friday, Ch. 4.

Some comments of guests on the program follow:

Bishop James Shannon, Auxiliary Bishop of Minneapolis-St. Paul: "We are trying on every level, as bishops, as priests, as laymen, as religious, to put into effect the decrees of the Second Vatican Council and this requires a change of style, a change of posture, a change of stance — and it's difficult."

Rev. John McKenzie, professor of theology at Notre Dame University: "I feel quite certain that this process which is called democratization will continue. That it will go further than it has gone. I can't really foresee a time in the future when the Roman Catholic Church will be completely democratic in its structure, but I can foresee such things as election of bishops by the clergy and possibly the entire layity of a diocese."

REV. William Nerin, spiritual adviser to the Community of John XXIII, a non-geographic parish in Oklahoma, who with permission from the bishop has been hired by the community for two years as an experiment: "I am very happy in my life as a priest because after some 16 years of trying to figure out what Christianity is all about and what I am all about in it, I think that we have discovered something here. I think this conviction that we must be for other men and get at it in a serious way, and not play around with it, is developing in John XXIII. As a member of the Community I myself am stimulated to get out and involve myself in the human issue."

Sister Judith Tale, of the Sisters for Christian Service, formed by a group of former Benedictine nuns who still follow their vows but live outside the convent: "Many sisters, I think for many years, especially sisters who have been in the convent for a decade or two, have begun to think they could be better sisters if they were out of the convent and many sisters who have left convent life have left not because they did not want to be sisters, but because they did want to be sisters. And they thought they could be better sisters outside the structure."

Bishop Victor Reed, Bishop of the Diocese of Oklahoma-Tulsa: "Even though the Church remains the same — she can change her methods. There are parts of her structure that she can change and that evidently she must change in order to meet the challenges of this era."

DR. Albert Outler, professor of theology at Perkins Divinity School, at Southern Methodist University: "It seems to me the Roman Catholic Church has opened its heart and its arms and its mind to the work, to the new spirit of freedom and liberty in the world. It means that the church is going to make it or fail in the spirit of freedom, persuasion, love, and brotherhood."

'Golden Ring'

Documents Wagner Opera

"A program no music lover should miss" describes the spectacular hour and a half NET production of "The Golden Ring," at 9 p.m., Wednesday, Ch. 28.

A documentary of the 1965 recording in Vienna of Wagner's opera "Die Goetterdaemmerung," the complex and artistic program reveals the devotion and exhausting work required to create masterwork phonograph records.

Birgit Nilsson, considered the greatest living Wagnerian soprano, baritone Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau, and tenor Wolfgang Windgassen form a trio of world-famous operatic stars performing in the British Broadcasting Corp. and Austrian Television Service production. Commentary and narration is by Humphrey Burton.

Actual "takes" of the great moments from the music-drama are included in the program — the Immolation scene, Siegfried's Funeral March, and the Vengeance trio ending Act II. Backing the famous cast of singers is the Vienna Philharmonic under direction of Georg Solti, musical director of Covent Garden's Royal Opera House.

Record producer John Culshaw has received the Order of the British Empire for his contribution to the inspirational recording feat.

TINA LOUISE guest-stars as secret agent on "It Takes a Thief" at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday, Ch. 7.

SPECIAL

THE GOLDDIGGERS (4), 10 p.m. (C) — Premiere. Two good-looking kids who weren't even born then turn the clock back to the 1930s for a ten-week variety series based on tunes and events of that decade. Joey Heatherton and Frank Sinatra Jr. headline the summer replacement for Dean Martin, featuring Paul Lynde (in 7 of the 10) and regulars Barbara Heller (Jackie Gleason's "Christine Clam"), Skiles and Henderson, comic Stanley Myron Handelman, the Times Square Two, comedian Stu Gilliam, and an all-girl singing and dancing group called the Goldiggers. Each program winds up with a salute to a popular singer of the '30s, with the cast singing Shirley Temple songs on the opener. Les Brown's band is featured, with Greg Garrison as producer-director.

TV Profile: Lew Parker

He's Relaxed Type Away From 'That Girl'

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Lew Parker plays the stuffed shirt father of television's "That Girl," concerned papa of the ambitious actress.

In private life he is an easy-going man who enjoys simple things: his home, his work and his pets.

Parker, who grew up as the son of vaudeville performer Lewis Jacobs, is married to Betty Kean of the singing Kean Sisters. They were married in 1955 when Betty was starring with her sister on Broadway in "Ankles Aweigh."

The Parkers own a New York apartment, which they have leased out for the duration of their stay in California, and live in a Hollywood apartment with a dog, Westmore (pure mutt), and a pair of cats, Mittens and Lil' Alfie.

They are the parents of a daughter, Deidre, who is in New York seeking an acting career, much as Mario Thomas in "That Girl."

THE PARKERS' two-bedroom home-away-from-home was furnished when they rented it, but Lew has decorated the patio with South Seas furniture and trinkets.

Almost every summer evening he can be found out there barbecuing a favorite dish.

Betty is an excellent cook, he admits. But Lew is more expert still, specializing in pasta dishes and various forms of chicken.

To keep in shape Lew has given up golf in favor of jogging. He takes Westmore and jogs a mile or more in a nearby park, vowing it is better exercise than golfing or tennis.

During the week, he reports to Desilu studio by 7:30, after a breakfast prepared by Betty. When work is over at 8 in the evening he relaxes with a cocktail and has dinner.

ON WEEKENDS the Parkers visit friends at Malibu beach or drive down to Newport for swimming in the ocean.

"I consider California my home now, and would like to buy a house here eventually," he says. "But much depends on the vagaries of show business."

Two years after their marriage, Lew and Betty began performing in night clubs as a team, billed as Kean and Parker. They spent seven years on the club circuit before Lew decided to go it alone as an actor.

Betty has a difficult time prying her husband away from the television set on Saturdays and Sundays. He's a sports buff and spends hours watching golf, football, basketball, hockey — whatever there is to see.

BEFORE joining the ABC TV series, Parker appeared in Broadway plays and in guest shots of "Gidget," "F Troop" and the Lucille Ball shows.

Few viewers would recognize the relaxed Parker off screen. In the show he is always seen wearing eastern garb; suits, vests, hats and the works. In Southern California he's most comfortable in blue jeans, sneakers and a sweat shirt.

"That more or less tells the story why I like it out here," Lew Parker says.

Resettlement of Israel

Series Examines Jewish Communities

A two-part series examining the resettlement and development of communities of Jews in Israel will be presented on "Look Up and Live" at 8:30 a.m. Sunday (June 16 and June 23), Ch. 2.

"They Shall Revive as the Corn," Part I of the series, deals with the older established resettlement of Jewish communities in Israel before the recent newer development of communities from Golan Heights to the Negev Desert.

Part II, "... Grow as the Vine," will be broadcast on June 23.

GUESTS on the series include Dr. Renan Weiss, deputy director of the Jewish agency which has been officially responsible for the absorption of immigrants to Israel, and Uzzi Bitan, an official of the absorption department of the agency.

The broadcasts will show the earlier settlements and two new towns which have been developed, Dimona in the Negev area and Ashdot on the coast. Also seen will be cooperative farms and towns, and processing of immigrants at Haifa and Lod Airport in Tel Aviv, and the schools, or ulpans, to which those immigrants who do not speak Hebrew are sent to learn the language.

Producer of the two-part series is Ben Flynn.

IMMEDIATELY preceding the "They Shall Revive as the Corn" program will be a presentation on Baptist work in Israel.

"Mission in Nazareth," depicting the Southern Baptist mission operation in and around the Biblical city of Nazareth in Israel, will be presented on "Lamp Unto My Feet" at 8 a.m. Sunday, Ch. 2.

The broadcast, filmed in the Galilee area of Israel, shows how Southern Baptist missionary activity there has changed since the 1930s when the Baptists began their 12-grade school in Nazareth for Arab children. Scenes of the school and of some of the Baptist "village centers," such as the one in Cana, are also shown.

THE BROADCAST examines the current philosophy guiding Baptist work in Israel, the promise and problems of Christians working in the Holy Land and the new role of the missionary in the Jewish state.

Guests on the broadcast are the Rev. Dwight Baker, veteran Middle East missionary with more than 20 years of service in the area; the Rev. Dale Thorne, school administrator; the Rev. Fuad Sakhini, native-born pastor of the Nazareth Baptist community, and the Rev. Ray Register, who works with Arab youth.

Olympic Series

Special Broadcasts Set

A series of 17 special broadcasts from Mexico City during the 19th Summer Olympic games will be featured on the CBS Radio Network during the two-week period beginning Oct. 13, announced George M. Perkins, CBS Radio Network director of sports.

Arnold Bilgore and John Christman, known to the Network's listeners for their frequent action reports from XEVIP Radio, Mexico City, on "Worldwide Sports," will cover the summer games. Up-to-the-minute results in track and field, swimming, boxing, wrestling, basketball, crew and other events will be reported during the two-week period.

'They're Killers' Cancer Film Hits Smoking

Based on an unusual level of off-beat sophistication, appealing to adults and teen-agers alike, two new, full-color anti-cigarette spot announcements have been produced for the American Cancer Society
by Lord, Geller, Federico and Partners, Inc., New York advertising agency.

Both announcements were filmed entirely in New York City. The first, titled "Showdown," displays a typical good guy versus the bad guys in an about-to-shoot-it-out-in-a-saloon situation. However, good guy walks out un-harmful as the bad guys, smokers all, are simultaneously struck by coughing fits. Punch line at end, spoken by announcer is, "Cigarettes. They're killers."

"Happy People," title of the second announcement, resembles a typical cigarette commercial, revealing an attractive couple and their attractive friends doing their usual enjoyable things — skiing, dancing, romancing, while puffing away to the music background of Jerome Kern's familiar "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes." However, what distinguishes this Cancer Society announcement from the ordinary cigarette commercial is the message contained in the announcer's voice over. He is matter-of-factly reciting the perils of smoking: tar, emphysema, lung cancer, heart disorders, etc. He concludes by asking the question "So, why are these people laughing?"

EACH of the announcements has been produced in 60 and 30-second versions.

The idea, the script and storyline of both spots were created by the agency as a public service for the Cancer Society.
"Showdown" and "Happy People" will be distributed to television stations around the country by the American Cancer Society.

$625,150 Grant to KCET

Station to Produce Series for 'Barrio'

Non-commercial KCET
(Ch. 28) has been awarded $625,150, the largest single program grant ever given to the 3½-year-old station, by the Ford Foundation in a nation-wide competition among public TV stations.
It was announced by Fred
W. Friendly, the Foundation's TV adviser.

Channel 28 ranked fourth —below Boston, San Francisco and New York—in the competition for Ford's recently initiated Project for New TV Programming.
Fourteen public TV stations and four state educational TV networks were awarded $5 million for programing by the foundation. Originally, 107 proposals were received for consideration,
Friendly said.

Channel 28, which ranked highest of any ultra-high frequency station, will produce 70 episodes of "Feedback for Advancement," depicting life in the Mexican-American ghetto, according to KCET General Manager James L. Loper.

"THE SERIES will combine the elements of the serialized soap opera and applied research to make direct motivational contact with the low income Spanish surname population of Los Angeles and will introduce new patterns of self-improvement for the family," Loper said.

"Feedback" will be inaugurated later this year as 30-minute, five-day weekly programs and will mirror everyday life as it is lived in the Mexican-American ghetto, better known as the "barrio." The stories, as well as the writers and actors, will be drawn from the barrio as it is today, he pointed out.

FORMAT will include pre-taping a 20-minute story segment to be followed by a live, 10-minute question-and-answer segment. The story segments will present a "problem" or "conflict" to be introduced by the family, with various choices or solutions being advanced.

"The series will be produced from specifically selected KCET staff as well as specialists of the Spanish surname areas of Los Angeles," Loper emphasized.

In announcing the recipients, Friendly said "the competition supports our conviction that talent and creative initiative exist at many points in the nation's non-commercial TV system.

One of the most significant aspects of the competition is the large numbers of proposals that deal with the nation's racial and urban problems. We have proof here that TV is a medium of concern as well as communication."

PROGRAM awards were made by a national panel of judges including Ralph Ellison, author, former member of the Carnegie Commission on Educational TV; Vivian W. Henderson, president, Clark College, Atlanta, Georgia; E. William Henry, lawyer, former chairman of the Federal Communications Commission; John Houseman, former TV producer, now director, drama division of Juilliard School of Music; and Colin Young, director, Theater and Film School, UCLA

CRITICS' CORNER

SHOWTIME, aired Tuesday, Ch. 2; and SHOWCASE '68, aired Tuesday, Ch. 4.

That coast-to-coast thud you heard on network television Tuesday night was the signal that summer's musical-variety replacement series have arrived with a vengeance.

CBS-TV presented a new one-hour series called "Showtime," and NBC-TV countered with a 30-minute entry named "Showcase '68," and the proceedings were every bit as thrilling as the titles.

"Showtime," which replaces the Red Skelton program for the summer, is produced in London, for the American audience, which means it's really not here nor there, but rather a show without a country. Swinging London it ain't. Maybe they like it somewhere in the mid-Atlantic.

There are guest-star hosts each week for this series, and the first was Shelley Berman, a comedian with a sharp sense of focus who, alas, found himself on a program with no focus at all. It affected him, and he wasn't the same Shelley we know, as he opened with a dreadful monologue about London Time and failed to recover.

There were also a dated jazz band, a vocal-instrumental group from Paraguay, a German juggler and two British singers, Shirley Bassey and Matt Monroe. I have always heard good things about Miss Bassey, but the way she strained and hollered her way through "If Ever I Would Leave You" made one wonder. Pity.

Future hosts will include George Gobel, Phyllis Diller, Eddy Arnold, Liberace, Steve Allen, Juliet Prowse, Godfrey Cambridge, Frank Fontaine and Terry-Thomas. Terry, or Thomas, or Terry-Thomas, whatever you call him, is British. How did he sneak in there?

"Showcase '68" is an imaginative idea, executive with no imagination at all. The notion of presenting professional regional entertainers in their first national television outings is a wise way to uncover some talent for the networks. But the format is stone-age television.

A regular host, Lloyd Thaxton, who used to have a syndicated series in which he did pantomime mouthings of hit records and the like, introduces the acts, and that's all.

One group, the Jade Sel, rocked and ruined "Summertime." A few acts were enjoyable, including the Craig Hundley Jazz Trio, composed of amazingly young boys. But all in all, the show came across like a sort of semi-pro version of the long-running "Amateur Hour."

The settings for both of Tuesday's shows were nice enough. But one was reminded of the recent maga-

CARDINAL CUSHING
OF BOSTON, aired Tuesday, Ch. 2.

The warm human quality that has made Richard Cardinal Cushing, Archbishop of Boston, something of a legend in his own time was explored in a half-hour documentary on the Columbia broadcasting system.

It wasn't an in-depth study of a powerful Prince of the Catholic Church, nor was it meant to be. It was, instead, a friendly portrait of an essentially simple man whom fate has placed in a major position of influence and who has met the challenge with faith and humor intact. Cushing, who is 73, related in his inimitable Boston-Irish voice his love for humans of every faith and color, but especially for children. He told of his worry over some of the new winds now blowing through the Catholic Church and for the continued existence of parochial schools and the shortage of priestly vocations. He was seen jesting with the aged in an old persons' home, where the aging prelate danced a lively jig and told his audience that he had been called "the only priest that even the deaf people could hear."

The program, which was narrated by Harry Reasoner, touched on the cardinal's great abilities as a fund-raiser and builder, but it was the simple priest who came through most winningly.

ON THE FOUR days of TV network coverage following the assassination of Senator Robert F. Kennedy: ... Probably none of the networks will receive enough credit for the complete elimination of commercial messages during the funeral coverage Saturday and during other periods earlier. Probably few viewers, caught up in the tragedy, noticed that those familiar interruptions were missing. But they certainly would have been aware of them had commercials been present.

The three networks invested millions in their long, intensive and detailed coverage over the four-day period. The story moved from one coast to another. They not only pre-empted programming but they discarded advertising for whole blocks of time. One estimate was that it cost the three networks almost $3 million a day.

The coverage of the Kennedy tragedy was, on all sides, a splendid performance. And the networks were wise when, on Sunday, they started putting programming back on its normal level.

Want the facts? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Want informed opinion? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

Q. Two questions, please, about the Bobby Kennedys. Is Bobby really a shy man? And can you give me the sex breakdown of the ten children he and Ethel already have. Also, when is No. 11 due?—Mel Traina, Clifton, N.J.

A. Bobby Kennedy is basically a shy person. The Kennedys have seven boys and three girls ranging in age from 1 to 16, expect No. 11 in January.

Q. How much money did Doris Day's husband, Martin Melcher, leave? Also, wasn't he widely disliked in Hollywood?—H. L., North Adams, Mass.

A. Melcher left an estate valued at $1,310,000. He was a man who built his life around money, not friends.

Q. Why do so many young Negroes today prefer to describe themselves as black rather than Negro?—Milton Wershowsky, Newark, N.J.

A. The younger and more militant members of the race regard "Negro" as "a slave word." Other substitutes are "Afro-American" or "Afram."

Q. I understand that the Soviet Union has nuclear missile submarines stationed off New York City and San Diego. Is this true?—T. E., La Jolla, Calif.

A. From three to six nuclear Soviet subs cruise our Atlantic and Pacific shores, generally from 500 to 750 miles offshore. We in turn have about 35 of our nuclear subs on constant patrol off the shores of Soviet Russia and Red China. The subs of both nations are equipped with nuclear missiles which have ranges of 600 to 1500 miles.

Q. Who said, "Failure makes people cruel and bitter?"—Naomi Rabin, Baltimore, Md.

A. It is part of a quotation from the late Somerset Maugham: "The common idea that success spoils people by making them vain, egotistical and self-complacent is erroneous; on the contrary, it makes them, for the most part, humble, tolerant and kind. Failure makes people cruel and bitter."

Q. Is it on the level that Richard Nixon has offered the vice-presidency to Negro Sen. Edward Brooke of Massachusetts?—Bernard Fine, Waterbury, Conn.

A. Nixon was considering Brooke as a running mate, but Brooke decided to throw in his lot with Nelson Rockefeller.

VITTORIO DE SICA WITH WIFE AND CHILDREN

Q. I would like to know if Vittorio De Sica, the Italian actor-director, has ever gotten around to marrying the mother of his teenaged sons?—V. T., Oakland, Calif.

A. Yes, on April 10, 1968, De Sica, 67, quietly married Maria Mercader-Forcade, 51, mother of his children, at Fains, France.

Q. What's happened to these heavyweight champs of yesteryear: Sonny Liston, Jersey Joe Walcott, James J. Braddock?—Nick Di Angelis, Atlantic City, N.J.

A. Liston lives in Las Vegas, Nev. Walcott works as a probation officer in Camden, N.J. Braddock, who lost the heavyweight title to Joe Louis in 1937, is a marine equipment salesman in New Jersey.

Q. The hairpiece worn by NBC commentator Frank McGee is the poorest-fitting job I've ever seen. Doesn't he mind?—L. E., West Palm Beach, Fla.

A. Apparently not.

Q. Is it true that in 1955 when Walt Rostow, now special assistant to President Johnson, was proposed as a State Department consultant, he was denied security clearance on the grounds that his father was a Russian-Jewish immigrant Socialist?—L. T., Washington, D.C.

A. In a legal brief filed last year, Otto Otepka, controversial ex-chief of security evaluation for the State Department, says he refused to grant security clearance to Rostow, and that Herbert Hoover Jr., then Undersecretary of State, agreed with him and refused to hire Rostow. In his legal brief Otepka gives no reason for denying Rostow security clearance, but says that again in 1957 the State Department denied Rostow clearance on the basis of his findings. Rostow in World War II worked for the Office of Strategic Services, handled top secret material, in 1945-46 was chief of the German-Austrian Economics Division in the State Department.

Q. Does Nelson Rockefeller have a chance for the Republican presidential nomination or does Nixon have it all locked up?—Wayne Young, Lincoln, Neb.

A. It depends on how well Bobby Kennedy does. The better Kennedy does in the Democratic primaries, the better Rockefeller's chances, since the Republican establishment is more afraid of Bobby than Rockefeller and is afraid that in another Kennedy-Nixon confrontation, another Kennedy might win.

Q. You said that three states, Nevada, West Virginia and Wyoming are without their own Washington correspondents. Doesn't the Charleston (W.Va.) Gazette have its own Washington correspondent?—M. S., Wheeling, W. Va.

A. Yes, his name is John Yago. The Gazette has had its own correspondent since 1965.

Q. They are making such a fuss in Paris about Françoise Sagan's new novel, La Garde du Coeur. What does it mean, and what is it all about?—Frank Pierce, Hanover, N.H.

A. It means, "Keeper of the Heart," concerns a middle-aged Hollywood woman who is about to marry a man her own age when she picks up an extremely handsome young fellow. This young man is an impotent film star who also happens to be mad. He has a tendency to murder anyone who doesn't like his elderly female companion. After explaining to the film star that murder is an unpleasant habit, the lady marries her middle-aged suitor, and all three settle down together in a happy ménage à trois.

Q. Can you find out if Dimitri Shostakovich's son has fled Russia and taken asylum in England where he now conducts an orchestra under another name?—Louis Castaneda, Fort Worth, Tex.

A. Shostakovich's son has not fled Soviet Russia. He appeared recently as guest conductor of the London Philharmonic Orchestra. He is 28, married to a schoolteacher; both are Soviet citizens in good standing with their government.

Q. How do King Constantine of Greece and his wife live now that they have left Greece?—Natalia Tanis, Eugene, Ore.

A. They are living in a villa outside Rome at this writing, receive a monthly allowance from the colonels who have taken over the Greek government in Athens.

To a smoker...

Happiness is the taste of Kent.

An arbitration session. More and more civil cases are being settled by this method to overcome court logjam.

Instant Justice— Available by Arbitration

by Wallace Bryant

No doubt everybody has heard about the choking congestion of our nation's courts.

The problem got so bad in New York's Bronx County Supreme Court last January that a halt to civil trials was called so that judges could catch up on its increasing backlog of criminal cases. The one-month moratorium of course set the civil trial calendar back still further, creating a situation like the mythological monster who grew two heads for each one that was cut off.

But trust native ingenuity to get around the delays and costs of present-day litigation. Especially since 1960, more and more Americans have found it much easier to settle commercial disputes by arbitration. Public-minded arbitrators administer justice on call—any time, any place the need arises and in the majority of cases without charge to the parties.

The concept is simple: let's say you have a row with someone—anybody—a local merchant, a business associate, your landlord, your spouse, you name it. You get together and pick an arbitrator who's familiar with the type of problem at hand. He listens to the arguments; and presto, comes a decision that is just as valid as if handed down by a judge. There are no technicalities, no appeals to higher courts, no burdensome legal expenses.

If you want an arbitrator, the place to go is the American Arbitration Association which has 23,000 of them, each an expert in some trade or profession. A large number are lawyers.

AAA as the association is known, is a non-profit organization with offices in 22 cities and arbitrators in 2000 communities. It is equipped to help patch up anything from a spat between a housewife and the local grocer to multimillion-dollar feuds between large corporations. In 1967 AAA's arbitrators meted out awards ranging from $35 to a New Jersey couple whose oriental rug was faded by a carpet cleaning service to more than $1 million in a dispute over royalties from the RCA Victor recording of the soundtrack of the film based on Rodgers and Hammerstein's The Sound of Music.

A couple of cases

A visitor to AAA's New York City headquarters recently found a homeowner arguing with a plumber over an alleged $50 overcharge while a couple of real estate tycoons in the adjoining hearing room debated a tangled transaction involving $48 million in properties scattered across the country. A large portion of AAA's cases are brought by motorists who disagree with their insurance company over accident claims.

Arbitrators also decide labor disputes, international trade controversies and occasionally domestic relations matters (in Pakistan a Muslim wanting two wives must get permission from a council of arbitrators). A major brewing company now arbitrates all disputes with its franchised distributors. In Michigan the routing of public roadways can be determined by arbitrators. Whatever the circumstances, however, all of AAA's customers have one thing in common: they're dogged by a controversy and they want it settled as quickly and as inexpensively as possible.

A matter presented by a Los Angeles account executive and his wife was not unusual to AAA. The dream house built for them, the couple said, was a nightmare of errors. They accused the architect of failing to include bay windows in the living room, of improperly locating the library fireplace, of leaving out closets, and a long list of other faults.

When the couple refused to pay the architect the $4000 balance due for his services, he persuaded them to let an impartial arbitrator determine if the complaints were justified. Through AAA they found a home builder who was willing to take a day off from his own business and act as arbitrator. Within a few days he inspected the house and declared the plans and specifications were "incorrectly, incompetently and negligently performed" by the architect and his staff. As a result, he wrote off the $4000 balance, ordered the architect to return $2000 paid on account and assessed AAA's fees and expenses, $120, to the architect.

Arbitrators often issue rulings within a few days. Standard AAA rules require a decision within 30 days after the hearing is completed.

Not long ago an arbitrator had to decide if a storage company was responsible for alleged damage to a living room set belonging to a Boston couple. The company said tears and stains existed when it received the furniture, but the owners disagreed and demanded $2300 to replace the items. All the arbitrator had to go on was an inventory sheet indicating the damages which, according to the company, was filled out when the furniture was picked up. The problem was that the moving men apparently forgot to have the form signed by the owners.

The decision

The arbitrator said that it was impossible to know when and where the damage occurred but because the company failed its responsibility to have the owners sign the inventory sheet, the benefit of doubt had to go to the owners. However, the arbitrator deemed $450 sufficient compensation after learning that the furniture had been purchased second hand for $700 two years earlier.

Last year a food producer suit as "judge" at an arbitration brought by a restaurant owner whose rival eating spot was allegedly pirating his patented barbecue sauce recipe. He won his case after plying the arbitrator with samples of the "two" sauces.

Mystery writer Erle Stanley Gardner stood ready to go before a panel of AAA arbitrators for some time but actually never did. Beleaguered by critics who said his stories were written by ghost writers, the author's publisher offered $100,000 to anybody who could prove that someone else penned Gardner's famous whodunits. All comers, however, had to convince a three-man arbitration board. As it turned out, no one ever made a claim and the critics were silenced.

Arbitration may be advantageously used in practically any matter that might be subject to civil proceedings. Only cases involving complex legal questions are discouraged by AAA. The expanding uses of arbitration are evidenced by an upswing in the association's case load from approximately 5000 cases in 1960 to close to 15,000 in 1967. Because of the present "justice gap," researchers are continually exploring new areas in which arbitrators can take some of the load off the crowded courts and at the same time make justice readily available to lower income groups. For example, a recent project in Cleveland's Hough District, scene of racial disturbances in 1966, sought out ways for ghetto residents to resolve disputes with landlords, merchants and city agencies through arbitration.

AAA offices

The 22 cities in which AAA has its offices are Boston, Charlotte, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Dallas, Denver, Detroit, Hartford, Los Angeles, Miami, Minneapolis, New York, Philadelphia, Phoenix, Pittsburgh, San Diego, San Francisco, San Juan, Seattle, Syracuse, Washington.

So you're in range of your next new car. Fine. You're in range of an Olds.

You thought about it. Debated about it. And finally decided: You're getting a new car. Will you go right out and pop for the first car you see?

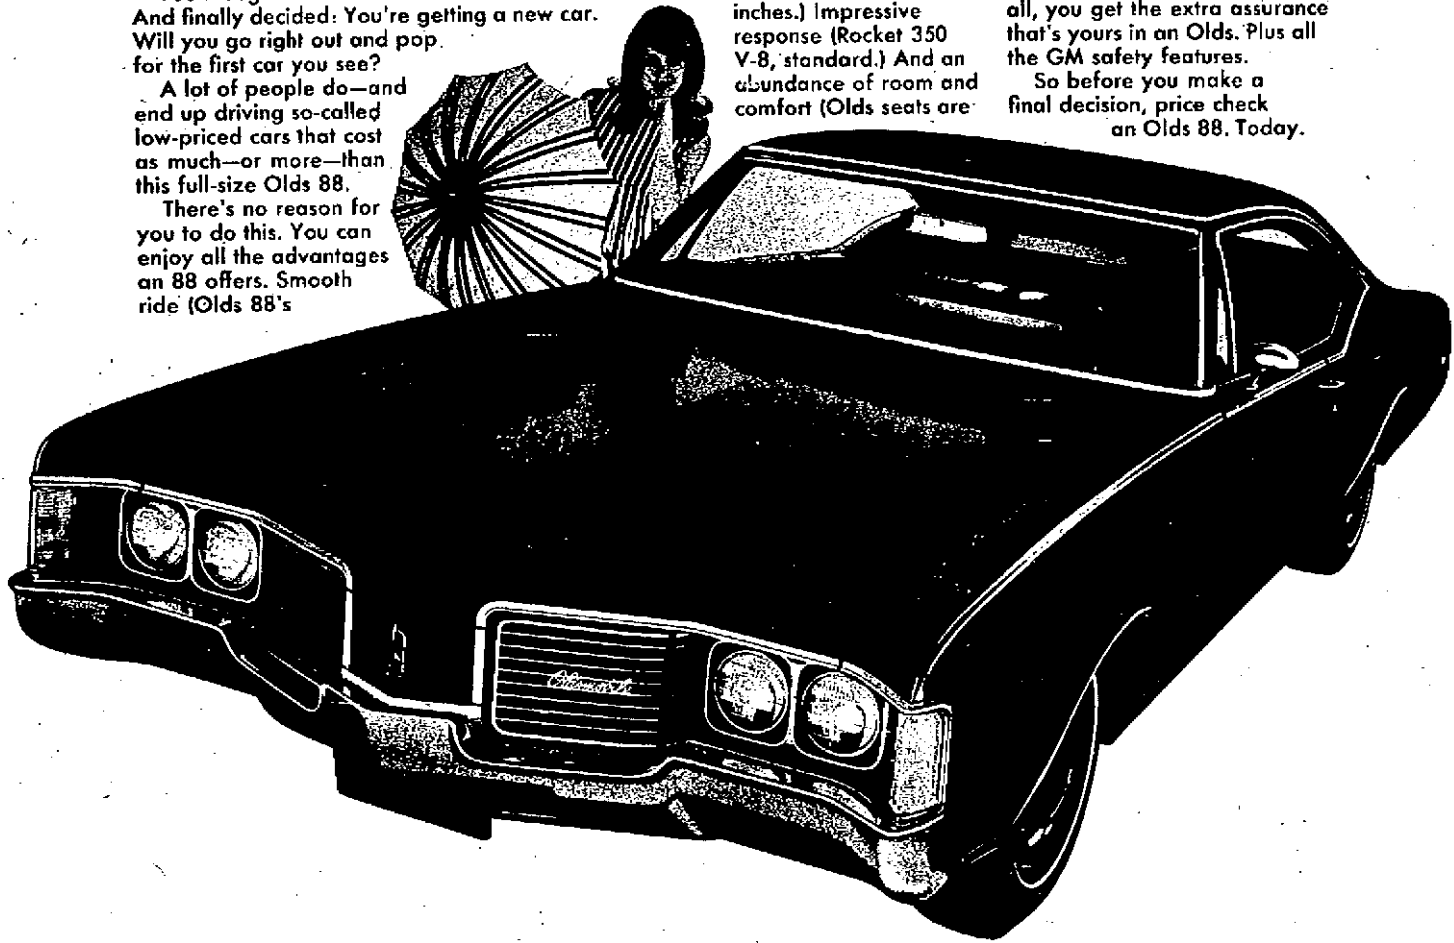

A lot of people do—and end up driving so-called low-priced cars that cost as much—or more—than this full-size Olds 88.

There's no reason for you to do this. You can enjoy all the advantages an 88 offers. Smooth ride (Olds 88's wheelbase is a full 123 inches.) Impressive response (Rocket 350 V-8, standard.) And an abundance of room and comfort (Olds seats are nearly 5 feet wide.) Most of all, you get the extra assurance that's yours in an Olds. Plus all the GM safety features.

So before you make a final decision, price check an Olds 88. Today.

CONTROLLING AGGRESSION

At a recent Unesco conference in Paris on brain research, Dr. K. E. Moyer of the University of Pittsburgh told a fascinated audience that human aggression may now be controlled by a flick of the electric switch or a variety of pills.

According to Dr. Moyer, both man and animals possess circuits in the brain which upon stimulation produce both aggressive and peaceful behavior. For example, in one experiment a part of a cat's brain was electrically stimulated. Immediately the cat attacked a rat. A different part of its brain was then stimulated, and it ignored the rat.

Similarly, a woman patient became most aggressive when a particular brain area was stimulated. Once the electric current was turned off, she became sweet, mild-mannered and apologized for her display of hostility.

"Her hostile behavior could be turned on and off with a switch," Dr. Moyer explained. He then pointed out that centers of aggression might well be sensitized by chemicals in the blood, especially hormones. Experiments with rats showed that those dosed with one particular hormone would attack frogs in a cage, those dosed with another hormone would ignore them.

Dr. Moyer pointed out that man may soon walk around with his own power-pack, and press a button whenever he feels excessive hostility, or conceivably he might take a pill or two, not tranquilizers, but "anti-hostility agents."

"The control of man's aggressive behavior by physiological manipulation is here now," Dr. Moyer contends, "whether we like it or not. It is not inconceivable that specific anti-hostility agents can be placed in the water supply to make a peaceful population. This is, of course, frightening, but the potential is there... and it will not disappear just because we ignore it."

TOP SALARIES

Harvard University ranks first in the average salary it pays its faculty members. For the academic year, 1967-68, this came to $19,300.

According to a study made by a committee of the American Association of University Professors, the University of Chicago ranked second, paying $18,241. California Institute of Technology ranked third, and Stanford University fourth.

The report also revealed that 294 major American universities have average pay scales above $10,500 annually.

YOUTH FARES

Eastern, National, Braniff, Delta, Allegheny and other airlines, except TWA, United, and American, have discontinued their half-price youth fares.

Under present youth fare programs, these airlines have eliminated the standby procedure for youngsters under 22, allowing them to make flight reservations for two-thirds of the regular price.

TWA, United, and American, the airlines which specialize in long haul and cross country flights, do not plan to alter their present half-fare plans.

BARBARA BAIN OF "MISSION IMPOSSIBLE": A DWINDLING SPECIES ON TELEVISION.

TV AND WOMEN

Insofar as actresses are concerned, TV continues to remain a wasteland. Each year there are fewer series in which a female plays the lead. Barbara Bain in Mission Impossible, Lucille Ball, Carol Burnett, Sally Field in The Flying Nun, Marlo Thomas, Liz Montgomery, Eva Gabor, Barbara Eden, Bea Bernaderet, and that's about it.

A few like Barbara Stanwyck, Amanda Blake, and Barbara Parkins share leads, but generally TV makes short shrift of females.

Why should this be? Some of the answers: most TV writers are men. Women viewers prefer watching men. There are very few female comedienne around whom to build a situation comedy. This is a man's world. How valid any of these excuses are, no one really knows.

The one spot in television which employs a plethora of females is the commercial. More TV actresses are employed in making commercials than in playing major roles in TV programs.

DESPERATE FOR TOURISTS

The Greek government is so desperate for tourists that it not only has ordered all luxury and first-class hotels in Greece to reduce their rates by 20%, but it also is propagandizing the image of the Greek lover. The idea is to attract to Greece single women, American and Scandinavian schoolteachers, for example, who might be in the market for a bit of romance.

"Greece is one of the most love-conscious countries in the world," declares Parikiaki, a Greek publication. "The young Greeks are notorious lovers, and it is only a public secret that some beauties from the north come down to Venus land just to make sure about it. Another public secret is that the Greeks do have a special inclination towards foreign women."

A pocketbook recently published in Athens for the use of Greek guides contains translations of various amorous approaches, teaches the reader how to say in five different languages: "I love you...turn off the light, please, and come here..."

COLD RELIEF

The common cold has plagued man from time immemorial. The Czech Medical Tribune published in Prague announced recently, however, that Dr. Yinder Urban, an ear-nose-and-throat specialist, has been able to cure most of his cold patients by an amazingly simple therapy.

Dr. Urban's method: the patient immerses his forearms in a basin of hot water, 40-45 degrees centigrade (104-113 degrees Fahrenheit), for 30 to 60 minutes. The cold symptoms then disappear.

Dr. Urban claims that soaking the forearms increases the blood circulation and temperatures in the walls of the nasal passages, which in turn wards off new cold-causing micro-organisms.

He claims a cure rate of 75% for his grandmother's remedy which for centuries has been used in many of Europe's rural areas.

NAVY REVOLT

President Charles de Gaulle not only has his troubles with France's college students but he faces a growing revolt among senior officers of his navy.

De Gaulle, who has never been sympathetic to French naval demands, has reduced the conventional fleet, has ordered three nuclear-powered missile submarines, and has canceled the construction of ordinary warships. French naval officers say that their fleet equipment is now totally inadequate against any air attack, are demanding more carriers instead of nuclear-powered subs.

WEAPONS CULTURE

Dr. Ralph Lapp, a nuclear physicist who worked on the atomic bomb project in World War II, claims in his new book, The Weapons Culture, that "the United States has spawned a weapons culture which has fastened an insidious grip upon the entire nation."

Lapp agrees that a nation must consider its security but wonders if we haven't "over-reacted to foreign threats."

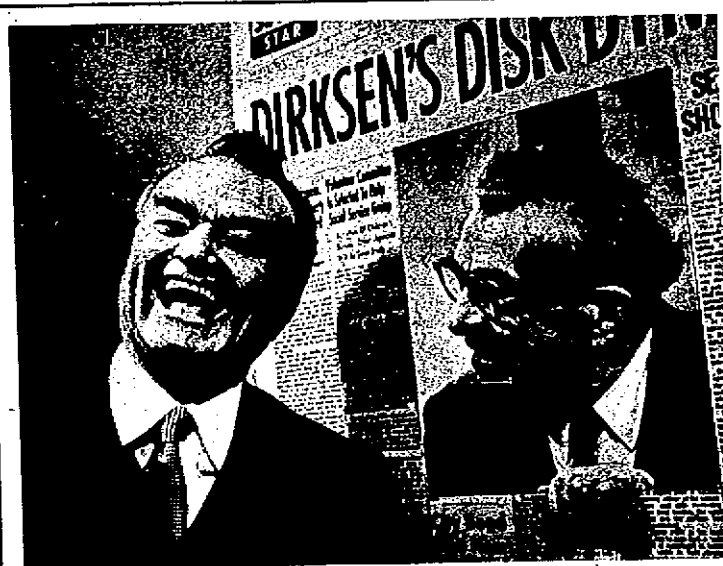

He points out: "Our nation has spent about one trillion dollars on its postwar armaments."

"Over seven-tenths of federal expenditure have been for national security."

"In the vital area of federally funded research and development, almost nine-tenths of this work was directed to defense-atomic-space activities."

"Less than one-tenth of one per cent of these funds went to support research in problems of urban development."

Lapp believes that we are involved in "a deteriorating situation that contributes to allowing the arms race to run out of control."

THAT'S SHOW BUSINESS: RED SKELTON AND SENATOR DIRKSEN LAUGH IT UP.

DIRKSEN THE ACTOR

U.S. Sen. Everett Dirksen, already an orator and recording artist, will be seen shortly in his motion picture debut in The Monitors, a film starring Susan Oliver, Guy Stockwell, and Keenan Wynn. Dirksen plays himself in a cameo role which lasts two minutes. It was shot in his Senate office.

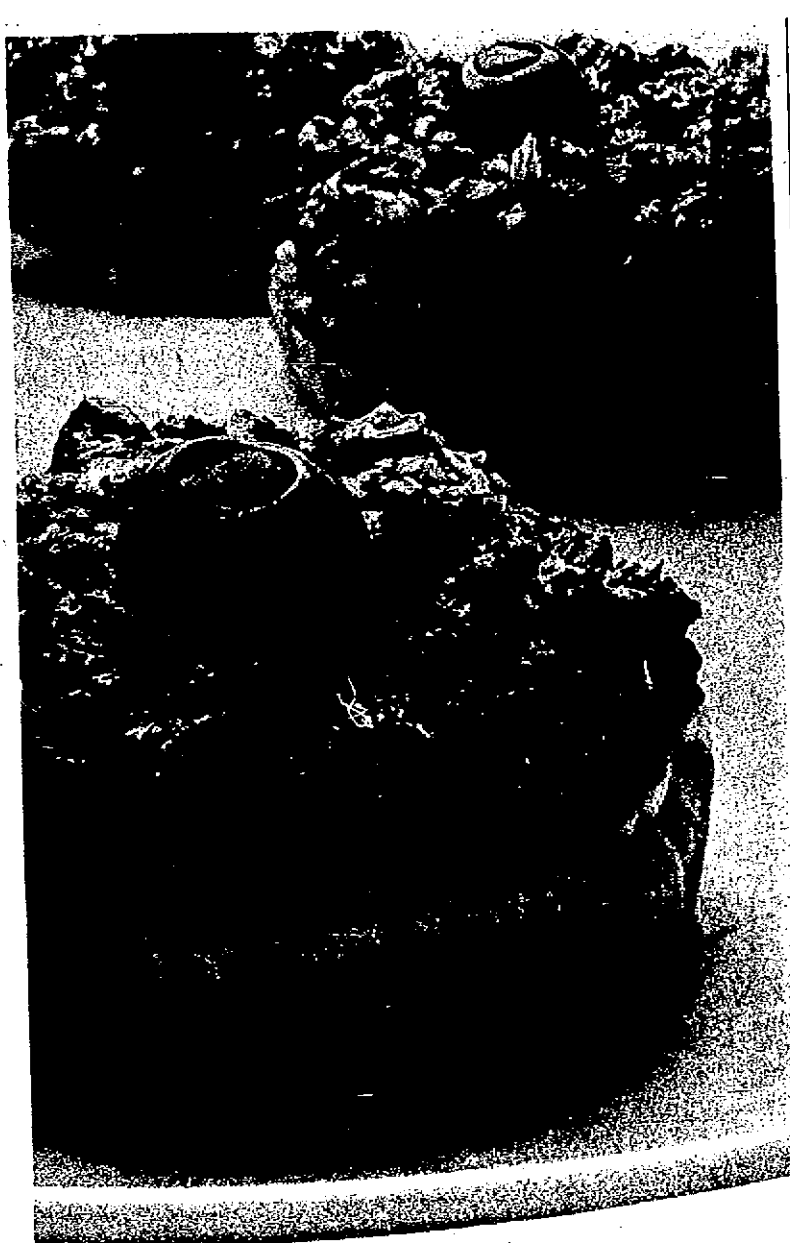

Early this year when he appeared as grand marshal in the Rose Bowl parade in Pasadena, executives at 20th Century were playing around with the idea of casting Dirksen in possible re-makes of some Will Rogers classics. Although the senator is running for re-election he has not completely discounted a new career.

SAFETY REQUIREMENTS

Front-seat headrests will be required on all new cars, starting Jan. 1, 1969. The new federal safety standard, devised to reduce whiplash injuries in many of the nation's 4 million rear-end collisions, is the second safety requirement issued for 1969-model cars. The first concerned increased standards for automobile lighting.

Good old American hamburgers. Like in good old Mexico.

Look what's happened to the good old hamburger from down the block. It's gone Mexican. With Ortega® Green Chile Salsa. A spicy blend of green chiles, tomatoes and onions. Here's how it's done:

2 tablespoons salad oil
1½ pounds ground lean beef
2 cans (7-ounces each)
Ortega® Green Chile Salsa
1 teaspoon seasoned salt

1 teaspoon prepared mustard
1 can (6 ounces)
Ortega Snap-E-Tom®
(or 1 cup tomato juice)
6 toasted hamburger rolls

Heat salad oil; add beef and cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally, until lightly browned. Stir in Green Chile Salsa, mustard, Snap-E-Tom and salt. Cover and simmer 10 minutes. Serve over rolls. Makes 6 servings.

Military might of Israel rolls through Jerusalem. Will it be involved in a new war?

CAN ISRAEL SURVIVE?

by Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON, D.C.
One year ago this month, Israel ripped into the Arab armies massed on her borders, routed them on all fronts and destroyed or captured an estimated $2 billion worth of Soviet planes, tanks and guns. The lightning six-day war, third in Israel's tumultuous 20-year existence, dramatically changed the balance of power in the Middle East. Today the balance is rapidly shifting back in favor of the Soviet-Arab alliance, and the little nation that has struggled so hard to survive is in grave danger again.

Intelligence reports made available to PARADE claim that the Russians have already replaced the lost military hardware. They have also provided military advisers who have attached themselves to the Egyptian and Syrian armies down to the company level. These reports declare that Russia now has 3500 professional soldiers in Egypt, 3000 in Algeria, 2000 in Syria. A formidable fleet of 40 Soviet warships cruises the Mediterranean, operating out of Arab ports.

At the same time it is conducting a military buildup, Nasser's United Arab Republic has been conducting a diplomatic offensive. It has hinted through the U.N. and elsewhere of its desire to negotiate peace. But intelligence warns that the Arabs, as well as the Israelis, are bracing for another war, although it could be as much as two years off, with diplomatic maneuvering in the meantime.

And Israel's dashing, one-eyed war hero, Gen. Moshe Dayan, has warned privately that war is unavoidable. This would bring Israeli troops into almost certain conflict with Soviet soldiers. If Russia should intervene, the U.S. probably would not stand by while the Soviets slammed down the Iron Curtain around the strategic Middle East. Not only Israel's survival, therefore, but world peace depends upon events in this volatile area. For the stakes are higher in the Middle East than they have ever been in Vietnam.

Strangely enough, although the U.S. might be cast as Israel's defender, hostility toward Israel is rife in our own State Department. The State Department's Near Eastern division, even the section that deals with Israel, is heavily loaded with diplomats who have served in Arab countries and whose sympathies are pro-Arab.

Pro-Arab arguments

This clique has guided State Department thinking on the Middle East since Israel blasted its way into the society of nations 20 years ago. The State Department opposed U.S. recognition of Israel in 1948 and U.S. aid for Israel thereafter. As the war clouds gathered over the Negev a year ago, the State Department warned Egypt's Gamal Abdel Nasser that Israel might attack. Afterward, the State Department sought to bring U.S. pressure upon Israel to pull back to its original boundaries.

The foreign service clique has always contended (1) that tiny Israel, with only 2 million people, isn't as important to the U.S. as the oil-rich Arab world with 40 million people; (2) that U.S. support for Israel would undermine the Arab moderates who want to keep their ties with the West and (3) that the U.S. should try to prevent the polarization of the Middle East into Soviet and American spheres, particularly if it meant the Arab world would fall into the Soviet sphere.

In spite of State Department opposition, the U.S. on the top level has tried to walk the tightrope between the Israelis and Arabs. Uncle Sam stopped the Israelis from marching into Cairo in 1956, fed the Palestinian refugees who have obstructed peace, and poured economic aid into the Arab lands. For years, one-quarter of the Egyptian diet came from U.S. food bins.

Some details of how this tightrope-walking policy evolved can now be told for the first time. In 1961, the late President Kennedy called in aide Myer Feldman, spoke of the State Department's pro-Arab bias and ordered Feldman to read every message from State dealing with the Middle East. This led to more than one confrontation between Feldman and Secretary Rusk.

Rusk, for example, wanted to reduce the $15 million annual aid then going to Israel. Feldman recommended that it be increased to $45 million. President Kennedy agreed to Feldman's figure. The State Department also opposed military aid to Israel. Feldman countered that Soviet arms shipments to the Arabs should be balanced by U.S. shipments to Israel. Kennedy then sent Feldman on a secret mission to Israel to offer Hawk anti-aircraft missiles and to persuade the Israelis to abandon the development of nuclear weapons. Feldman assured the Israelis that the U.S. would not let the Arab armies make good their threat to drive the Jews into the sea. If Israel's existence were threatened, he promised, the Sixth Fleet would move to the rescue.

Thereafter, the U.S. also sent planes and tanks to Israel and some of her Arab neighbors. Israel relied chiefly on France, however, for her military supplies.

Last June, following the six-day war, the Russians provided the Arabs with some of their most modern, sophisticated arms, including supersonic planes and ground-to-ground rockets, and Israel again turned to France, ordering and paying for 50 supersonic Mirage jets. The planes have lived up to their name. Although the French pocketed the money, the planes have remained a mirage. President de Gaulle decided in his infinite wisdom to support the Arabs and sent 50 Mirages to Iraq.

Desperately, the Israelis turned to the U.S. for supersonic jets, but we turned them down. All the while, however, we have continued to train Arab pilots to fly the supersonic planes from Russia. Dozens of pilots from Jordan, Saudi Arabia and Iraq were trained in the U.S. last year, despite the fact that Saudi Arabia and Iraq have broken relations with the U.S.

If war should come to the Mideast again, can little Israel survive? The Arabs have a 50 to 1 population edge, 10 to 1 advantage in armed forces, a 4 to 1 weapons superiority. With France shifting to the Arab side and the U.S. still on the tightrope, Israel stands almost alone against the Soviet colossus.

U.S. experts estimate that the Arabs won't be able to whip their armed forces into fighting trim for another two years. This will give the Israelis time to find the weapons they will need. As for the Russians, they probably would like to keep the Arabs in a state of "controlled chaos" and dependent on them for aid.

Another Arab-Israeli war remains a grim likelihood. Hopefully, it won't develop into a showdown between the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. But whatever comes, the Israelis have every intention of surviving.

When you serve Saffola on the butter plate, only your doctor can tell the difference.

The important difference in Saffola margarine is safflower oil. This 100% vegetable oil is highest in good poly-unsaturates — and lowest in saturated fats. Yet Saffola tastes just like the real thing: the rich, expensive spread. When your doctor recommends that you guard your health with a fat-control diet, switch to Saffola. He'll notice the difference. (But nobody else will.)

Problem—what to do with a wet head of hair after a day of swimming, and with a big date later?

topless wig

There's a new topless wig that's a cool answer to teenager's hottest summer problem—what to do with her wet hair. Just cover the damp tresses with a no-top wig, and place a hat over it. The wig—of Celanese fiber worked into an elastic band—is made by David and David to sell for under $10, and comes in 24 shades from the palest platinum to the jettest black. Styled long, as shown, or cut short, the wig can be curled, braided, tied back with a bow, or worn in pony tails. Just remember: keep it under your hat.

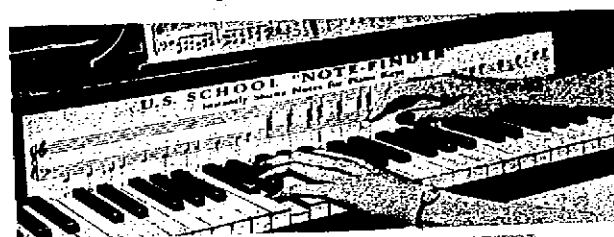

Solution—put topless wig over wet hair, cover it with a pretty hat, and you're all set to go.

SEAFOOD ROLL

by Beth Merriman
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

These seafood biscuit whirls are as colorful as they are flavorful. Flecks of coral shrimp, pink crabmeat and minced parsley keep their color through the baking that turns the biscuit dough golden brown. The sauce that tops them off is colorful, too, and, with mixed vegetables in abundance, makes this dish a meal-in-one. Serve as the main dish for a company luncheon, a Sunday night supper, or a hearty brunch for guests on a lazy vacation day. Prepare the roll ahead, freeze and, when ready to use, defrost just enough to slice. To round out menu, serve chilled grapefruit juice, add a salad of tomato aspic on watercress, climax with lemon sherbet topped with fresh raspberries. Serve coffee or tea, hot or cold, depending on the weather.

Saucy Seafood Roll

SAUCE

- 1 can (10½ oz.) condensed cream of celery soup
- ½ cup milk
- 1 package (10 oz.) frozen mixed vegetables, cooked and drained
- ¼ teaspoon white pepper

FILLING

- 1 can (7 oz.) crabmeat, drained and flaked
- 1 can (4½ or 5 oz.) shrimp, drained and chopped
- ¼ cup dairy sour cream
- 2 tablespoons snipped fresh parsley

DOUGH

- 2 cups buttermilk pancake mix
- ¼ cup soft shortening
- ¾ cup milk

For sauce, combine soup, milk, vegetables and pepper; heat thoroughly. For filling, combine crabmeat, shrimp, sour cream and parsley; set aside. For dough, place pancake mix in bowl. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Add milk; stir lightly until mixture is dampened. (If necessary, add a little more milk to make a soft dough.) Turn out a lightly floured board or canvas; knead gently a few seconds. Roll out to form a 15" x 12-inch rectangle. Spread with filling. Starting with short side, roll up as for jelly roll. Cut into 12 1-inch slices. Place on lightly greased cookie sheet, cut side down. Bake at 400° for 15 to 20 minutes or until lightly browned. Serve with hot sauce. Makes 6 servings.

Ten Personal

(The answers may surprise you.)

1. Does a woman need more than an underarm deodorant?

Yes. A woman, if she's completely honest about it, realizes her most serious deodorant problem isn't under her arms.

2. Is there a deodorant made especially to complete feminine confidence?

FDS*

3. What is FDS?

FDS—feminine hygiene deodorant spray—a gentle, lightly-scented, almost-warm spray deodorant, formulated specifically to eliminate odor from the external vaginal area.

4. What kind of woman uses FDS?

Your kind. Women of today. Interested in being as nice to be with as possible. Women who work, play, travel . . . with other people.

5. How effective is FDS?

FDS contains the most effective odor-fighting ingredients known to modern science—plus an important antibacterial agent. The result: an external vaginal deodorant to bring you total freshness.

6. How safe is FDS?

FDS has been hospital-tested by leading gynecologists to insure complete safety.

7. How often should FDS be used?

Daily. Once a day is usually enough, but in times of unusual stress or increased activity, FDS may be used as often as you feel the need.

8. Can FDS be used during the menstrual period?

Most definitely. FDS's effectiveness and safety are even more welcome during those "special" days.

Very Questions

9. Does FDS come in any other form?

Yes. New FDS Towelettes are the same FDS formula in handy take-along form. Lint-free, pre-moistened cloths in purse-size foil-wrapped packets go everywhere your active life takes you.

10. Where can FDS be purchased?

You'll find FDS Spray and FDS Towelettes wherever personal products are sold.

Traditional peace of American campuses has been shattered by student riots. Above, Barnard College girls show support for Columbia strike.

WHAT STUDENT RIOTS ARE ALL ABOUT

by STROBE TALBOTT

Europe and Asia have long suffered from student riots, but the United States has always thought of itself as a nation at peace with its students. Until recently we have regarded the college campus as a quiet realm where the homecoming queen reigns on Alumni Day and the bespectacled college dean is her prime minister.

The events of the last two months have shattered this peaceful image. An estimated 3000 students on at least 15 campuses, ranging from Stanford in California to Columbia in New York, have crippled their schools with militant demonstrations and taken administration offices by storm.

At Duke University in North Carolina, students invaded the president's house and held him prisoner. At Columbia over 700 students were hauled off in paddy wagons after they occupied five buildings and brought the university to a standstill.

University administrators, trustees, mayors, police chiefs, teachers, the public at large are all asking: Why has this happened? Why has student activism in America become so violent?

The author is a Yale graduate, Class of '68, former chairman of the Yale Daily News and a Rhodes scholar. He presents in the following article the student viewpoint of the rash of college riots. In a later issue Parade will present the views of a leading university administrator.

Before anyone decides that students have all gone crazy or that they are being duped into a seditious conspiracy by professional agitators, we should look at the context in which this new wave of student militancy has developed.

On the whole, students do not riot out of sheer destructiveness. They riot against the inattention, intransigence, and condescension of administrations with which they have lost patience.

Most of the riots of the past few months have been based on long-standing grievances which university officials have been too slow to recognize and too reluctant to redress. Often the students involved had tried to call attention to their complaints by the conventional and legitimate means of petitions, letters, resolutions, peaceful demonstrations.

Too frequently they found that this kind of protest simply did not work. The established administration tends too often not to listen to soft, polite voices. Or, if it does listen, it tends to fend off the requests for reform in a patronizing way which sooner or later wears down student patience and respect for the standard, democratic channels of communication.

Thus, they resort to more violent resistance to authority, to which those in charge must pay heed.

This, for example, is what happened at Columbia University. For years, the student leadership — especially the Negro student leadership — asked for some voice in the university's relations with the surrounding community. It was the last straw when Columbia announced plans to build a gymnasium in a nearby Harlem park without consulting either the students or the already much oppressed citizens of the neighborhood.

Similarly the handful of Negro students at Wellesley College near Boston found the only way they could get the administration to accept more than a token number of Negroes was to go on a hunger strike. First, they had tried petitions. Petitions did not work. The hunger strike did.

The very generalized and deep-seated revolution which the recent campus protests represent began in the late 1950's and early 1960's. It began with the civil rights movement, when busloads of students ventured into the American South to help stage sit-ins and voter registration drives.

In Paris, too, students riot. Here, French police beat young demonstrators to the pavement in a bloody street brawl.

Girl sit-in is carried from a student-occupied building. Among schools hit by strikes and sit-ins are Duke, Boston, Princeton.

The injustice and oppression which they saw there charged them with an impulse to challenge and set right those wrongs which the rest of society seemed willing to tolerate and even condone.

The campaign against the segregated lunch counters, the red-neck police departments, the all-white juries, and some of the feudal legislatures of the South also taught these students to distrust the laws on the books.

They learned that local statutes and state laws, as well as the courts and officers that often administer them, can be instruments to protect the repressive interests of those in power and to deprive others of their most basic rights to equality and self-respect.

In Selma, Montgomery, and Birmingham students learned first-hand the necessity and effectiveness of civil disobedience. There, the deliberate violation of standing laws was used to protest, to challenge, and ultimately to overthrow legislation which has since been found to be unconstitutional.

Not only did their civil disobedience work, but the young men and women who frequently spent the night in small-town Southern jails were vindicated by the Supreme Court and honored by large segments of society.

Much of the more recent anti-Vietnam activity in this country, which has accounted for so much unrest on the campuses, owes its impetus, its ideology, and its methodology directly to the civil rights movement. Many students consider America's war in Vietnam to be just as unconscionable, just as inhumane, just as unconstitutional and therefore just as "illegal" as segregation and poll-taxing.

Yet unlike their predecessors in the civil rights movement, these new dissenters have not been vindicated either by the courts or by American society at large.

The jail terms which many of them risk are no longer matters of a few nights in some hinterland pokey. They face years in federal prison. They face lasting disgrace in the eyes of their fellow citizens and severe curtailments in their career possibilities.

Many of these young people, who are so often called traitors, consider their motivations to be basically patriotic. They see themselves fighting for the good of a society that reviles them. Therefore, their activism is often charged with bitter frustration and anger.

The resulting sense of despair easily breeds the kind of cynicism and destructiveness which have had such a field day during the worst moments of the recent student riots, when a protest turns into a frenzy of obscenity-chanting and rock-throwing.

Students are also fed up with being told they should conduct themselves peacefully while the nation fights violently in Vietnam and its universities continue to participate in federal programs connected with the Vietnamese war, such as the Institute for Defense Analyses and military contracts.

The most militant student activists of the New Left have developed a deep hate for established authority in any form. Many of them have rejected the principles of a non-violent democratic society which such youth groups as the Students for a Democratic Society and the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee were originally meant to champion.

During the siege laid against the Dow Chemical Company recruiter at Harvard University last fall, one of the SDS leaders was asked why, in a free society, a recruiter for Dow Chemical or the Marines or the CIA should not be as free to come on campus as a recruiter for the Peace Corps or the Communist Party. "Because," he replied indignantly, "some things are just too evil."

What this also means is that some people and some institutions are not, in the eyes of their student opponents, worth preserving for reformation.

The kind of student leadership that had its way at Columbia is fed up with the old traditions of collective bargaining and the adjudication of disputes by compromise. It is fed up with its more moderate contemporaries who will not repudiate everything that so smacks of the Establishment. It has given up on talking and spends most of its time shouting.

Helpless and hopeless

When leaders of the Columbia riot were asked to sit down and explain their demands to the university vice president David B. Truman, they used the interview to vilify him with obscenities and charges of "fascism."

That futile confrontation was a stark demonstration of how helpless the leadership of the academic establishment is, even when it is trying to be most responsive, and of how hopeless and irresponsible much of the student leadership has become, even when it is exercising its most terrifying power.

The riots, the unrest, the bitter arrogance, the new impulse to halt the university in its tracks, all reflect a common discouragement among the students at the center of the fracas. They tend to believe that the entire nation is just as much on the brink of chaos as Columbia was at the height of the riots. They believe that there is just as much a breach of communication among the constituent sectors of this society as there was between Columbia's vice president Truman and the SDS leaders. They believe that the United States is committing far more senseless violence in Vietnam than they are committing on campus.

Many other students do not agree with this grim attitude of the militants. But those students who have reached this stage of impatience and disaffection are suddenly making themselves heard with frightening clarity. In America we are witnessing the irrefutable proof to the belief that violence breeds violence, peace breeds peace, and understanding breeds understanding. It's just that we seem to have fallen in short supply of the last two virtues in the society at large.

Office of Columbia president seized by storm of students.

HUMOR

— road to the White House

by Thomas Ottenad

WASHINGTON, D.C. *T*he man with the familiar, scooped nose and the famous 5 o'clock shadow grinned rucfully as he looked at his audience. "If the country wants a new face," he remarked, "I'm dead, that's for sure."

Not long afterward another well-known figure told another crowd, "I was sick last year, and my friends in the Senate sent me a get-well card. Then to a roar of laughter: "The vote was 42 to 41."

A variety hour on television? A night-club act? No, a couple of candidates for President of the United States (the first, Richard M. Nixon; the second, Robert F. Kennedy) following this year's popular political strategy—using humor to get to the White House. This has become such a favorite technique on the campaign trail that sometimes it is difficult to tell presidential candidates from comedians.

The formerly grim and intense Nixon now is witty and relaxed in his second try for the presidency. Bobby Kennedy has become an enthusiastic standup comic. The others in the presidential race—Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, former Gov. George C. Wallace, and non-avowed candidate California Gov. Ronald Reagan—also come equipped in varying degrees with funny stories, one-line gags and some quips that may even be extemporaneous. Professional gag writers often help. Campaign humor has a quality that is new this year. Much of it is self-deprecatory. In a kind of mea culpa with laughs, candidates poke fun at themselves, joking merrily about their own shortcomings and failures.

Nixon is one of the best in this field as he explains his loss to the late John F. Kennedy in 1960. "I was an Electoral College dropout," he says lightly. Then with timing that Jack Benny might envy: "Flunked debating, you know."

Bobby Kennedy uses self-mockery indirectly in relation to his alleged "ruthlessness." "My brother Teddy has been working hard on my campaign," he tells his audiences. "I asked him to order 10,000 buttons so I could bring them along and give them out today. But when they arrived, they all had his picture on them." When the laughter dies down, the New York Senator adds, "I told him he couldn't get in the race at this late date." A significant pause. "That would be ruthless."

Effective technique

This technique is useful as well as amusing. It provides a way of dealing lightly but effectively with some part of the candidate's image that may have become tarnished. Humphrey, for instance, joshes about his own glibness and verbosity.

Each of the candidates has his own style and brand of humor. Bobby Kennedy has become a political Bob Hope, with a rapid-fire patter. Typical was an appearance this spring at the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa. Like all good comics, he opened up with a surefire local joke:

"I've had both some bad news and some good news since I got here. The bad news was that Bear Bryant (the university's football coach) will not run as my vice president. The good news is that he's willing to let me run as his vice president." His student audience loved it.

This was followed quickly by the story about his brother and the buttons. Then came one dealing with his election chances. "I know not everybody thinks I'm a very strong candidate," he said. "But there are some who think I can win." He paused a moment. "George Hamilton called last night and asked me for my daughter's telephone number." There was a roar of laughter as he mentioned the movie actor who had dated President Lyndon B. Johnson's daughter Lynda.

The fast-paced opening wound up with a fourth joke, a tale of a reporter who asked if Kennedy would be willing to run as vice president with President Johnson. "I explained to him that I thought a coalition government is possible in Saigon," he related, "but not here."

Nixon is leisurely in his approach. He was in good form in Boise, Idaho, when he recounted the events of what he termed "the crazy month of March" when candidates entered and left the presidential campaign like a crowd in a revolving door. First, Nixon told his listeners, Gov. George W. Romney of Michigan got out of the race. "Then Bobby got in," he recalled. "Then Rockefeller got out—at least, I thought he did." Laughter. "Then Johnson got out. It surprised me. It surprised everybody." A pause. "It even surprised Bobby Kennedy for a few hours." Again he paused, then added innocently, "And that's when he got his hair cut."

Another story that always scores is one in which Nixon tells what a great friend and wise adviser he has in some well-known local Republican, who usually is on the platform with him. He is lavish with his praise, concluding earnestly: "I let me tell you what kind of a friend and adviser he is. I remember back in 1960 he turned to me in his very thoughtful and persuasive way and said, 'Dick, I think you ought to debate Jack Kennedy on TV.'" The memory of that televised disaster suddenly becomes funny. When the laughter ebbs, Nixon adds, "So here he is back in Pocatello (or wherever it is). And here, sadly, am I, too—in Pocatello."

The most understated humor is McCarthy's, but it often carries a sharp point. For example, at Lawrence University in Appleton, Wis., this spring he told of funeral directors who had opposed Medicare "because it would upset the traditional doctor-patient relationship."

At the University of California at

Los Angeles he called that proud body, the United States Senate, "the last primitive society in America." On the same trip he took a sharp dig at President Johnson's frequent assertion that critics of Administration policy in Vietnam want to "cut and run." The President's complaints, McCarthy observed with deceptive mildness, are couched "in terms of those who handle cattle." Then he added in his casual way, "It's good to know these terms to understand the Administration today."

There is a winning irreverent quality to McCarthy's wit. Describing the group of volunteers who helped him win convention delegates in his home state of Minnesota, McCarthy, who is a Catholic, once said, "It was made up largely of nuns who were wearing civilian clothes." Last Nov. 30 when he announced his presidential candidacy, a reporter asked whether he would step aside in favor of Kennedy if his own effort failed. "It may be less voluntary than that," he replied.

Much of Hubert Humphrey's humor is aimed at himself and the limitations of his job as vice president. A few days after entering the presidential race last April 27, he opened some remarks at Kent State College in Ohio by saying "Mr. President . . ." He paused and added with a grin, "You know, just about everything I've said the past three years has begun that way."

Humphrey's last arrow

On another occasion he compared the presidential seal — "a powerful eagle, fleet of wing and carrying many arrows" — to his own. "Mine looks emaciated," he remarked, "and the wings droop down as if it's getting set for a crash landing. On one side there's only a teeny and scrawny-looking olive branch. And on the other side, why, the eagle is holding just one little old arrow. But I want you to know I'm saving that arrow for the right time."

He has fun with the presidential campaign itself. He told the Kent State students that in deciding whether to run he considered the matter "very carefully — not long, but carefully." He praises Kennedy and McCarthy as talented senators, adding, "It would be disastrous to break the continuity of experience—theirs in the legislative branch and mine in the executive." He also has great praise for a "Richard M. . . who turns out to be, not Nixon, but Johnson, who was Martin Van Buren's vice president.

Humphrey, who encounters walkouts by anti-Administration students, usually manages to turn such protests into a good-humored joke. Often without waiting for anyone to leave, he will start by saying, "Now, we want to be sure everybody came to the right room. I often find that no sooner have I begun to speak than a little group has to get up and go somewhere else."

Gov. Rockefeller also shows an awareness of the importance of humor. At the University of Iowa two days after finally jumping into the race, he told this story:

"For a long time I have been convinced that the way to know what people are really concerned about it to pay close attention to what they are joking about. Like the man telling me the other day about his son who will graduate from college next month. The father asked what he would like as a graduation present. 'Well, dad,' the son said, 'how about an apartment in Montreal?' " It went over big with a college audience to whose generation the draft and escape from it in Canada are vital issues. Rockefeller immediately followed up with another, telling of the slogan on a blackboard at an unnamed college in New York: "Draft graduate students—care enough to send the very best."

The governor sometimes jests about his wealth. One of the tales goes like this: "A young fellow called on my grandfather and found him down on his hands and knees looking for a dime. 'Leave it—it's only a dime,' the young man said. But my grandfather replied, 'Young man, do you realize that a dime is the interest on two dollars for a whole year.' "

Rockefeller has painted an amusing picture of the difficulties he encountered in his dispute with Mayor John Lindsay over the recent garbage men's strike in New York City. Addressing an American Legion dinner in Albany, he told the Legionnaires he could now appreciate what war was like. He told them, "I went to the aid of a friendly power—at least I thought it was friendly. They asked us to come in and we kept our commitment. We didn't pull out until we had arranged a cease-fire. Now I think the next step is to call a halt to the bombing of Nelson Rockefeller."

Former Governor Wallace's humor has a tough, cutting edge beneath the soft Southern accent. For example, he likes to refer to "bearded professors and pseudo-intellectuals . . . who haven't got enough sense to park a bicycle straight."

In April 1967 Wallace encountered a hostile student audience at Syracuse University. "Well, there's a hot time in the old town tonight," he began. "I wish everybody could remain in a good humor until I get away."

With his training and experience as a movie actor, Governor Reagan handles humor smoothly and professionally. Much of it is aimed at big government, big spending in Washington and his Democratic opponents.

He likes to say of Vice President Humphrey: "Hubert! There's a modest man—with a lot to be modest about." He also nicks Humphrey's volubility, remarking, "He approaches every problem with an open mouth."

At a Republican dinner in Phoenix recently, he coupled a dig at Humphrey with an attack on the Johnson administration's handling of the gold crisis. "We're the only people in the world whose money can go to Europe and we can't," Reagan remarked. "And with the increase in postage, we can't afford to write . . . but as Hubert Horatio Humphrey said, 'a billion here and billion there, it adds up.' "

Reagan pokes fun at hippies and demonstrators. "There were some out here one day with signs, 'Make love, not war,'" he tells audiences. Then after a pause, "They didn't look like they were capable of doing either."

Professional gagmen

Although political candidates could have you believe that they turn out all their own jokes, this is far from the truth. They rely heavily on outside help, on gag writers and their own staffs.

No one will admit to having a full-time professional gag writer. But Kennedy gets some of his jokes from comedian Alan King, Reagan some of his from country comic Pat Buttrah. Nixon is assisted by an old friend, Paul Keys, a writer for the Dean Martin show. In the 1964 campaign, some of the Goldwater gags came from one of Bob Hope's writers.

Two of Washington's sharpest wits, Mrs. Johnson's press secretary Liz Carpenter and Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz, have been feeding punchlines to Humphrey. The vice president's chief writer, Ted Van Dyk, and his witty young press secretary, Norman Sherman, also provide many of them. In the Kennedy camp, press secretary Frank Mankiewicz (whose father used to write for the Marx Brothers) and Dick Drayne, press secretary for Sen. Ted Kennedy, are the gag men.

No candidate picks a writer purely for his ability to make jokes, but it is now a requisite to mix humor with the substance. And although this year's race offers more humor than usual, there has been wit in previous campaigns for the White House, going back to at least Abraham Lincoln, a first-rate teller of funny tales.

It looks as though 1968's candidates are bent on refuting a predecessor, President Calvin Coolidge. The laconic Yankee once remarked, "I always figured the American public wanted a solemn ass for a President, so I went along with them."

Artificial Teeth Never Felt So Natural Before

NOW... A PLASTIC CREAM THAT REVOLUTIONIZES DENTURE WEARING

Unique discovery helps you eat faster
...bite harder...even enjoy hard-to-chew foods like apples, steak, corn-on-the-cob. Absolutely nothing else like it.

FIRST TIME IN DENTAL HISTORY

Today an amazing plastic cream discovery holds artificial teeth almost the way Nature herself holds natural teeth. It forms an elastic membrane that anchors and holds both "uppers" and "lowers" as they've never been held before!

This unusual plastic—now in easy-to-use cream form—is FIXODENT. It's so different from all other so-called "denture adhesives" that it's protected against imitation by U.S. Patent #3,003,988.

For "uppers" and "lowers"

With its exclusive discovery, FIXODENT revolutionizes denture wearing because:

1. For the first time in dental history FIXODENT offers a denture adhesive that is not a gum, but an elastic plastic that approximates for dentures what living tissue does for natural teeth.
2. It holds your dentures firmer and more comfortably. Because FIXODENT stays so elastic, it helps absorb painful shock...helps you eat faster, bite harder without discomfort!
3. It resists liquids that can dissolve and loosen other adhesives—even hot coffee, alcohol and saliva. A single application may last around the clock.

Ordinary adhesives break down, lose elasticity. Eating can become painful. Gums may hurt when you eat and chew.

But FIXODENT stays elastic longer. Holds dentures firmer...no matter what you eat. It's like biting on a cushion of air.

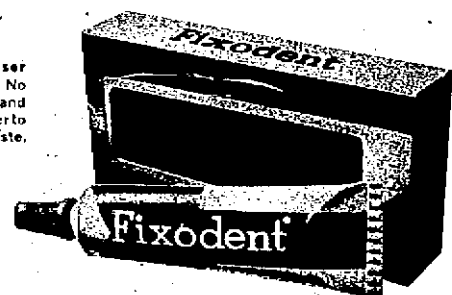

With FIXODENT and its revolutionary plastic cream discovery, there's more comfort and assurance for every denture wearer. For FIXODENT—applied in the morning—holds dentures as they've never been held before.

You'll Enjoy Eating Again

With FIXODENT you can eat faster, bite harder without pain. You may even enjoy hard-to-chew foods like steaks, apples, corn-on-the-cob.

Instead of gummy powders, oozing pastes or hard liners that dentists warn against, try FIXODENT and see for yourself why happy denture wearers call it "the nearest thing to having your own teeth again." Dentures that fit are essential to health. So see your dentist regularly. Get FIXODENT at all drug counters.

Special pencil-point dispenser assures accurate application. No gobs of gooey paste to ooze out and cause gagging. No messy powder to spill. No pasty, gummy aftertaste.

Diet Watchers

Attention, fat people! There is a way for you to get started on that diet you've been ducking. Have a picture taken of your fat self and carry it around with you. Keep looking at it and pretty soon you'll get so sick of all those bulges that you'll rush to embrace a diet. That's the lead-off suggestion in Diet Watchers Guide—the handbook of Diet Watchers, Inc., one of the nation's organized reducing societies. It was founded several years ago by Ann Gold, a dynamic Wall Street stock seller, who knows how to shed pounds. She cut her weight from 185 to 120 and held it there. How she did it is contained in her handbook. Because overweight is one of the country's principal health problems—it's directly linked to many a heart attack—PARADE is offering Diet Watchers Guide to readers at $1 a copy. It's helped so many others to win by losing—it can help you, too. One of Ann Gold's goals is to take the suffering out of dieting. So, her system includes the recipe for many a succulent dish, delicious and non-fattening.

Send for Diet Watchers Guide. And start your diet program immediately.

MAKE LIVING EASIER—TAKE A LOOK AT THESE SMART NEW IDEAS DESIGNED FOR YOUR HOME AND YOUR FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN

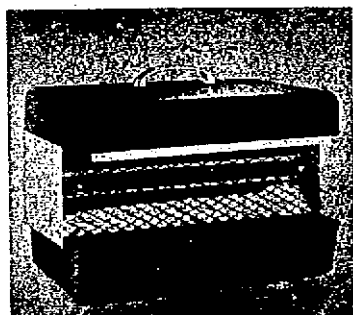

Charcoal lighter: You can have a bed of evenly glowing charcoal briquettes ready for the broiler in 10 minutes with this new lighter (above). Working by forced draft, it requires only a small piece of paper at the base, no lighter fluid or chemicals. $3.95. CWG Associates, Dept. PP, 309 Madison, Oak Park, Ill. 60302.

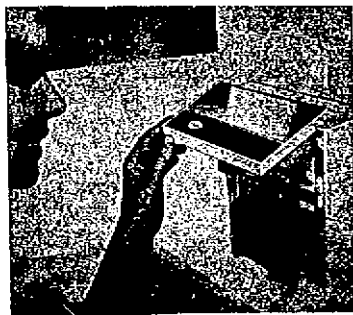

Golf scorekeeper: Keeping a tally of your game is simple with this new scorekeeper (above). Press a plunger and each stroke is recorded in two places. Lower figure shows strokes per hole; upper figures indicate strokes per game up to 99. Reset pin clears total strokes per hole. $8.95. Waukegan Outdoor Prods., Dept. PP, 4419 Grand, Gurnee, Ill. 60031.

Iron-on pockets: Replacing worn trouser pockets is simple with new nylon pockets you merely iron on—no sewing needed. They're washable, dry-cleanable. 4 for $1.25. Meriemart, Dept. PP, 2615 W. 21, Erie, Pa. 16506.

Insect trap: This one (above) attracts mosquitoes, other night-flying insects by invisible "black" light, draws them with a powerful fan onto a tray where they're quickly drowned by water plus a few drops of detergent. Cleaning is simple: just pull out tray and empty water and insects. Patio model shown: $34.95. Smaller indoor model (no fan): $12.95. IMS, Dept. PP, Box 3399, Albuquerque, N.M. 87110.

Hone kit: Contained in an easy-to-carry snap-open plastic pouch are 3 honing stones that should make it easier for sportsman and handyman to keep blades and points sharp. One stone is for use on pocket, fillet and hunting knives, arrows, other small blades. A second with a special groove running its length is for sharpening fish and gaff hooks, ice picks, similar tools. A large circular stone has flat surfaces for large-bladed cutting tools such as axes, heavy hunting knives, machetes. $1.39. Worth Co., Dept. PP, Stevens Point, Wis. 54482.

Seal a meal: With this new appliance (above), you can seal pre-prepared meals in plastic bags, store them airtight in your freezer without loss of flavor or nutritive value—and, when you're ready to serve, just drop a bag in boiling water for a few minutes. You can also seal leftovers and boil them later without reheated taste, claims the maker. $19.88. Bags: 30 for $1.98. Dazey Products Co., Dept. PP, 4500 E. 75th Terrace, Kansas City, Mo. 64132.

For your boat: If yours is an outboard with separate gear shift and throttle, a new single lever control could simplify operations, especially when you're docking or maneuvering in a crowded area. Forward, neutral and reverse are combined with throttle in the unit which you can mount port or starboard, through coaming or panel—wherever there is 2½" clearance behind the mounting surface. With mounting hardware and installation instructions: $32.25. Morse Controls, Dept. PP, Hudson, Ohio 44236.

Do THIS Before You Read The Bible

Reading Holy Scripture, of course, can be an inspiring and comforting practice.

But to get the most out of your Bible reading, you need a solid groundwork of knowledge that the Scriptures do not reveal. For as the New Testament says: "In these epistles there are certain things difficult to understand" (2 Peter 3:16).

The truth of this is manifested by the fact that equally intelligent people often draw conflicting conclusions from the same passages of Holy Scripture. And by the further fact that scholars of all faiths are continually searching the sacred texts to reveal and refine their meanings.

If you would like a better understanding and deeper appreciation of the Scriptures, write for a free copy of our new pocket-size pamphlet entitled: "Introduction to Bible Reading." Its purpose is not to interpret what the Bible says, but to explain how what it says is to be understood. Whether you are a devoted Bible student... or just a casual reader... this pamphlet will give you the basic principles for understanding not only what the Scriptures say, but what they mean.

It might be argued that the Bible... being God's Word... has to be a simple book so that people of all levels of intelligence can understand it. But if this were true, all Bible readers would understand the Scriptures in exactly the same way... which they don't.

The fact is, of course, God did not intend that all our knowledge of Him should come from our own reading and interpretation of the Scriptures. In His covenant with the people of Israel, God commissioned the prophets to instruct the faithful in His word. Christ vested the same responsibility in His disciples and His church with the coming of the New Testament.

"Introduction to Bible Reading" gives you a solid groundwork for understanding why the Bible is God's book... how it came into being... what books it contains... and the general principles which should be applied in interpreting it. It also offers samples of some good, modern English translations to help you in your selection of a personal Bible.

For your free copy of this interesting pamphlet, write today. Ask for Pamphlet PR-22. No obligation... nobody will call on you.

Simulium vittatum.

A biting pest that may invade your home through the screening.

House Centipede

Scutigera coleoptrata.

Lurks in the basement where he feeds on other insects.

Japanese Beetle

Popillia japonica.

Eats up your garden plants. Lays eggs in the sod which hatch into grubs that eat up your grass roots.

Housefly

Musca domestica.

Breeds in rotting lawn clippings, garbage, animal waste, and similar materials.

Clover Mite

Bryobia praetiosa.

Not really an insect but a tiny animal related to spiders. Invades the house in spring and fall.

Melon Aphid

Aphis gossypii.

Sucks the juice from garden plants and deforms flowers.

American Cockroach

Periplaneta americana.

Its beanlike egg capsules may be carried home in cartons from infested stores.

Earwig

Forficula auricularia.

Feeds outdoors on vegetables and other plants, often migrates into the house.

Ant

Monomorium sp.

Likes both sweet and greasy materials and contaminates foods by its presence.

Black Widow Spider

Latrodectus mactans.

The most poisonous spider in the United States.

Millipede

Spiroboleus sp.

Breeds in the ground and sometimes invades the house. Harmless, but unpleasant.

Flying insects, crawling insects, garden insects. New Multi-purpose Gulf Spray kills all 3 types!

Have you been buying one type of insect killer for flying insects? And another for crawling insects? And another for garden insects?

Life is now a little simpler. Gulf has developed a new, multi-purpose insecticide that kills flying insects, crawling insects and garden insects — all three types. The new Multi-purpose Gulf Spray is the only insect killer the average family is likely to need. It's the newest idea for your home from Gulf Household Products.

Life is now a little simpler.

MY FAVORITE JOKES

by Red Skelton

EDITOR'S NOTE: Red Skelton is possibly the best, most versatile comedian in the world today. Surely, he is considered as such by many critics. Skelton is not only a standup comic, but also a serious, sensitive actor and a mime without peer. He was born in Vincennes, Ind., 54 years ago into shocking poverty, was forced to earn his own living at age 7. After years of struggle as a carnival pitchman, marathon dancer, and vaudevillian, he reached Hollywood in 1939 where he made an immediate success. He has occupied the top rungs of the show-business ladder ever since. His private life defies description, but as an entertainer, he has no equal. Herewith some of his favorite jokes:

The old countess was very happy with her new chauffeur. He was courteous, prompt and efficient. The only complaint she had concerned his appearance.

One day she said to him diplomatically, "Randall, how frequently do you think one should shave in order to look neat and proper?"

"Well, madame," Randall replied. "With a light beard like yours, I'd say every three or four days would be enough."

The way people dance nowadays. The other night at a discotheque in Hollywood, a beautiful girl said to me, "Thanks so much for the dance."

"Dance?" I said. "I was just pushing my way through the crowd to get to the bar."

The way women are dressing in all those mini skirts, I wonder what they'll be up to next.

Money isn't everything but it sure keeps you in touch with your kids.

Two friends, Jake and Mike, hadn't seen each other for years when they met in Chicago.

"It's been 15 years since I saw you," said Jake. "I've gotten married. I have three kids. Why don't you come home and meet the wife and have dinner."

Mike said he'd be happy and asked for the address.

Jake said, "When you get off the bus, you'll find yourself right in front of our apartment house. Just press our buzzer with your elbow and open the door with your foot and edge your way into Apartment B."

"I don't understand," said Mike. "Why do I have to kick the door open with my foot and use my elbow to ring your buzzer?"

"Surely," Jake said, "you're not going to come emptyhanded."

The other day I overheard the following conversation between a mother and her 9-year-old son. "Wilbur," she screamed. "Do your homework, or I'll brain you."

"Aw, mom," the kid protested. "Why do you have to talk to me as if I were dad?"

A father was talking to his son freshly graduated from college. "Bill," he said, "after four years at State you're nothing but a bum and a dissolute drunk. Your mother and I have spent all this money on you, and what have you accomplished? Nothing."

"I wouldn't say that," the son answered. "You and mom have stopped bragging about me."

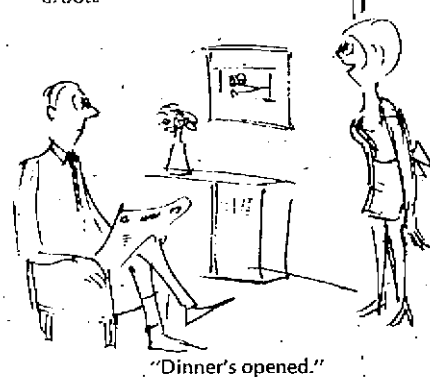

An 80-year-old actor was courting a 22-year-old actress. "Darling," he proposed, "wouldn't you like to become my widow?"

A customer was trying to cut his steak. The steak was so tough, his knife broke in half.

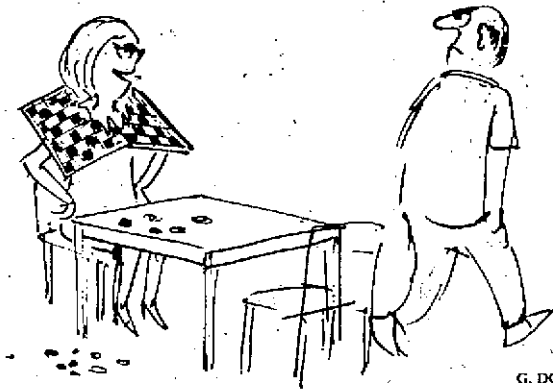

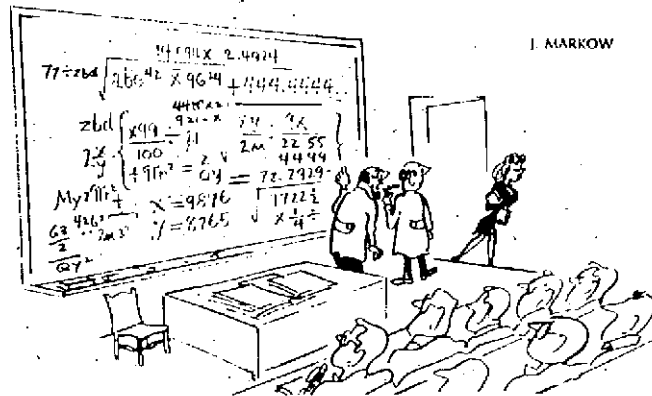

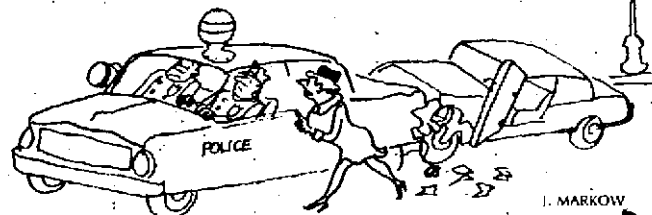

The irate customer called the manager over and held up both halves of his knife. "Look at that!" he shouted.

The manager sighed sadly. "You're absolutely right," he agreed. "It's so hard nowadays finding good old-fashioned steel."

Anecdote of the Week

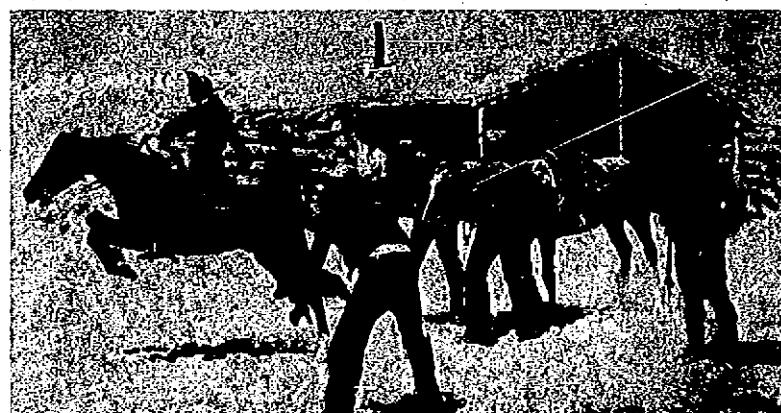

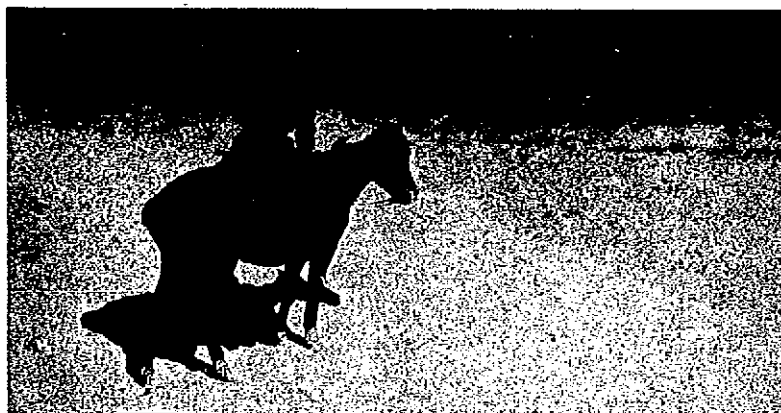

In Las Vegas, Nev., a minister refused to continue with a marriage ceremony, because when he asked the groom if he was prepared to accept his bride "until death do ye part," the groom replied, "You must be kidding."

The Remington Masterpieces

A special offer from Marlboro Country: set of four, $1.50; any two prints, $1.00

Frederic Remington, 1861-1909. The Master Painter of the American West.

Frederic Remington rode into Marlboro Country when just about the only smoke was the peace pipe. He captured this brawling, sprawling, vanishing land with paint and brush. And the history of the West is richer for it.

Marlboro is offering reproductions of the four Remington masterpieces shown above.

The complete set of four, $1.50; or any two for $1.00. Order must be accompanied with the bottom panel from a pack or box of Marlboro cigarettes.

The large (24 x 18 in.) reproductions are of fine quality, faithful in color, and made to be prized as personal possessions.

We'll also send you a short biography of Frederic Remington, and the story behind each masterpiece.

Enclosed is the bottom panel of a pack or box of Marlboro—and my check or money order for:

☐ $1.00 for two prints ☐ $1.50 for all four prints

I choose the following Remington Masterpieces (each picture has a number, please circle your choices). 1 2 3 4

Make check or money order payable to Remington Offer, and mail to: Remington Offer, P.O. Box 7000, Westbury, N.Y. 11590

TERRY DECIDES THE ONLY WAY OF EXPOSING THE LINK BETWEEN PALTRIE AND NIKKI IS TO GOAD THE LATTER INTO A MISTAKE.

HOPE WE'RE NOT BORING YOU WITH ALL THIS TALK ABOUT FLYING, BARON.

WHILE IN DOLORES DEEPSIX'S ROOM...

THE AMERICAN WOMAN BROUGHT IT IS. GIVE THREE BAGS, CARL. IS THIS THE ONE THE HERR BARON WISHED US TO USE?

JUST SO! ALONG THIS SEAM, IT WILL CONCEAL THE CUT NICELY.

THERE! NOT EVEN A BUMP! NOW! SEW UP THE OPENING WITH YOUR SMALLEST STITCHES.

THE HERR BARON DID NOT CHOOSE A VERY ORIGINAL METHOD, CARL.

BETTER THAN A TOO CLEVER SCHEME WHICH MIGHT MAKE THE LADY SUSPECT. HURRY, WOMAN!

DINNER IS SERVED, HERR BARON.

GO AHEAD, YOU TWO. I WILL JOIN YOU IN A MOMENT.

THE MATTER IS ATTENDED TO?

EXACTLY AS YOU ORDERED, HERR BARON.

GOOD! IT IS BETTER TO HAVE IT OUT OF THE WAY... THIS OLD FRIEND OF FRAU DEEPSIX DROPPING, LITERALLY, FROM THE SKY, WORRIES ME: SHE LIKES HIM TOO MUCH!

FUNNY! NIGHTS, I'M SCARED BY EVERY LITTLE SOUND! BUT, DAYS? NO-NO! WHO'S AFRAID O' OLD KNUKS OR ANYBODY?

THE SHORTEST MISTAKES ARE ALWAYS THE BEST! MOLERE. WELL, AB'S WAS CERTAINLY SHORT AND CAME OUT DANDY FOR ANNIE!

AFTER TH' WAY GRAMMA LOU RAN KNUKS AND HIS GANG OFF "THE EMPIRE"! MAYBE NOW TH' WHOLE THING'LL DRY UP AND BLOW AWAY!

Y!!

TRICKY, AIN'TCHA! BUT IT WON'T DO YUH NO GOOD!

COME ON, SANDY! THAT FAT SLOB CAN'T CATCH US!

WHY, Y'LITTLE !! I'LL SHOW YUH....!

YOU MUST BE AB KNUKS! SO YOUR DAD'S STARTED Y'LEARNIN' TH' BUTCHER BUSINESS ALREADY, EH?

SO WHAT IF HE HAS?

WOW! HE'S A LOT FASTER! FIGGERED! QUICK! IN HERE AND HIDE! IT'S OUR ONLY CHANCE!

SOME TIME LATER....

SH-H! DON'T HEAR A THING, NOW! DO YOU, SANDY? HE MUSTA GIVEN UP! WE'LL USE TH' BRIDGE GOIN' BACK, IN CASE HE'S LAVIN' FOR US BACK AT THAT LOG!

NINETY-SEVEN I BE, BUT I AIN'T NEVER SEEN NOTHIN' TO COMPARE! ATE BY A 'GATOR!

"ATE BY A 'GATOR"? SURE, GRAMP! I BET THAT WAS SOMETHIN'!

YOU DON'T B'LIEVE ME! NOBODY'LL B'LIEVE ME, JEST A OLD MAN DREAMIN'! BUT I SEEN IT! RIGHT YONDER, ATE BY A 'GATOR!

LOG'S BUSTED! AND BIG GEORGE! I B'LIEVE YOU, GRAMP!

YOU DO? YOU TELL 'EM I WASN'T DREAMIN'! I REALLY SEEN IT, ATE BY A 'GATOR!

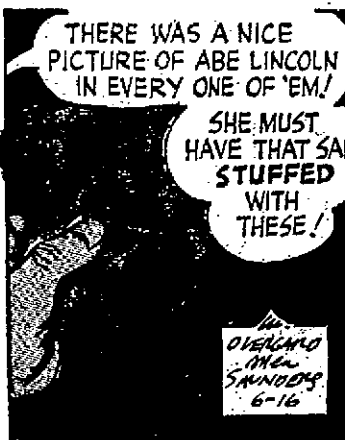

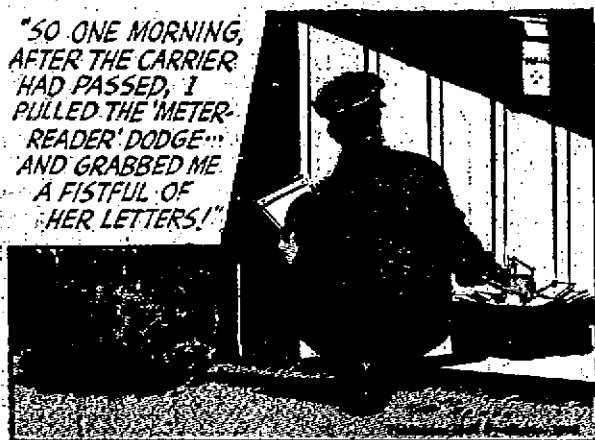

YEAH! I'LL TELL 'EM, GRAMP! ATE BY A 'GATOR! LEAPIN' LIZARDS!
